On one occasion while the English naturalist Gould was wandering along the banks of the Thames with a party of friends, a rare laugh was created at his expense. He had climbed a tree for the purpose of exploring the contents of a nest. On suddenly looking down at a hollow formed by two branches of the tree, and which at the time contained a pool of water, he exclaimed, "As I'm a living man, if there is not a large owl here in this hole, looking straight at me." The excitement was intense, but was instantly turned to a shout of merriment, when the naturalist on putting down his hand to seize the supposed owl, discovered that it was simply the reflection of his own image in the water.

I have found no [illegible] yet which requires more courage and in [illegible] to rise even a little, but decidedly above the par of the religious world around us. Surely the way in which we commonly go on is not the way of self-denial and sacrifice and cross-bearing which the New Testament talks of.—Dr. J. W. Alexander.

Cephrenes, the Second Pyramid.

Of the many wonderful discoveries made by the Belzoni perhaps none was more noteworthy than that of the entrance to Cephrenes, the second of the mighty pyramids of Ghizeh. Those huge structures have countless ages have bid defiance to decay, solitary and grand. Seated in his travels at the foot of this second mound, Belzoni mused as to the possibility of there being an entrance to it, [illegible] such a magnificent structure should have been reared without containing chambers and a mausoleum for its royal tenant. He knew that the first pyramid had been explored, but every historical account from Herodotus down and found, in its [illegible] the second pyramid [illegible] that the first pyramid was of too imposing a nature to be entered, and [illegible] the exterior, he at length discovered the [illegible] that there might be a door to the interior, and set [illegible] to work to discover it. A Gift for All.

In order to give all a chance to test it, and thus be convinced of its wonderful curative powers, Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, will be, for a limited time, given away at my store. This offer is not only liberal, but shows our confidence in the merits of this great remedy. All who suffer from Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, or any affection of Throat, Chest, or Lungs, are especially requested to call and get a Trial Bottle Free. Large Bottles $1. at

C. A. Wright & Co.

A little dot of a girl coaxed two nickels from her father on Thanksgiving day, saying she would use one for candy and the other she would give to the missionaries. Before executing her expressed intentions she lost one while at play, and running to her mamma, said: "Oh, mamma, I have lost my missionary nickel."

What you need is a medicine which is pure, efficient, reliable. Such is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It possesses peculiar curative powers.

The best on earth can truly be said of Grigg's Glycerine Salve, which is a sure, safe and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will positively cure piles, tetter and all skin eruption. Try this wonder healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25cts. Sold by Dr. George Ferguson.

FOR 25 CENTS get Kemp's Liver Pills for Torpid Liver, for Constipation, for the Complexion. Sold by Baker & Hall, druggist.

The life of a true Christian is like a beautiful river; it flows on in a steady, even course; the storms of life may ruffle its surface, but the deep undercurrent moves on undisturbed.

WE ARE POSITIVE that Kemp's Sarsaparilla will cleanse and purify the blood and tone up the systam. We have the confidence to guarintee it. Price $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Baker & Hall, druggist.

A boy came home from school much excited, and told his father that the teacher said all human beings were descended from apes, which made the old man so mad that he replied angily: "That may be the case with you, but it ain't with me, I can tell you that, now."

I TRIED Everything without relief, but Kemp's Pile Suppositories cured me. So writes A. G. Rose, New London, Conn. Price 50 cents per box. Sold by Baker & Hall, druggist.

THE HOMELIEST MAN in Tecumseh as well as the handsomest and others call at our store and get free, a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It cures acute and chronic coughs. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by Baker & Hall druggist.

There is absolute danger in coated breath srvorings. Trix are absolutely pure and perfectly perfumed.

All medical authorities agree that catarrh is no more or less than an inflammation of the lining membrane of the nasal air passages. Nasal catarrh and all catarrhal affections of the head are not diseases of the blood, and it is a serious mistake to treat them as such. No conscientious physician evattempts to do so. It is held by eminent medical men that sooner or later a specific will be found for every disease from which humanity suffers. The facts justify us in assuming that for catarrh at least a positive cure already exists in Ely's Cream Balm.

The highest elements of character, of power and dignity lie within reach of the lowest and the poorest.

Instead of being content to live so as to escape blame, the Christian is required to live so as to prove a means of blessing.

The government of a nation demands a certain harmony like music, and certain proportions like architecture.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, is a most wonderful food. It not only gives strength and increases the flesh but h alps the irritation of the throat and lungs. Palatable as milk and in all wasting diseases, both for adults and children, is a marvellous food and medicine.

"When worthy men fall out, only one of them may be faulty at first, but if strife continue long, commonly both become guilty."

"Doctor, I can neither lay nor set. What shall I do?" "I think you had better roost," was the reply. Now if the doctor had prescribed a bottle of Salvation Oil, for the poor fellow's rheumatism, it would have relieved his patient at once. 25 cents.

Give hens constant access to lime in some form. Hens must have the raw material in order to manufacture shells; they cannot make them out of nothing.

Guinea fowls will keep all bugs and insects of every discription off garden vines. They will not scratch like other fowls, or harm the most delicate plant.

WHAT TRUE MERIT WILL DO.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years, has astonished the world. It is with doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by Physicians, as it does not dry up a Cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the disease make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price, 75 cts., large bottles.

SAVING MOTHER.

The farmer sat in his easy chair
Between the fire and the lamplight's glare
His face was ruddy and fair and fair

Conned the lines of a picture book;
His wife, the pride of his home and heart
Baked the biscuit and made the tart
Laid the table and swept the hearth
Deftly, swiftly, silently;
Tired and weary, weak and faint
Underneath her frame a sunlight complaint,
Like many another household saint
In the patient ministry of love

At last, between the floods of shadow
That wrestled his face, the farmer spoke
"There's taxes to raise and interest to pay
Mortgages on mortgages, I reckon they
I have something put by. For folks must die
An' nobody's funeral bills an' graves stones to buy
Enough to swamp a man, pretty high
Besides, there's Edward an' Dick ah! I
To be provided for, when we go
So, if I were you, I'd set you what I do
I'd be savin' of wood as ever I could
Extra fires don't do any good
I'd be sparin' of sugar an' spices of all
And mind an' some sugar times to spare
I'd rather be sparin' of coffee an' tea
For sugar is high
An' all to buy.

And cider is good enough drink for me
I'd be kind o' careful about my clothes
And look out sharp how the money goes
Gewgaws is useless, nater knows;
Extra trimmin'
'S the bane of women.
I'd sell the best of my cheese an' honey,
An' eggs is as good, high 'bout, as th' money;
An' as to the carpet you wanted new—
I guess we can make the old one do;
And as for th' washer an' sewin' machine,
Them smooth-tongued agents so pesky mean
You'd better get rid of 'em slick an' clean.
What do they know 'bout women's work,
Do they calkilate women was made to shirk?

Dick and Edward and little Joe
Sat in the corner in a row.
They saw the patient mother go,
On ceaseless errands to and fro;
They saw that her form was bent and thin
Her temples gray, her cheeks sunk in;
They saw the quiver of lip and chin
And then, with a wrath he could not smother,
Outspoke the youngest, fairest brother;
"You talk of savin' wood an' ile
An' tea an' sugar all the while,
But you NEVER talk of savin' MOTHER!"

How they Meet and Part.

A gentleman lately took down verbatim the conversation of two fashionable ladies during a morning call—viz: "How do you do, dear?" "Pretty well, thank you." (They kiss.) "How have you been this age?" "Pretty well. How have you been?" "Very well, thank you." "Pleasant to-day." "Yes, very bright, but had a shower yesterday." "All your family quite well?" "Quite well, thanks. How is yours?" "Oh, very well, thank you." "Have you seen Mary E. lately?" "No, but I have seen Susan C." "You don't say so! Is she quite well?" "Yes, very well, I believe." (Rising. "Must you go?" "Yes, indeed; I have seven calls to make." "Do call again soon." "Thank you; but you don't come near me once in an age." "Oh, you shouldn't say so, dear; I'm sure I'm very good." "Good bye." "Good bye, dear."—Exchange.

"Yes! and after writing that the gentleman discovered the strain upon his mental faculties had been so severe, he went out to "brace up." Just as he reached his destination, met a friend from out of town, when the following conversation was overheard and taken down by the writer, as an example for women, of men's "wit and wisdom." "Hello! old fellow, how are you?" They shake.) "First rate, how are you?" "Tip-top!" "When dy'e get in?" "Just now." "Have something?" (significantly.) "Well—yes, don't care-fi do." They step into a saloon, after cautiously looking around to make sure no outsiders are about, to see they are breaking their pledge—pause—they emerge, inaocently wiping their mouths, before putting into them ... (drinks, of course, of course, pronounce) resume:) "How's yer folks?" "All well; how's yours?" "All flourishing now; youngest boy had diphtheria, but all right now." "Crops good up your way?" "Well, yes, pretty fair." "How do politics look?" "Bad—very bad—all democrats up our way; big democratic majority. (Takes out his watch.) "Thunder! ten minutes to 12, must be off—got to see a man at 12." "Can't you come up to the house and take dinner?" "No, guess not to-day—got several pressing business engagements. Good-bye." "Good-bye." They again wring hands, and then rush away from each other as if fearing they might have to stand another treat.

POSTAGE STAMPS.—There are about six thousand different descriptions of postage stamps in existence. The museum of the Berlin Post Office alone contains between four and five thousand specimens, of which half are from Europe, and the remainder divided between Asia, Africa, America and Australia. What country carries off the palm for absurdity and grotesqueness of artistic design and inferiority of execution, we are not told, but if the collection is faithfully representative the variety of ugliness must be considerable. Some of the stamps, it appears, bear coats of arms, and other emblems, impartially borrowed from the heavens above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth—stars, eagles, lions, horses, serpents, railway trains, dolphins and other "fearful wildfowl." There are, moreover, the effigies of five emperors, eighteen kings, three queens, one grand duke, several inferior titled rulers, and many presidents. In so many countries and nationalities some really attractive specimens must have been elaborated.

Canning Fruit.

In canning fruit it is wise to use a good deal of sugar. Plain canned fruit is apt to turn, and does not retain its flavor as when made a little rich. If our housekeepers would take as much pains in making preserves as the French do, they would find themselves amply rewarded when, in the winter, they turn out the beautiful clear fruit, always in perfect shape. To preserve fruit in the French method it is necessary to make a clear syrup first, which can be done by melting two pounds of the best sugar with a pint of water, using a white porcelain kettle; add the slightly beaten white of one egg before the syrup becomes hot; let it boil, and skim it until the scum ceases to appear. Then put in carefully selected fruit, a few at a time, watching carefully that they do not break, and removing one at a time as soon as they become soft. When these are put in glass jars and the syrup poured over them, the result will make glad the most stoical cook.

It is proposed to use stiff canvas stretchers in place of the ordinary berths in sleeping cars. They are comfortable, and can be so cleverly stowed away during the day that one would think himself in an ordinary drawing-room car. The canal-packet men knew this fifty years ago.

Read What Mr. Proctor says:

Gentlemen:—Gooch's Mexican Syrup came to hand, and I took it out of the express office after ... I had a bad cough and could not sleep half the night. I had a burning under the left breast so I could not lie on it. I could not cough up anything but yellow mucus. It was tough. I commenced to use your Gooch's Mexican Syrup according to directions, and it cured my cough entirely. I have been sick for five years, three years confined to my room, but am now able to go around and attend to my business. Yours, etc.,

JOHN W. PROCTOR,
Delaware, Ind.

We feel that we can not speak too highly of Gooch's Mexican Syrup as a cough remedy. It is a most excellent medicine, being pleasant to take, and all the nurses agree that it is just the thing for the children.

M. V. Crouse, Sup't.

An English writer says that the middle class Englishman, as a rule, does not buy books, except a few classics and professional treatises, but waits for his chance at the book club or circulating library. There are instances where authors are asked to lend their own copies by men of ten times their income. Wine and chins may be bought, but books must be hired for, says the writer, the English are educated to the point of reading, but not to paying for books.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a common ... tion to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vigor in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal disposer of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's Knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions to cure, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," which each bottle contains. Sent free if inclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by druggists generally.

If your druggist does not have it, do not let him dissuade you from trying any other preparation, but if he will not supply it for you it will be cheaper than for you to order direct from us, and less trouble.

Short classes this week, for the winter term. The spring term begins after one week's vacation.

Geo. B. Fiske addressed a crowded house, at Town Hall, last Thursday evening last, on the amendment question.

While David Haggart was driving through the street last Thursday, Leon Clark caught on the rear of the buggy, but lost his grip and was precipited to the frozen ground receiving uncomfortable, but we are glad to note, not serious bruises.

Eugene Peirce, son of Rev. E. P. Pierce, of Albion College, is spending his vacation at home with his parents.

Josiah Howell, who has been quite low for some weeks, we are sorry to learn, is still in a critical condition.

A boy at Labe Wards, and girl at Ab. Wards are among the late arrivals, and the various wards of our city are assuming a healthy and prosperous condition. Ask Will Anspoker how it is, and he will tell you of another little will at his home.

The music of the engine at the Clinton foundry greeted the ear of the passerby, last Saturday, and announced the commencement of the new plows, hoists, etc., that Dave and Frank are to furnish for their numerous patrons.

We hear it reported that a [illegible] building for corporation purposes, is to take the place of the buildings lately removed from the ribbon corner.

Mat D. Blosser was down to look over the Local interest at "the four corners," Monday. That's right—please observe the "corner," on business we have attained, and explain the matter to your Bridgewater patrons in the columns of Enterprise.

F. M. McClure, having moved his clothing emporium to Chicago street, has taken advantage of the opportunity to improve the appearance of the same with a new coat of paint. Chas. House is doing the decorating, and will spare no pains in completing the "daisy" horse-raiment repository of this section.

Bert Tate was here over Sunday and assisted Will Rogers in removing goods and implements to the farm, preparatory to the spring campaign, upon the evacuated positions of Walbron and Porter.

We understand Dow Draper, successor to Pop Smith, in the livery business, has moved into W. V. Fisk's house on Chicago street.

Rev. D. B. Sinex addressed the "anti" meeting at town hall, Tuesday evening and Rev. J. E. Sawyer, of Ypsilanti, is to address the people this evening at the same place, and thus the good work goes forward.

Rev. W. H. Balmer addressed the union meeting at the Congregational Church, last Sunday evening, upon the amendment.

John J. Adam was the guest of his brother L. Adam last Monday, and shook hands with friends made long ago. He is a pioneer in Lenawee and once owned the farm now owned by Peter Kishpaugh, west of this village.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

LIQUOR LAW CATECHISM.

Q.—How much tax did the honor dealers of Lenawee county pay in 1886? Ans.—$18,980.

Q.—Where was it paid? Ans.—In the city of Adrian, and the villages of Blissfield, Clayton, Clinton, Hudson, Tecumseh, Morenci and townships of Riga and Woodstock.

Q.—How much did each receive? Ans.—Adrian city, $9,630; the village of Blissfield, $800; Clayton, $575; Clinton, $1,700; Hudson, $1,800; Tecumseh, $1,575; Morenci, $750; Riga, $600; Woodstock, $550.

Q.—Where does the tax go which is paid in cities and incorporated villages? Ans.—Into the treasuries of the same.

Q.—And what of the townships which have saloons? Ans.—Into the contingent fund of such townships.

Q.—Does any of the liquor tax go to defray any county expense? Ans.—None whatever.

Q.—How many towns in the county do not receive any revenue from the liquor traffic? Ans.—Twenty.

Q.—What proportion of the state and county tax, raised in Lenawee county, do these twenty township pay? Ans.—About five-sevenths.

Q.—Who pays the criminal expenses occasioned by the liquor traffic? Ans.—The county.

Q.—How much was the pauper bill of the county in 1886? Ans.—The board of supervisors appropriated $14,000 for this purpose.

Q.—Where was this money raised? Ans.—On all the property in the county regardless as to whether they receive any revenue from the liquor traffic or not.

Q.—Is this just? Ans.—It is very unjust.

Q.—Is it true that localities which receive all of this $18,980 of liquor tax pay but two-sevenths of the expense occasioned by the traffic in the way of criminal and pauper expenses? Ans.—It is true.

Q.—Is not a law that is so partial and unjust in its operation a swindle and a fraud? Ans.—It is the biggest fraud that was ever perpetrated on the taxpayers of the county or the state.

Q.—How shall we get rid of such a law? Ans.—By carrying the prohibitory amendment which will not only do away with this inequality of taxation, but will tend largely to remove the cause of burdensome taxes.

Q.—What class of citizens suffer the most from this unequal system of revenue and taxation? Ans.—The farmers, because their property consists almost all in real estate which cannot escape the tax gatherer like some other lines of business, consequently they have to bear the burden of the largest share of the expense caused by the saloons, while they receive none of the revenue arising from them.

Q.—What then is their duty, as seen from a pecuniary standpoint in regard to this law? Ans.—To assist in wiping it from our statute books in the manner indicated above.

The Proposed Amendment

ARTICLE IV.

SECT. 16. The manufacture, gift or sale of spirituous, malt or vinous liquors in this state, except for medical, mechanical, chemical or scientific purposes, is prohibited, and no property rights in such spirituous, malt or vinous liquors shall be deemed to exist, except the right to manufacture or sell for medical, mechanical, chemical or scientific purposes, under such restrictions and regulations as may be provided by law. The legislature shall enact laws with suitable penalties for the suppression of the manufacture, sale and keeping for sale or gift of intoxicating liquors, except as herein specified.

FORM OF BALLOT.

"Amendment" to the constitution relative to the prohibition of the manufacture, gift or sale of spirituous, malt or vinous liquors and the right of property therein—Yes, or

"Amendment" to the constitution relative to the prohibition of the manufacture, gift or sale of spirituous, malt or vinous liquors and the right of property therein—No."

PONTIAC, MICH., March 16th, 1887.

On the 10th of December, 1886, I came from Orion to Pontiac, to visit my parents, and was taken suddenly ill. Dr. Galbreith of this place was called, and after making a careful examination of my case, desired council, and named as councillor Dr. McGraw, of Detroit. They met in council December 15th, made a careful examination, and pronounced my disease as Cancer of the Liver, and stated that there was no hope for me as it was impossible to cure me. The pain was very severe and Dr. Galbreith continued his visits, administering quieting powders. A swelling or bunch had formed under my right ribs almost as large as my head, and I had given up all hopes of recovery. But having heard of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, I sent, February last, 1887, and bought a bottle of the syrup from Mr. Peter Schmitz, a druggist of this place, and took it as directed. About March 1st something broke and the swelling commenced to go down, until it has almost disappeared. Up to this date I have taken two and one-half bottles of the syrup, and have so far recovered as to be able to visit my neighbor and am truly rejoicing that I am fast being relieved from such terrible pain; and desiring to acknowledge the benefit I have received in using your syrup, I send you this statement, hoping you will use it so that others who are afflicted may be benefited from pain as I have been.

Very truly,
CHARLES A. SPIER,
Of Orion, Michigan.

Pontiac, Mich., March 16th, 1887.

This is to certify that Mr. Charles A. Spier, my son, has made a correct statement of his case, as I have watched by his bedside during his entire illness.

JOHN SPIER.

The undersigned certify that they are well acquainted with Charles A. Spier, whose signature appears above, and we have no hesitation in saying that any statement made by him can be relied upon as being true in every particular.

Drunkenness or Liquor Habit can be cured by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or ale without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an habitual wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and today believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effects result from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and for particulars. Address in confidence GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR HIM.

Mr. Asa B. Rowley, Druggist, was induced to try some of the Papillon Catarrh Cure by his customers, after several physicians predicted he would soon have consumption from an aggravated case of Catarrh. He says: "The result was unprecedented. I commenced to get well after the first applications, and in a few, after a few weeks, entirely cured." Papillon extract of flax Catarrh Cure will do all that is claimed for it. Large bottles $1.00.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Orrin L. Abbott and Arsena, his wife, to Louisa J. Choate and M., whereby the power of sale therein has become operative. Said mortgage bearing date April 8th, 1881, duly recorded in the Register of Deeds in and for the county, and state of Michigan, in Liber [illegible] Pages on page 768. There is now due on said mortgage the sum of Twenty-two and 50-100 dollars, and no suit or proceeding have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the lands mortgaged by said mortgage are: That certain piece or parcel of land situated in the township of Rollin in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, known and described as follows, to wit: The southeast quarter of section [illegible] six (6) south, of range one (1) east, forty (40) acres more or less, will on the [illegible] day of June, A.D., 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the east front door of the Court House in the city of Adrian in said county and state, to satisfy the said amount so as aforesaid then to be paid, and all the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including the attorney fees as provided by law and by statute.

Dated March 31st, 1887.

LOUISA J. CHOATE,
(Mortgagee.)
MARY E. [illegible]
(Assignee of Mortgagee.)

C. R. MILLER,
Attorney for Mortgagee.

ESTATE OF LOUISA [illegible]

STATE OF MICHIGAN, [illegible]

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the [illegible] day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

Present, Norman [illegible], Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Louisa [illegible], deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Lucius Lilley, praying for the probate of a certain instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to your petitioner, the executor in said will named, or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that Monday, the [illegible] day of April next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, when the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted; and it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Orrin L. Abbott and Arsenia his wife, to Louisa J. Choate and Mary E. Choate, dated March 1st, 1884, whereby the power of sale therein has become operative. Said mortgage was recorded April 8th, 1884, duly recorded in the Register of Deeds in and for Lenawee county, and state of Michigan, in Liber 72 of mortgages on page 768. There is now due on said mortgage the sum of Twenty-two and 50-100 dollars, and no suit or proceeding has been instituted to collect the debt secured thereby, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the said mortgage debt, viz: That certain piece or parcel of land situated in the township of Rollin in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known as and being the south half of the south-east quarter of section six (6) in town six south, of range one east (40 acres more or less), will be sold at public vendue, on the 6th day of June, A.D., 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the east front door of the Court House in the city of Adrian in said county and state, to satisfy the said amount due on said mortgage debt, with interest thereon then accrued, and all costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee as provided by law and the statute in such case made and provided.

Dated March 1st, 1887.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

The election returns have been slow about coming in, but the latest figures on the amendment indicate [illegible]. To be sure the "back towns" are not all in, and there are many estimates in the published tables but it is not probable that the "back towns" will wipe out the present adverse majority. Yesterday's Evening News places the majority against it at 3000 in round numbers [illegible] an adverse majority of 3,104, and this morning's Tribune places the "No" majority at 4,891.

There is a bare possibility that the official returns will show a small margin in its favor, but the probabilities are all against it. The returns from small precincts yet to come in are not likely to make much change in the present figures. We expect to see the majority settle down in the neighborhood of 3000 against it.

In the townships of Northern Lenawee the Local elections have gone about as usual. The Democrats sustained a defeat in Tecumseh which is due to local causes. The full figures are given elsewhere.

In Cambridge the Democrats elect their entire ticket, except school inspector, with J. O. Maxwell for supervisor.

Ulinton elects the whole Democratic ticket except treasurer and one constable, R. B. Gillespie for supervisor.

Raisin re-elects Horace Holdredge, Democrat supervisor, and the balance of the ticket is divided.

Franklin elects the entire Republican ticket, D. W. Love for supervisor.

Macon the same, except town clerk, whom the Democrats elect, with J. F. Gilmore for supervisor.

Ridgeway chooses C. L. Lowe, Democrat, for supervisor, and elects the whole Democratic ticket except Justice and School Inspector.

THE AMENDMENT VOTE.

Below are the majorities for and against the Prohibitory amendment in all the voting precincts of Lenawee County. The official figures may change the result slightly. The majority in favor of it, in round numbers, is 1000. Note the big "yes" majorities in the towns where the HERALD circulates.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

A cold wave with plenty of wind and a little snow prevailed supreme, during Monday.

House cleaning and moving is the general occupation of the citizens for the next few weeks.

Ed Mighatt moved to Toledo, Monday, he having got the position of conductor on the street railway.

Bert Nichols' engine arrived from Battle Creek last week where it has been repaired since passing through the fire. It looks as well as a new one, and works as well as ever.

Nell Rappleye has been quite poorly for a few days past.

Monas Kelley and family were called to Holloway very suddenly Monday. His sister, Mrs. Wm. Cox, having had a slight apoplectic stroke.

Mrs. Mary Arner and son Sammy, have returned from their visit to Howell and rented the Sutton property.

The ladies of the Union enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. Beeklers, in Britton, Wednesday of last week. They assisted in organizing a Union there.

During the Bain meeting Saturday night, some one took Mary Ann Barrett's horse and buggy from her barn and drove it nearly all night, returning it in the morning early. She says she desires the pleasure of letting her horse and buggy hereafter, as she might want to use it before the unknown occupants could return it.

One of our attentive young men on North street, mailed two letters, one to his brother and the other to—well, it was not his sister, but some one else, and he got things mixed up a little. It will come out all right in the spring, for the amendment was carried.

Nettie Pocklington of Dundee, spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. R. H. Nelson, the fore part of the week.

A. B. Smith, editor of the Milan Leader, and wife, spent Sunday as the guests of their aunt, Mrs. John Arner.

Genie and Aggie Raymond left for their home in Dixon, Ill., Friday of last week.

There was a very large attendance at the W. C. T. U., held at the house of Mrs. W. P. Cadmus, on Tuesday evening, and after the exercises were over, the hostess served warm sugar and biscuit and all enjoyed a fine time.

Thede Harris and Misses May Bodine and Cora Jones, were the guests of Lou Arner, Monday evening.

Luella Wilson returned to her home at Morenci, Saturday, after a few day's visit with friends.

Ada Loree went to Detroit Saturday to spend some time with her sister, M. [illegible] ucking.

Prof. Martin Palmer returned to Flat Rock, Saturday, to resume his school duties there, for the spring term.

Hattie Platt returned Sunday, from a four week's stay with relatives at Deerfield.

F. J. Temple is in Adrian this week, as a juror.

Mrs. Sapp and son John, returned to Ann Arbor, Saturday.

Prof. and Mrs. J. D. Huston, returned from Hillsdale Saturday, and begun the spring term of school Monday.

Peter Swick has moved on his farm near Milan.

On Saturday night the church was packed with a very interesting and attentive audience, to hear Hon. G. W. Bain, of Kentucky, speak on the amendment. The best of order prevailed for nearly two hours. The friends of Mr. Bain would give him a hearty welcome at any time in the future, and listen to his grand lecture of a trip to the Golden Gate.

Election passed off very quietly, the best of harmony prevailing. The Democrats elected the entire ticket with the exception of Justice and School Inspector. The majority ranging from 10 to 60. The amendment received 235 for, and 58 against it, which shows up a good principle standing for the township.

Last week our citizens were somewhat surprised to learn that one of their fair damsels had quietly stole a march on them, and nearly a year has passed since W. E. Barrett and Miss Allie Arner were bound in the embrace of matrimony, and so quietly and successfully had they managed the affair that not even the parents of the clandestined pair knew until recently, of their marriage. We extend our congratulations, if it is not too late, and Willis says it is not. Never mind Will, she was your cousin just the same, if you didn't know it.

Wm. Barrett Sen., who has been carrying a life policy of $3,000 on Wm. Beach's life, for the past four years, in the Fort Wayne, Ind., graveyard insurance company, has come to a settlement with them, and received $421,00. He has payed $639,90 during the four years, or at the rate of $13,3 per month. Mr. Barrett is satisfied that it was the worst fake he ever met with in existence, and advises everybody to have nothing to do with the company whatever.

OGDEN STATION.

House cleaning is all the rage.

Ira Holloway claims to have moved [illegible] meeting. What does that mean, Ira?

A Miss Cook, from the Buckeye State, has been trying to start a music class here. Her terms are very reasonable, only 75c per lesson, at your own residence.

Peddlers and agents are very numerous, showing that the roads must be very much improved.

Look out for orange blossoms in the near future.

Miss Alma Hodges, who has been spending several weeks with her aged parents at Blissfield, was at home Saturday and Sunday.

The prospect for a large yield of wheat is rather slim in this section.

The new "cheese factory" is nearly completed and will soon be in operation—W. B. Myers, proprietor.

Some talk of Met Higby shutting down the saw mill for an indefinite period—hope not.

Our printer says business is lively now—Glad of it, Geo.

R. H. Cowell, has about all the blacksmithing he can do now.

J. D. Templeton spent last Friday afternoon with the printer.

Miss May Kellogg of Madison was the guest of Miss Julia Freeman last Thursday.

C. A. French says he would like to go to South Ida C.

ONSTED ODDS.

The Onsted school commences next week Monday.

H. H. Howes is moving to Fairfield. Good luck to you, Henry.

Bliss Lee and mother started for their northern home, Monday.

Four hundred dozen eggs is about what Curtis & Kane counted in last week.

Fred Smith will spend the summer in Fairfield, working for Henry Howes.

Report says that our saloon has closed for good. This news seems almost too good to be true, but we have it on good authority. The vote on the amendment here yesterday shows what a large majority of our citizens think about the saloon business.

FARMER'S SOCIAL CLUB.

Friday evening, April 1st., the Farmers' Social Club held its closing evening meeting, for the season, at A. D. Hall's. Their spacious house was well filled with people, and the large barn proved inadequate to accommodate the horses as many were hitched to posts and fences.

The program as arranged was as well carried out as it was possible to be in such crowded rooms. The farce was a success. Will Fisher and Minnie Rector, as the leading characters, sustained their parts admirably, as did also the young ladies. This is the first time the young people have undertaken anything in this line as a feature of the club programs, but the praise they received shows that their efforts were appreciated, and we hope we may again be similarly entertained. After the program hot coffee and a pic nic supper were served. The coffee was furnished by Mrs. Hall, and was excellent. If Mr. Hall always has as good for his breakfast, it is no wonder he carries such a smiling face. It is useless to speak of the supper, for every one knows that Farmer's wives and daughters never carry any thing except the best to a picnic.

After supper the time was spent in pleasant sociability until the lateness of the hour reminded us that even pleasant gatherings ought not to last too long. All departed for their homes feeling that the evening was a pleasant ending for a pleasant and profitable series of meetings.

The club adjourned to meet Friday Afternoon, April 29th, at I. H. Schieder's. Program.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson for April 10.

JOSEPH EXALTED.—GEN. XLI. 38-48.

NOTES.—"Pharaoh."—An Egyptian king. "A king who was supposed to be a god." "In whom the spirit of God is."—Pharaoh, of course, had no reference to the Holy Spirit.—"Thou shalt be over my house."—The man who was over his house was over his kingdom. Pharaoh's house was his chief men, his cabinet, so to speak. Joseph here became Prime Minister, or Grand Vizier.—"And Pharaoh said to Joseph."—This formula is repeated three times, with declarations of Joseph's greatness. Most scholars believe this comes from the welding together of different naratives by the compiler of the book of Genesis, although it may be taken as merely the evidence of emphasis given by repeating over and over the dignity that Joseph was to receive.—"Pharaoh took off his signet ring."—The seal is what gives official authority to a royal document. The man who carries the signet of the king, or gives the king's commands, and only the most trusted counselor would have this ring, just as only a business man's most trusted employe has his power of attorney. The ring had on it probably the cartouche, or hieroglyphic name of the king.—"Vestures of fine linen."—This fine linen was made of very gauzy texture.—"A gold chain."—Such gold chains have been found in the tombs.—"They cried before him, Bow the knee."—Very much as Mordecai was honored by Ahasuerus.—"Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphenath-Paneah," or, supporter of life. It is a good Egyptian form.—"Gave him to wife Asenath."—Another Egyptian name meaning Worshiper of the goddess Neith.—"Daughter of Potiphera, priest of On."—This name means Servant of the Son-god Ra. On was a great city devoted to the worship of Ra, or the Sun. The priest of that temple would be a powerful prince and this alliance was most honorable.—"Joseph was thirty years old."—Just the age of our Lord when he began his ministry.—"Joseph went out over the land of Egypt." The same statement is repeated in vss. 45 and 46.—"The earth brought forth by handfuls." The reaper grasped the wheat in one hand and cut it down with his sickle; but the allusion is probably here not to his holding the stalks to cut it but to the handfuls in the ears.—"Laid up the food."—In vast granaries of solid brick, where it would not be exposed, and where the dry climate would preserve it for years uninjured. Yet wheat cannot thus be preserved indefinitely. The stories about wheat found with mummies growing are all false.

INSTRUCTION.—Pharaoh was right in supposing wisdom to come through the presence of the Spirit of God. The fear of God is wisdom. The best practical wisdom is to obey God. Sin is essential folly. Men who do right get along best in the world, because to be right is to be prudent as well.

We can hardly say a better thing of a man than that he is reliable. Business men can speak no higher praise of a man than that he is one you can "tie to." But that is a purely moral or religious quality. Utter honesty, truthfulness is a virtue to be cultivated as of first quality.

Some children are better than their parents. Jacob was as cheming, worldly-wise man; and misery came of it. We hear nothing but generosity, purity, nobleness, honor of him, his son. If a child's parents are not all that he might wish, that is no reason why he should not try to get a reputation like Joseph's.

Adversity is the best school in which to learn how to endure honor. Is it not an honor. Is is not a misfortune to have had to stand storms and trials. In that way a man or woman gets strength of character. He is more mellow and noble in prosperity for knowing what sorrow is and for sympathizing with misfortune.

We see in this story the dealing of Providence. Little or nothing is said about God, but we know God is in it all. God did not come in vision to Joseph, but he conducted Joseph, so that even the heathen Pharaoh recognized the wisdom and providence that had guided Joseph. God's providence is in good part in the regular working out of his laws. One who obeys them is in the line of God's good providence. One who disobeys them has no right to expect any favorable providences. God's providences go against him not for him.

Joseph did his work well in prison. So he fitted himself to be called to the premiership of Egypt. Do your humble work, well, and you can get the chance to do higher work. Slight or dispise your lower work, and you will never get higher work to do.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

LIQUOR LAW CATECHISM.

Q.—How much tax did the liquor dealers of Lenawee county pay in 1886? Ans.—$18,280.

Q.—Where was it paid? Ans.—In the city of Adrian, and the villages of Blissfield, Clayton, Clinton, Hudson, Deerfield, Morenci and townships of Rifle and Woodstock.

Q.—How much did each receive? Ans.—Adrian city, $9,930; the village of Blissfield, $900; Clayton, $675; Clinton, $1,500; Hudson, $1,800; Tecumseh, $1,75; Morenci, $750; Riga, $600; Woodstock, $550.

Q.—Where does the tax go which is paid in cities and incorporated villages? Ans.—Into the treasuries of the same.

Q.—And what of the townships which have saloons? Ans.—Into the contingent fund of such townships.

Q.—Does any of the liquor tax go to defray any county expense? Ans.—None whatever.

Q.—How many towns in the county do not receive any revenue from the liquor traffic? Ans.—Twenty.

Q.—What proportion of the state and county tax, raised in Lenawee county, do these twenty township pay? Ans.—About five-sevenths.

Q.—Who pays the criminal expenses occasioned by the liquor traffic? Ans.—The county.

Q.—How much was the pauper bill of the county in 1886? Ans.—The board of supervisors appropriated $14,000 for this purpose.

Q.—Where was this money raised? Ans.—On all the property in the county regardless as to whether they receive any revenue from the liquor traffic or not.

Q.—Is it true that localities which receive all of the $18,280 of liquor tax pay but two-sevenths of the expense occasioned by the traffic in the way of criminal and pauper expenses? Ans.—It is true.

Q.—Is not a law that is so partial and unjust in its operation a swindle and a fraud? Ans.—It is the biggest fraud that was ever perpetrated on the taxpayers of the county or the state.

Q.—How shall we get rid of such a law? Ans.—By carrying the prohibitory amendment which will not only do away with this inequality of taxation, but will tend largely to remove the cause of burdensome taxes.

Q.—What class of citizens suffer the most from this unequal system of revenue and taxation? Ans.—The farmers, because their property consists almost all in real estate which cannot escape the tax gatherer like some other lines of business, consequently they have to bear the burden of the largest share of the expense caused by the saloons, while they receive none of the revenue arising from them.

Q.—What then is their duty, as seen from a pecuniary standpoint in regard to this law? Ans.—To assist in wiping it from our statute books in the manner indicated above.

The Proposed Amendment

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 16. The manufacture, gift or sale of spirituous, malt or vinous liquors in this state, except for medical, mechanical, chemical or scientific purposes, is prohibited, and no property rights in such spirituous, malt or vinous liquors shall be deemed to exist except the right to manufacture or sell for medical, mechanical, chemical or scientific purposes, under such regulations and restrictions as may be provided by law. The legislature shall enact laws, with suitable penalties, for the suppression of the manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of such intoxicating liquors, except as herein specified.

FORM OF BALLOT.

PONTIAC, Mich., March 16th, 1887.

On the 5th of December, 1886, I came from Orion to Pontiac, to visit my parents, and was taken suddenly ill. Dr. Galbreith of this place was called, and after making a careful examination of my case, desired council, and named as councillor Dr. McGraw, of Detroit. They met in council December 15th, made a careful examination, and pronounced my disease as Cancer of the Liver, and stated that there was no hope for me as it was impossible to cure me. The pain was very severe and Dr. Galbreith continued his visits, administering quieting powders. A swelling or bunch had formed under my right ribs almost as large as my head, and I had given up all hopes of recovery. But having heard of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, I sent, February last, 1887, and bought a bottle of the syrup from Mr. Peter Schmitz, a druggist of this place, and took it as directed. About March 1st something broke and the swelling commenced to go down, until it has almost disappeared. Up to this date I have taken two and one-half bottles of the syrup, and have so far recovered as to be able to visit my neighbor, and am truly rejoicing that I am fast being relieved from such terrible pain, and do hereby acknowledge the benefit I have received in using your syrup. I send you this statement, hoping you will use it so that others who are afflicted may be benefited from pain as I have been.

Very truly,
CHARLES A. SPIER.
Of Orion, Michigan.

Pontiac, Mich., March 16th, 1887.

This is to certify that Mr. Charles A. Spier, my son, has made a correct statement of his case, as I have watched by his bedside during his entire illness.

Drunkenness or Liquor Habits can be cured by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and believe to this hour they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effects result from its administration. Cure guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars. Address, in confidence, GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR HIM.

Mr. Asa B. Rowley, Druggist, was induced to try some of the Papillon Catarrh Cure by his customers, after several physicians predicted he would soon have consumption from an aggravated case of Catarrh. He says: "The result was unprecedented. I commenced to get well after the first application, and am now, after a few weeks, entirely cured." Papillon extract of flax Catarrh Cure will do all that is claimed for it. Large bottles $1.00.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

The election returns have been now about coming in, but the latest figures on the amendment indicate it defeated. The big "dry" towns are not all in, and there are many estimates in the published tables but it is not probable that these back towns will wipe out the present adverse majority. Yesterday's Evening News places the majority against it at 600 in round numbers. To-day's Free Press claims an adverse majority of [illegible], and this morning's Tribune places the "No" majority at 4,891.

There is a bare possibility that the official returns will show a small margin in its favor, but the probabilities are all against it. The returns from small precincts yet to come in are not likely to make much change in the present figures. We expect to see the majority settle down in the neighborhood of 3000 against it.

In the townships of Northern Lenawee the Local elections have gone about as usual. The Democrats sustained a defeat in Tecumseh which is due to local causes. The full figures are given elsewhere.

In Cambridge the Democrats elect their entire ticket, except school inspector, with J. O. Maxwell for supervisor.

Clinton elects the whole Democratic ticket except treasurer and one constable. R. R. Gillespie for supervisor.

Raisin re-elects Horace Holdredge, Democrat supervisor, and the balance of the ticket is divided.

Franklin elects the entire Republican ticket. D. W. Love for supervisor.

Macon the same, except town clerk, whom the Democrats elect, with J. F. Gilmore for supervisor.

Ridgeway chooses C. L. Lowe, Democrat, for supervisor, and elects the whole Democratic ticket except Justice and School Inspector.

SECOND OLD BUM—"You bet I did, but I'm afeer'd the tarnel thing's carried arter all. I jes' the old Harry how these ministers is upsettin' business."

THE AMENDMENT VOTE.

Below are the majorities for and against the Prohibitory amendment in all the voting precincts of Lenawee County. The official figures may change the result slightly. The majority in favor of it, in round numbers, is 1000. Note the big "yes" majorities in the towns where the HERALD circulates.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

A cool wave with plenty of wind and a little snow prevailed supreme, in this vicinity, Monday.

House cleaning and moving is the [illegible] the next few weeks.

Ed. Mallett moved to Toledo, Monday, he having got the position of contractor on the street railway.

Bert Nichols' engine arrived from Battle Creek, last week, where it has [illegible] the hose. It looks as well, as a new one, and works as well as ever.

Nell Rappleye has been quite poorly for a few days past.

Monas Kelley and family were called to Holloway very suddenly Monday. His sister Mrs. Wm. Cox, having had a slight apoplectic stroke.

Mrs. Mary Apner and son Sammy, have returned from their visit to Howell and rented the Sutton property.

The ladies of the Union enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. Becklers, in Britton, Wednesday of last week. They assisted in organizing a Union there.

During the Bain meeting Saturday night, some one took Mary Ann Barrett's horse and buggy from her barn and drove it nearly all night, returning it in the morning early. She says she desires the pleasure of letting her horse and buggy hereafter, as she might want to use it before the unknown occupants could return it.

One of our attentive young men on North street, mailed two letters, one to his brother and the other to—well, it was not his sister, but some one else, and he got things mixed up a little. It will come out all right in the spring, for the amendment was carried.

Nettie Pocklington of Dundee, spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. R. H. Nelson, the fore part of the week.

A. B. Smith, editor of the Milan Leader, and wife, spent Sunday as the guests of their aunt, Mrs. John Arner.

Genie and Aggie Raymond left for their home in Dixon, Ill., Friday of last week.

There was a very large attendance at the W. C. T. U., held at the home of Mrs. W. P. Cadmus, on Tuesday evening, and after the exercises were over, the hostess served warm sugar and biscuit and all enjoyed a fine time.

Thede Harris and Misses May Bodine and Cora Jones, were the guests of Lou Arner, Monday evening.

Luella Wilson returned to her home at Morenci, Saturday, after a few day's visit with friends.

Ada Loree went to Detroit Saturday, [illegible] with Mrs. [illegible] Hucking.

Prof. Martin Palmer returned to Flat Rock, Saturday, to resume his school duties there, for the spring term.

Hattie Platt returned Sunday, from a four week's stay with relatives at Deerfield.

F. J. Temple is in Adrian this week, as a juror.

Mrs. Sapp and son John, returned to Ann Arbor, Saturday.

Prof. and Mrs. J. D. Huston, returned from Hillsdale Saturday, and began the spring term of school Monday.

Peter Swick has moved on his farm, near Milan.

On Saturday night the church was packed with a very interesting and attentive audience, to hear Hon. G. W. Bain, of Kentucky, speak on the amendment. The best of order prevailed for nearly two hours. The friends of Mr. Bain would give him a hearty welcome at any time in the future, and listen to his grand lecture of a trip to the Golden Gate.

Election passed off very quietly the best of harmony prevailing. The Democrats elected the entire ticket with the exception of Justice and School Inspector. The majority ranging from 10 to 60. The amendment received 235 for, and is against it, which shows up a good principle standing for the township.

Last week our citizens were somewhat surprised to learn that one of their fair damsels had quite a march on them, and next to a year has passed since W. E. Barrett and Miss Allie Arner were bound in the embrace of matrimony, and so quietly and successfully had they managed the affair that not even the parents of the clandestined pair knew until recently, of their marriage. We extend our congratulations if it is not too late, and Willis says it is not. Never mind Will, she was your cousin just the same, if you didn't know it.

Wm. Barrett Sen., who has been carrying a life policy of $2,000 on Wm. Beach's life, for the past 3 or 4 years, in the Fort Wayne, Ind., graveyard insurance company, has come to a settlement with them, and received $421.60. He has paid $639.90 during the four years, or at the rate of $13.33 per month. Mr. Barrett is satisfied that it is one of the greatest frauds of existence, and advises everybody to have nothing to do with it, whatever.

OLDEN STATION.

House cleaning as all the rage.

Ira Holloway claims to have moved to Adrian about twelve before town moved.

A Miss Cobb, from the Buckeye State, has been trying to start a music class here. Her terms are very reasonable, only 10c per lesson, at your own residence.

Peddlers and agents are very numerous, showing that the roads must be very much improved.

Look out for orange blossoms in the near future.

Miss Alma Healey, who has been spending several weeks with her aged parents at Blissfield, was at home Saturday and Sunday.

The prospect for a large yield of wheat is rather slim in this section.

The new cheese factory is nearly completed and will soon be in operation—W. B. Myers, proprietor.

Some talk of Met Higby shutting down the saw mill for an indefinite period—hope not.

Our printer says business is lively now—Glad of it, Geo.

R. H. Cowell has about all the blacksmithing he can do now.

J. D. Templeton spent last Friday afternoon with the printer.

Miss May Kellogg of Madison was the guest of Miss Julia Freeman last Thursday.

C. A. French says he would like to go to South Dakota.

ONSTED ODDS.

The Onsted school commences next week Monday.

H. H. Howes is moving to Fairfield. Good luck to you, Henry.

Bliss Lee and mother started for their northern home, Monday.

Four hundred dozen eggs is about what Curtis & Kane counted in last week.

Fred Smith will spend the summer in Fairfield, working for Henry Howes.

Report says that our saloon has closed for good. This news seems almost too good to be true, but we have it on good authority. The vote on the amendment here yesterday shows what a large majority of our citizens think about the saloon business.

FARMER'S SOCIAL CLUB

Friday evening, April 1st, the Farmers' Social Club held its closing evening meeting, for the season, at A. I. Hall's. Their spacious house was well filled with people, and the large barn proved inadequate to accommodate the horses as many were hitched to posts and fences.

The program as arranged was as well carried out as it was possible to be in such crowded rooms. The farce was a success. Will Fisher and Minnie Rector, as the leading characters, sustained their parts admirably, as did also the young ladies. This is the first time the young people have undertaken anything in this line as a feature of the club programs, but the praise they received shows that their efforts were appreciated, and we hope we may again be similarly entertained. After the program hot coffee and a picnic supper were served. The coffee was furnished by Mrs. Hall, and was excellent. If Mr. Hall always has as good for his breakfast it is no wonder he carries such a smiling face. It is useless to speak of the supper, for every one knows that Farmer's wives and daughters never carry any thing except the best to a picnic.

After supper the time was spent in pleasant sociability until the lateness of the hour reminded us that even pleasant gatherings ought not to last too long. All departed for their homes feeling that the evening was a pleasant ending for a pleasant and profitable series of meetings.

The club adjourned to meet Friday Afternoon, April 29th, at I. H. Schoonover's. Program.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson for April 10.

JOSEPH EXALTED.—GEN. XLI. 38-46.

NOTES—"Pharaoh."—An Egyptian title meaning king, and applied to any king. "In whom the spirit of God is."—Pharaoh, of course, had to confess to the Holy Spirit. "Thou shalt be over my house."—The man who was over all—he was over his kingdom. Pharaoh's house was his chief men, his cabinet, so to speak. Joseph here became Prime Minister, or Grand Vizier. "My throne."—Pharaoh said to Joseph. "This formula is repeated three times, with declarations of Joseph's greatness. Most scholars believe this comes from the welding together of different narratives by the compiler of the book of Genesis, although it may be taken as merely the evidence of emphasis given by repeating over and over the dignity that Joseph was to receive. "Pharaoh took off his signet ring."—The seal is what gives official authority to a royal document. The man who carries the signet of the king can give the king's commands, and only the most trusted counselor would have this ring, just as only a business man's most trusted employe has his power of attorney. The ring had on it probably the cartouche, or hieroglyphic name of the king. "Vestures of fine linen." This fine linen was made of very gauzy texture. "A gold chain." Such gold chains have been found in the tombs. "They cried before him, Bow the knee."—Very much as Mordecai was honored by Ahasuerus. "Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphenath Paneah," or "supporter of life." It is a good Egyptian form. "Gave him to wife Asenath."—Another Egyptian name meaning "Worshiper of the goddess Neith." "Daughter of Potipherah, priest of On."—This name means "Servant of the Sun-god Ra." On was a great city devoted to the worship of Ra, or the Sun. The priest of that temple would be a powerful prince and this alliance was most honorable. "Joseph was thirty years old."—Just the age of our Lord when he began his ministry. "Joseph went out over the land of Egypt." The same statement is repeated in vs. 45 and 47. "The earth brought forth by handfuls." The reaper grasped the wheat in one hand and cut it down with his sickle, but the allusion is probably here not to his holding the stalks to cut it but to the handfuls in the ears. "Laid up the food."—In vast granaries of solid brick, where it would not be exposed, and where the dry climate would preserve it for years uninjured. Yet wheat cannot thus be preserved indefinitely. The stories about wheat found with mummies growing are all false.

INSTRUCTION.—Pharaoh was right in supposing wisdom to come through the presence of the Spirit of God. The fear of God is wisdom. The best practical wisdom is to obey God. Sin is essential folly. Men who do right get along best in the world, because to be right is to be prudent as well.

We can hardly say a better thing of a man than that he is reliable. Business men can speak no higher praise of a man than that he is "one you can tie to." But that is a purely moral or religious quality. Utter honesty, truthfulness is a virtue to be cultivated as of first quality.

Some children are better than their parents. Jacob was a shrewd worldly-wise man, and misery came of it. We hear nothing but generosity, purity, nobleness, honor of him, his son. If a child's parents are not all that he might wish, that is no reason why he should not try to get a reputation like Joseph's.

Adversity is the best school in which to learn how to endure honor. Is it not an honor? It is not a misfortune to have had to stand storms and trials. In that way a man or woman gets strength of character. He is more mellow and noble in prosperity for knowing what sorrow is and for sympathizing with misfortune.

We see in this story the dealing of Providence. Little of it thing is said about God, but we know God is in it all. God did not come in vision to Joseph, but he conducted Joseph so that even the heathen Pharaoh recognized the wisdom and providence that had guided Joseph. God's providence is in good part in the regular working out of his laws. One who obeys them is on the line of God's good providence. One who disobeys them has no right to expect any favorable providences. God's providences go against him, not for him.

Joseph did his work well in prison. So he fitted himself to be called to the premiership of Egypt. Do your humble work well, and you can get the chance to do higher work. Slight or dispise your lower work, and you will never get higher work to do.

Hope the weather clerk will turn his attention to his legitimate business again and give us a little more spring.

Let saloon keepers read the handwriting on the wall and now conduct their business in strict conformity with the law.—Lansing Republican.

Raisin was the banner town of the county in favor of the amendment, Rollin came next and Tecumseh third, each of them giving a majority of over 200.

A word to the saloon keepers who threaten to continue the prohibition battle—Don't!—Lansing Republican. We commend this advice to some of the liquor dealers in these parts.

The elections in Ohio are very much mixed but the Democrats have made some important gains in the large towns. The labor vote in Cincinnati was unexpectedly large, exceeding the Democratic vote by over 4,000.

If it should turn out that the amendment had carried, after all, what then? The latest returns show a small majority against it, about 500, but many counties are yet incomplete and many towns are estimated.

The vote on the amendment question went in streaks, some towns going heavily in its favor and other towns going as heavily against it. The margin against it will settle down to less than 500, but is enough for all practical purposes.

By examining the table on the amendment vote it will be seen that the city of Adrian gives almost as large a majority against it as the entire county outside does in its favor. Only five voting precincts outside of Adrian voted "no."

That able Kentuckian, who boasts that he never has used whisky or tobacco is still in Washington trying to secure the post of minister to Austria but there isn't much chance for him. There is a settled feeling in administration circles that a Kentuckian with such a record as his is too rare a curiosity to send out of the country, even to a loan exhibition.—Philadelphia Press.

Leaving Detroit City out of the calculation the amendment carried the state by a handsome majority. In Detroit there were 5000 men employed at the poles all day working against it. They probably received $3.00 each for their day's work, and an adverse majority was rolled up of over 22,000. Under these circumstances it is idle to speak of the result as a fair, popular verdict.

The latest returns from the State indicate a plurality for the Republican state ticket of about 15,000. The Greenback and Labor Union vote would have more than offset this meagre plurality. A strong fusion ticket would have swept the state by a good majority, and the influence which prevented fusion came from Wayne and Saginaw counties. By a strange coincidence these two counties roll up the biggest majorities against prohibition. Democrats in the interior of the state can examine the figures and draw their own conclusions.

The Lansing State Republican was a strong opponent of the prohibitory amendment. Since election it has come out in a vigorous editorial warning the liquor dealers of their danger. When a license advocate makes such a confession as this it should confirm all prohibitionists in the propriety of their course.

The temperance light has only just begun. If the Prohibitory Amendment is defeated, as it now appears to be, the great vote for it, however mistaken as we believe it to be, is in the nature of a service of warning upon the saloons that they are condemned by public opinion. If they had obeyed the law—if the saloons had been closed, front and rear, as the law says they shall be, every night at 10 o'clock, every Sunday and every holiday—then the amendment would have been buried under 50,000 majority against it. But prohibition came near carrying the State, simply and solely because the saloons have been so lawless. They have got to obey the law, or some way will be found by the people to close them up. The State Republican, believing that the present tax law is a better temperance law than prohibition, and being a conscientious temperance journal, insists that the prohibitory part of the tax law shall be enforced henceforth vigorously, rigorously, and constantly.

A RUN ON THE BANK.

A Committee of Merchants Help a Da-

I ran across a New York man the other day who is largely interested in the banking business of Dakota. The conversation drifted into a discussion of the character of the people out there. "They may be rough in their manners," said he "and uncouth in their way, but they stand by a man when he is in trouble, and they never forget a friend. I had an opportunity" he went on, "to test this trait not many years ago. The bank of the town where I was stopping failed suddenly and unexpectedly one fine day by the failure of its principal correspondent in the East. [illegible] of the day that the news of the failure reached the city [illegible] back the following morning was inevitable. To the best there was but $20,000 in the vaults to meet a run of the people, but we managed to get hold of some ready cash.

"The president of the bank was at his residence when the news came, and a committee of the leading merchants of the place went to his residence to inform him of the situation. It was given to them and likewise an opportunity to look at the books. A short examination sufficed to show that the bank was only temporarily embarrassed. They said to the president, 'You open the doors at 10 o'clock as usual and pay the depositors—we'll see you through this thing.' 'But how are you going to do it?' said the president. 'I have but $6,000 here and there are at least $30,000 in deposits to be met. Half of that sum is clamoring on the sidewalk now.' 'Never mind, you open the bank and go ahead,' said the committee, 'and we will see you through.'

"Well, the bank was opened and in rushed the depositors and out went the money. The pile of greenbacks on the cashier's desk grew smaller and smaller and the crowd of depositors continued to increase with every minute. Still the paying at the teller's window went on. On the sidewalk the people who had drawn their money were met by some of the merchants who had promised to see the bank through. 'What are you going to do with your money?' they would ask. 'I don't know,' came the answer. 'Suppose you leave it with us. We know our house and know that we are responsible. We will give you our note and so much interest.' To the farmers for the majority of depositors were farmers the money in their pockets where it drew no interest was of little use; they preferred, of course, the notes and were without difficulty persuaded to part with their money. As soon as they had received the money the merchants would deposit it in the bank. The same money was paid over the counter three times or oftener in the course of the day, and when the bank closed at 3 o'clock in the afternoon it had in its vaults as much money as it had started with in the morning, and with $6,000 it had paid over $20,000 of deposits. The promptness with which it met the demands of the depositors stayed the panic and the next morning there was not the slightest intention of a run. This is an absolutely true story," said my informant in conclusion, "for I was myself the president of that bank. Now can you notice that by anything in the east?"—Cor. New York Tribune.

A Shorthand Story.

Even experts are deceived at times. I recall in this connection the famous shorthand joke. A member of this profession, I believe, wrote a story for a paper as a joke, in which he described a shorthand writer in Washington sitting between two meetings of opposite politics and taking verbatim reports of both, one with each hand. The story was published in an American journal as a joke, but, to an English scientific journal took the amazement of the author expatiated upon the achievements of man. It went the rounds of the English shorthand journals, and the Washington shorthand reporters enjoyed it.—"Observer" in Philadelphia Call.

Liberts of Imagination.

The theory of the mind cure is that if you think you are well you are well, and per contra if you think you are sick you are sick. The second scene in the prologue of "Claudian" is a damp and drafty cave, very realistic. There was a man in the parquet circle the other night who sneezed violently three times as soon as this scene was on. He explained afterward that he was chilled on the instant. "It was imagination, no doubt, but I felt exactly as I would if I had been suddenly transplanted to the hermit's cave. I don't know how else to account for it."—Philadelphia Call.

He Spoke Hastily.

"Dear me, how noisy the children are," remarked Cardinal Richelieu as childish voices penetrated the stillness of the front parlor.

"Ah, yes!" sighed Richelieu, "child hood is ever joyous. It is so refreshing to muse upon its thoughtless gayeties." He gazed long at the window. "Heavens!" A long, [illegible] comforter, which he had left in the hall a few minutes before, was at a speed not [illegible] with young sters and Arabian's two brothers were tugging at it like twin Hercuses.—Detroit Free Press.

Volcanic Ashes.

The slopes of Etna and Vesuvius owe their richness to the decomposition of volcanic ashes and lavas. In New Zealand there are [illegible] year's eruption has [illegible] to a remarkable degree.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Advantages of Electricity.

In Boston it is stated the arc lights for serious offenses committed on the highway has shown a very marked falling off in number since the electric light for street purposes was introduced.—Chicago Times.

Such Is Fame.

A little provincial paper in Massachusetts referring to our Howells, said recently: "The Americans are boasting of a novelist who is appropriately enough named Howls."

A writer in The Scientific American says that in experiences in Colorado and Utah he never saw an Indian with a cold. He concluded that it is our hot rooms which give us colds.

A Sarnia, Canada, editor describes his contemporary as "that freak against nature's laws sandwiched between a weakened up soul and a diseased imagination."

Brass teapots are disappearing fast since a noted physician was good enough to say they generate a very poisonous substance.

PESTS OF AFRICA.

A COUNTRY WELL SUPPLIED WITH ALL SORTS OF INSECTS.

The Wave of the White Ant—The Remarkable "Hottentot God"—Grasshoppers, Locusts, Moths and Butterflies—The Crocodile—Venomous Snakes.

The termites, or white ants, build for themselves houses or hills of an average height of three feet above the ground and three feet diameter at the base, conical in shape and sometimes adorned with turrets or [illegible]. In rare cases the hills are [illegible] four or five feet in height. In the [illegible] of which they are constructed, earth is used, with a cement of their own [illegible], being as hard as required. Mixed with water it is used as a mortar in laying bricks and also covering for the floors of huts, stables, and the houses of native inhabitants. It makes a strong and durable proof floor. The [illegible] are [illegible] by galleries [illegible] ants have among themselves regular guards and soldiers who, when a breach is made in their dwelling, rush forth to its defense and muster the working ants, who curiously enough are without eyes, to repair the damage, and in a surprisingly short time the swarms of ants will have effected all repairs and everything will be right and quiet again. An animal dies on the Veldt, soon the vultures will have torn off his hide and devour all of it except the bones, then the ants in their turn clean and polish these so that within twenty-four hours after death there will remain only the bones, smooth and polished, inside and out, and what was the day previous a living animal is now a dismantled and whitened skeleton.

A book could be written on the various species of ants, but let us pass on to some of the other insects which abound in Africa. Here I can say a word in favor of the detested mosquito. In South Africa he is quite decent. He only bites during the day and the sunset, unlike his American cousin, goes to sleep and gives you a rest. As to fleas, they are found in legions, and are as active and bloodthirsty as any in the world.

Sitting in my room one evening reading, my attention was drawn to a remarkable looking insect, which sat upon his haunches before me. It was of a bright emerald green color, three inches long, and evidently of the grasshopper species. It had a face like a death's head, with large, protruding eyes, which it rolled about in a most comical manner. Its forelegs resembled arms with hands, which it held up on either side of its face like a horrified old woman. Altogether it is a most ludicrous insect. It is called by the inhabitants the "Hottentot God." The Kaffirs are very superstitious about it, believing that it is the forerunner of death. It is harmless unless annoyed, when it will show fight.

Of grasshoppers and locusts there are many sorts, from those that are six inches long and armor plated like a small ironclad to little wee things hardly perceptible. All of them, however, are terribly destructive to vegetation. Moths and butterflies are innumerable, some of them are very beautiful as they flash among the flowers in the bright African sunlight, while others are of a more somber hue. We must not forget the destructive fish moth, who finds out all woolen garments, and to your utter dismay when a cold snap comes on and you think you have a nice warm garment to put on, you give it a shake to dislodge the spiders, scorpions and other disagreeable tenants, who take to take up their abode in all put away clothing, to fall off in dust, and instead of what you expected you have a threadbare worked article, useless even as ornamental. Spiders there are, from those as large as a pigeon's egg to the smallest conceivable size, venomous and terrifying, their bites, looking to others parts. One of the most dangerous of the species is a small, round bodied yellow, whose favorite haunt is in outhouses and in closets, and whose bite is very painful. Scorpions are plentiful and poisonous. Centipedes are found everywhere. In fact, with those insects that I have mentioned and others not enumerated the division in Africa needs to keep his eyes open but like men who work in powder factories or similar dangerous places one becomes so accustomed to all these deadly insects, and a scorpion, centipede or tarantula is brushed off in a cool matter of fact way, crushed with the foot, and nothing more thought about it.

The largest and most dangerous animal, though not the most numerous, reptile in Africa is the crocodile. Infesting the banks of the numerous rivers and lagoons he lies in wait for his prey, and seizes on cattle, deer and human beings. His favorite repast however, is a dog. If one is lounging or larking in the neighborhood the crocodile is alert and on the lookout for him and if he is caught short work is made of him. Resembling the crocodile in appearance, although in miniature, is the iguana, a harmless reptile, which, however, is death to snakes. It's reptile lives in holes in trees, and is rather pretty in color. Next come the snakes, plentiful and venomous. Then the chameleon, changing his color to that of the object which it may be resting. It is quite [illegible] in Africa [illegible] a [illegible] branch of a tree in your neighborhood, as they devour an immense number of flies and are useful in that way. When angered the chameleon will utter a short [illegible] and spit at his assailant.

The most dangerous and most plentiful pests of this country are the many species of snakes. First in size comes the Python, or boa constrictor, although not [illegible] the [illegible] South American congener. It is a fellow to keep away from. The snakes found mostly in the low country adjoining the coast and [illegible] in the small states. It [illegible] but is [illegible] very dangerous. Then we have [illegible] brown and [illegible]. These snakes will not only [illegible] [illegible] feet in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

BABY'S Skin and Scalp preserved and beautified by Cuticura Medicated Soap.

Our oldest child, now six years of age, when an infant six months old, was attacked with a violent scaly skin disease. Ordinary remedies failing, we called our family physician, who attempted to cure it; but it spread with almost incredible rapidity until the lower portion of the little fellow's person, from the middle of his back to his knees, was one solid scab, very painful, blotched and hideous. We had not slept at night for six months. Finally we were advised to try the CUTICURA REMEDIES. The effect was simply marvellous. In three or four weeks a complete cure was wrought, leaving the little fellow's person as white and healthy as though it never had been attacked. In my opinion, your valuable remedies saved his life, and to day he is a strong, healthy child, perfectly well, no report of the disease having ever occurred.

Franklin as a Writer.

His pen was as ready as his purse in the service of all human kindness. And what a pen it was! It could discourse metaphysics so clearly and lucidly as to make them seem plain moralizing; it could tear a sophism to pieces by a mere [illegible] like a subtile argument. He could be grave and he could be gay in a breath. He could spend as much wit and humor on a "Craven Street Gazette" which was meant only to amuse an old landlady, away from home and probably out of pocket before her return, [illegible] designed to fire America and astonish England. In another time, he translates into human language, for the amusement of a court lady, the reflections in the garden of her house of a scrag-headed cherubim, half seven hours old, on the vanity of all things. The Position of the Left Hand might [illegible] the left hand [illegible] educates the right [illegible] of Franklin's [illegible] have been [illegible] assorted, [illegible] sight of the world that their source [illegible] only in this way can we account [illegible] was doubtless for unconscious [illegible] of Franklin's economical problem [illegible] Diminishing the Cost of Light. A Pleasure [illegible] are contested simply in using at [illegible] instead of one of six. These [illegible] Franklin's never become antiquated. Not every one who uses the expression to pay dear for one's whistle knows that the dear whistle was a purchase made by Franklin, when seven years old, with a pocketful of pence. Franklin's store was too abundant for him to mind though some of his fame went astray. "You know," he tells his daughter, "everything makes me recollect some story." But it was not recollection so much as fancy. His fancy clothed every idea in circumstance. When the illustration had served its turn, he was indifferent what became of it. Franklin did injustice to himself when he fancied he wanted any such mechanical aid. His English had been learned from the "Pilgrim's Progress," and the "Spectator." It had the force of Bunyan without his ruggedness. It had the serene light of Addison with Bentley's laciness and vigor. It sparkled with sarcasms as cutting as Voltaire's, but all sweetened with humanity. Many of his inventions or adaptions—such as "colonize"—have been stamped, long since, as current English. But he did not covet the fame of an inventor, whether in language, in morals or in politics. In language, he was even declared a foe to innovation. Writing to Noah Webster, in 1789, he protests against the new verbs "notice," "advocate," and "progress." He had as little ambition to be classic as to be an innovator in English. He wrote because he had something at the moment to say, with a view to procuring that something should at the moment be done.—Edinburgh Review.

Where Did Potatoes Come From?

Nobody knows precisely where the potato came from originally. It has been found, apparently indigenous, in many parts of the world. Mr. Darwin, for instance, found it wild in the Chonos Archipelago. Sir W. J. Hooker says that it is common at Valparaiso, where it grows abundantly in the sandy hills near the sea. In Peru and other parts of South America it appears to be at home; and it is a noteworthy fact that Mr. Darwin should have noted it both in the humid forests of the Chonos Archipelago and among the Central Chilian mountains, where sometimes rain does not fall for six months at a stretch. It was to the colonists whom Sir Walter Raleigh sent out in Elizabeth's reign that we are indebted for our potatoes.

Herriot, who went out with these colonists, and who wrote an account of his travels, makes what may, perhaps, be regarded as the earliest mention of this vegetable. Under the heading of "Roots" he mentions what he calls the "openawk." "These roots," he says, "are round, some large as a walnut, others much larger. They grow on damp soils, many hanging together as it fixed on ropes. They are good food, either boiled or roasted."

At the beginning of the seventeenth century this root was planted, as a curious exotic, in the garden of the nobility, but it was long ere it came into general use. Many held them to be poisonous, and it would seem not altogether unreasonably so either. The potato is closely related to the deadly nightshade and the mandrake, and from its stems and leaves may be extracted a very powerful narcotic. In England prejudice against it was for a long time very strong, especially among the poor.

Practical Proverbs.

"I wouldn't gin a cent for de man who quotes old proverbs an' adopts second-hand mottoes," began Brother Gardner, of the Detroit Limeklin Club, as the crunching of harvest apples suddenly ceased. "Dis am an aige fur chery man to hold his own plow, an' who am content to let some one else hold it must be satisfied wid cobs in place of co'n. Ef I was so poo' an' low-down dat I had to pick rags, I would have my own maxims an' mottoes. Instead of sayin' 'Doan' put off till to-morrow what kin be done to-day,' I would have it: 'Now, ole man, you git right up a dust, an sling mo' rags dis week dan any odder chap kin in a month. De odder day I met Comeback Jones. You know he am 'bout sixty years old, an' 'bout as hard up as a woodchuck in a bar's grip. I axed de ole man how he was keepin' up wid de purcheshun, an' he replied, "Wall, ize mighty hard up, but dey say it am a long lane dat has no turn." Just think of an ole man wid one No. 13 in de grave wattin' for a turn in de lane to bring him heaps to eat an' lots to wear.—All frew life he has carried dat second hand sayin wid him, an' am yet a believer in it. Why didn't he have one of his own? If he had said, forty years ago: "Doan' foller any lane, but cut across-lots," de wolf wouldn't be after him to-day. A man who hes de will to make a motto hes de pluck to make it a success. Buckle down to buzness, an' a better motto dan any book kin give ye. Let me, in closin', quote some of de mottoes an' maxims belongin' to members of dis club:

Sir Isaac Walpole—"Doan' drap fifteen cents in reachin' fur a dollar."

Waydown Bebee—"When ye can't dig frew a wall climb ober it."

Giveadam Jones—"Git dar—if it takes a leg."

Pickles Smith—"Ye can't swim a ribber by sittin' on a bank."

Samuel Shin—"Sot yer alarm clock fur six in de mornin'."

Trustee Pullback—"If de road am up hill, stiffen yer back bone a little mo'."

Kyan Johnson—"De man who wars his hat on his ear shows de empty side of his head."

Brutus Jackson—"Hoe co'n wid yer hans an' arms stead of yer mout."

Elder Toots—"Take a job at fust sight, but doan' trade hosses till ye think it ober."

Read for a Purpose.

It is a mistake to suppose that the more a person reads the wiser he will grow, as a matter of course. I know a young girl of perhaps fourteen, who is a devourer of books of the story sort, such as fill most of our Sunday-school libraries. Every [illegible] travels through the volumes at a most rapid pace. But it seems exactly like pouring water through a sieve. Not a valuable idea stays in the mind. The whole attention is absorbed in finding out how the story turns out, with no refer[illegible] Webster when a boy, obtained more information from a farmer's almanac than she would from whole shelves full of books read in that manner.

Indeed such reading weakens the mind instead of strengthening it. Not does it soften the heart towards the suffering [illegible] by moved by dangerous surprises. Even high admiration of self-denial and heroism in a favorite character leads to no corresponding action on the readers' part. Nothing all demands upon her sympathy and self-denial make her only peevish and irritable. Have you never seen an absorbing tale, but indigned when a mother called her off to attend to neglected duties. How angrily the thread in everyday work was taken up, and how little her presence contributed to lighten the home cares! Any reading that has such an effect on the mind is an evil of a decided character and of most serious magnitude. A well-written story which has a decided point to it is a relaxation for both mind and body, but stories of perverted moral sentiment, where black is invariably painted white, and vice versa, are only pernicious, destroying both soul and body.

Read for a purpose, and make the points of the book your own. If a story is read for recreation, let it be a good one in the truest sense, and do not make such reading the sole literary food. When we have found an author who sets our own minds at work in a laudable direction, we have opened a good mine. There are some writers who stop us, in effect, in every half page or less, with new trains of thought which their words have awakened; and better still, they set us to doing as well as thinking. Cultivate such helpful friends and you will then secure the noblest end of reading, and will have paved the way for high improvement. After the habit is once well formed of reading for a high and noble purpose, it will be found a source of enjoyment never dreamed of in the old days when reading was only an amusement.

The Leading-Strings Fallacy.

From the moment a child is born, he is treated on the principle that all his instincts are essentially wrong, that nature must be thwarted and counteracted in every possible way. He is strapped up in a contrivance that he would be glad to exchange for a straight-jacket, kept for hours in a position that prevents him from moving any limb of his body. His first attempts at locomotion are checked; he is put in leading-strings, he is carefully guarded from the out-door world, from the air that would invigorate his lungs; from the sports that would develop his muscles. Hence, the peevishness, awkwardness, and sickliness of our young aristocrats. Poor people have no time to imitate the absurdities of their wealthy neighbors, and their children profit by what the model nurse would undoubtedly call neglect. Indian babies are still better off. They are fed on bull-beef, and kicked around like young dogs; but they are not swaddled, they are not cradled, and not dosed with paregoric; they crawl around naked, and soon learn to keep out of the way; they are happy, they never cry. If we would treat our youngsters in the same way, only substituting kisses and bread for kicks and beef, they would be as happy as kids in a clover field, and moreover they would afterward be hardier and stronger. Every week the newspapers tell us about ladies tumbling down stairs and breaking both arms, boys falling from a fence and fracturing their collar bones. From what height would a young Comanche have to fall to break such bones—not to mention South-sea Island children and young monkeys? The bones of an infant are plastic; letting it tumble and roll about would harden the bony tissue; guarding it like a piece of brittle crockery makes its limbs as fragile as glass. Christian mothers reproach themselves with neglecting their duty to their children if they do not constantly interfere with their movements, but they forget that in points of physical education Nature herself is such an excellent teacher that the apparent neglect is really a transfer of the pupil to a more efficient school.

Missed the Train.

It was a colored man. His back was all dirt, one tail of his coat was gone, and every button had been ripped off his vest. He had two limps and a hitch as he came out, and there was a new French shade of sadness in his voice as he toed the mark and said:

"I missed de train, sah."

"Yes, it looks like it. Is your name Gen. Scott Green?"

"Yes, sah."

"What train did you miss?"

"I doan' jest remember what train it was."

"What was you going?"

"Down the road."

"What road?"

"Dat's what I can't member, sah."

"Well, do you remember of getting on a drunk?"

"No, sah. Maybe I called for lemonade, an dey gin me whisky, but I doan' zackly 'member it. All I recollect is dat I missed de train."

"I think you got the train all right. You were training around pretty lively when the officer got hold of your collar."

"I allus walks in my sleep, sah."

"Well, that's bad for you. You broke a window, kicked in a door, and raised a big row. Have you observed the state of your wardrobe?"

"I has deserved dat. I'm all broke up, sah. Dis suit ob close cost me seben dollars cash, an' I doan' believe it would sell fur six. Did dey roll me down stairs?"

"No; you resisted arrest and the officer had to help you around a little."

"He—did? I wish I'd jun dat to seen de fun. Kin I step out an see my partner jest two minuts?"

"No, sir; you can step up to the work house for sixty days."

"Shoo! Why, dat upsets me from gyme to finish!"

"Can't help that. Please fall back."

"Can I sue de lawsuit fur fifty cents?"

"No, sir. The omnibus will be along for you in about twenty minutes. Call the next case.—Detroit Free Press.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

KEEP THE BOYS AT HOME EVENINGS.

[ESSAY BY MRS. M. A. ROGER.]

"I know just the hour when my mother lost my confidence," said a young minister to me. "It was one day when about nine years old, on coming home from school, I began to tell her some bad language I had heard. She stopped me, saying, 'Oh now, George, you must not come home and tell me everything that you hear at school.' These words burst on me like a peal of thunder. They struck me dumb. I walked out doors, but the sun was darkness and the moon gave no light, although it was only three o'clock in the afternoon. Up to that time whenever I had seen or heard anything that was wrong, I had told mother, but she never had to tell me not to repeat what I heard at school. And my boyish confidence in and veneration for my mother's judgment were broken."

What a mistake that mother made! Here was her golden opportunity to point out the evil and warn against it. So long as she held her boy's confidence she had him safe, for as the childish mind poured itself out to her, she could see the direction of the current and turn or strengthen it. She had not studied her child's character, or she would have known that with him only one such repulse could ever be made. How few mothers make a study of their children's characters; yet this is the key to successful government. She who understands her own nature, who remembers the influence which dominated her during her child's prenatal life and carefully watches the unfolding of the human flower, until she knows just where the shoot must be broken off and what conditions are needed for the development of this or that part of the plant, she it is whose children shall rise up and call her blessed."

Another cementing influence which parents often neglect is the cultivation of affection between brothers and sisters. When one receives candy suggest that he share with the others and save some for the absent. Thus not only a loving thoughtfulness is learned but a lesson of unselfishness. This consideration for others may be carried into every department of child life. I say child life, because the keeping of the boys at home must be begun when they are young. An eminent English jurist says, "A large majority of all the criminals who are brought before me have been made what they are by being allowed to be away from home evenings, between the ages of eight and sixteen." This being the case how are the boys to be kept at home? The first essential is a cheerful, pleasant mother. She need not be finely clad, if her dress is neat and her face good and kind, she will make in her boy's mind a picture, so attractive that no pretty barmaid will easily supplant it. But this is not enough the home also must be made such a bright and cherry place that the there thought of it will quicken his returning steps. "How is this to be done?" Instead of having bare, white walls, cover them with pretty paper, which can be bought for twelve cents a roll. Turkey red calico at eight cents a yard will make the old chairs look gay and comfortable. Cretonnes and colored canton flannels make rich and inexpensive window curtains. And a few pots of flowers, two or three good photographs and chromos, and your dreary room becomes cosy and homelike. Do not be afraid to light the parlor fire and use the best room. No place is too good for our husbands and children. A pleasant place and a loving mother are a good deal, but not all; employment must be found for head and hands. The whole philosophy of the matter lies in keeping the mind active at work or play. When the father sits asleep in the chimney corner and the mother silently mends or knits, the quiet and dullness become insupportable and Jack starts out to play first on the street corner, then to loaf, smoke, drink and gamble in the saloon. Young manhood is full of desire for action. It wishes to reach out and touch life at manifold points. It longs for a vent for its energies and only seeks the street and saloon because it must be going or doing. The undue expression of this eager restlessness is merely the damming of water, the break will inevitably come; but if the stream is allowed to flow naturally it can be directed into the best channels. The question is, how to do this. Let parents plan to give themselves wholly to their children two or three evenings every week. Invite their playmates to spend the evening and find out whether or not they are the boys with whom you wish your sons to associate. Have games, such as authors, checkers, snap, French charades, making poetry, shadow buff, shadow pantomimes, the menagerie, the eyetests, the moving circle, proverbs, etc. I mention these games only [illegible] their own program. In one family it will be music, in another, charades and drawing, in a third, reading and "whittling," in a fourth, pop corn and a "taffy pull."

Does some one say, "Oh, but it is too late." Try it. A fashionable wife, suddenly awakened to the fact that her husband and sixteen-year-old son were spending their evenings in questionable company. She immediately [illegible] games, etc., for the evening entertainment. A few nights later the husband was as usual, leaving the house, when his son said, "Father, you had better stay at home and see what jolly times we have." He did stay, and both [illegible] course only part of the time ought to be given to mere amusement. If there is the slightest musical ability in the family it should be carefully cultivated. If you cannot afford a piano or organ, buy your boy a concertina or violin. The mere possession of the instrument often awakens the desire to use it. Has one child a taste for drawing? You can get, for twenty five cents, in any toy store, a drawing frame with a dozen wood cuts of animals, etc., which laid under the frosted glass can be easily traced on it with pencil. A box of paints and a few pictures will furnish many an evenings entertainment. Any father or brother can make a blackboard, which, with a piece of chalk, will be a constant joy to the younger members.

Among the families of my associates is one of seven or eight boys, most of whom are children of a larger growth now. The relation between these parents and children always seemed to me very charming. True, it is not a home of wealth, but of culture and music. Yet, after all, human nature is about the same, in palace or cottage. The father and mother are always interested in the plays of their children, often joining them and suggesting improvements here and there. This father, ever fertile in resources, utilized the frame of an old sewing machine to hold a bracket saw, and that alone has given employment to each succeeding child, and brackets, shelves, clocks, etc., for Santa Claus, Christmas after Christmas. The youngest son, about thirteen years old, never thinks of going out after supper without asking his mother's permission, and knowing how long he may stay. Occasionally the wise mother gives over the kitchen to him and his little friends, and the evening is spent in having a delightful "taffy pull." At one time it is hammock making, at another the modeling of clay. If possible, let the children have some place for a playroom and workshop which they can "litter" as much as they choose. The masculine heart delights in a den; it begins in the small boy's first pocket. If your son loves bugs and "bumble bees," encourage that taste, and introduce him to old Mother Nature by aiding his collections and giving him works upon natural history. It is of vital importance that you know what your boys read, and direct their taste. Do not expect them to enjoy Jeremy Taylor's "Holy Living and Dying," "Baxter's Saints' Rest," etc., because you find them to be meat and drink. They will need them by and by, but not now. Let them have some good papers for themselves, which shall combine information and wholesome stories. I know of none so good as the "Youth's Companion." The small boy will like "Abbott's Books of Travel," or the "Rollo Series;" their style is fascinating to the childish mind. I have seen a ten-year old boy pore over one of them for hours. The "Swiss Family Robinson," the "Arabian Nights," "Robinson Crusoe," "Hans Anderson's Fairy Tales," and for Sunday an illustrated copy of "Pilgrim's Progress" will furnish the fanciful material which every young mind craves, and will be far more effective in keeping the New York Ledger and dime novels out of boys' hands than any amount of watching and warning. The larger boys will enjoy the writings of Trowbridge, J. G. Holland, T. W. Higginson, "Old Town Folks," by Harriet B. Stowe, "Nelly's Silver Mine" and "Ramona," by H. H. J. With the reading of "Ramona" will be awakened an undying interest in the poor Indian and his cause. All of Pansy's books may be added to our list. The works of these authors are full of noble thoughts so beautifully interwoven with pictures of people and places that it does not occur to the reader that a lesson is being conveyed to him. The same is true of Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe," "Rob Roy," "Tales of a Grandfather," "Westward Ho," by Charles Kingsley; "A Brave Lady" and "John Halifax, Gentleman," by Miss Muloch; "Robert Falconer," by George MacDonald. Dickens' "Child's History of England," and Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad," will be enjoyed by both young and old. These books may almost all be purchased in paper covers for twenty or twenty-five cents. They may be had by sending to Franklin Bros. 'Seaside Library' publishers, New York, or Alden Bros., publishers, New York.

THE DOUBLE EQUESTRIAN ACT.

SCENE FIRST—THE START.

SCENE SECOND—THE CLIMAX.

SCENE THIRD—THE SEQUEL.

THE WAY THEY DO IN JERSEY.

We clip the following items from the Vineland N. J. papers.

Dr. Brewer, the new postmaster, is trying to please all political parties. He is a democrat, his deputy, Miss Robinson, is a Republican, and Miss York is a Prohibitionist. If business picks up there will probably be room for a good Greenback clerk.

Dr. Chas. R. Brewer, recently appointed Postmaster of Vineland by President Cleveland, takes charge of the office this evening. Miss Libbie Robinson, of Tecumseh, Mich., will be deputy, assisted by Miss Maria C. Brewer, and Miss Lizzie York, of Vineland. None of the old clerks will be retained. Dr. Brewer having made overtures to them to remain a month or two at their own terms, which was refused. It is too be hoped that the public will be a little indulgent till the new hands become somewhat acquainted with the general routine of the office.

The change in postoffice affairs in Vineland has caused probably more discussion the past few days than anything that has happened here for years. Mr. Brewer, the new Postmaster, asked Postmaster Loppy the privilege of going into the office with his clerks yesterday to look around, assist at sorting the mails, and thus become familiar with the boxes, etc., but Mr. Loppy said No! with a big N, and intimated that only one Postmaster could perform the duty of that office at one time. Dr. Brewer immediately took the train and went down to Millville, where he spent the day in the postoffice at that place, and had the "mysteries" explained by Postmaster Ludlum to his entire satisfaction.

The action of the retiring postmaster at Vineland is in strong contrast with that of Ex-postmaster Rosacrans in Tecumseh. He gave the new incumbent every facility for learning the duties before taking possession, and his assistant consented to remain with the incoming official. Judge Stacy, as well as the business community here, feel under special obligations both to Fred Rosacrans and Libbie Robinson for their courtesy towards the new postmaster when the change was made here last summer.

What does this mean Bro. Wheeler? Please rise and explain.

Lavern Wheeler, scene painter, artist, etc., who painted the scenery at the opera house, and rink, is about to put his neck into the matrimonial noose. The lady in the case is a member of a leading family in Ionia. Hudson Post.

Died.—In Tecumseh at the residence of his uncle, C. H. Grainsley, on Thursday, March 24th, of consumption, Louis K. Grainsley, aged 28 years. Funeral services were held by Rev. J. Phelps on the Saturday morning following and the remains were taken to Schoolcraft for burial, where he formerly resided. The deceased had not lived in Tecumseh long, but during his residence here he had grown in the esteem of all his acquaintances and gained many warm friends. He expected to start soon for a trip to Southern California in quest of health, but the dread destroyer overtook him. He was a young man of fine business talents, pleasing address and sterling character.

SPECIAL SCHOOL MEETING.

The school meeting last Monday evening was not largely attended, but it was a harmonious gathering, and was productive of good results.

A. W. Mills called the meeting to order, and Director L. G. North read the call. Moderator Mills stated appointment of committee, and S. W. Anderson read the report of committee, as follows: Upon investigation we find there is great need of some new method of heating and ventilating the Central School Building. We find also, many repairs are absolutely necessary. The floors being in bad condition in every school room, and new seats needed in four rooms. We think also the matter of some fire escape should be seriously considered.

We therefore recommend that the sum of $3,000 be raised for the purpose of putting in such heating and ventilating apparatus and for making such repairs as may be thought best by the School Board.

WM. HAYDEN,
GEO. HEESEN,
A. L. BREWER,
GEO. S. TIFFANY,
S. W. ANDERSON.

S. P. Hosmer offered the following resolution:—

"RESOLVED, That the district board be and is hereby authorized and directed to make such repairs and improvements in the school buildings in this district as to them seem advisable, said repairs and improvements to cost not to exceed $3,000, to be completed on or before Sept. 5, 1887."

Abner Wilson moved the adoption of the resolution and Geo. Heesen seconded it. Remarks were made by Messrs. Tiffany, Hudson Conklin, Dr. House and others in favor of the motion and it was unanimously carried.

Dr. North gave figures from the records of the district which showed that the repairs on the furnaces at the central building, for ten years from 1877 to 1886 inclusive, amounted to $1,312.77. He strongly favored the Smead system of heating and ventilating.

A vote was then taken that the meeting proceed to ballot upon the question of bonding the district, and in order to proceed according to law.

Dr. North offered the following resolution:

RESOLVED, That the district board of trustees of this school district No. 7, Tecumseh, Mich., be and hereby is authorized and empowered to issue the bonds of the district in the sum of $3,000, as follows, namely, $1,500 to be due and payable Feb. 1, 1889, and $1,500 to be due and payable Feb. 1, 1890.

Hudson Conklin was appointed as inspector who, together with the moderator, made up the board of election. The polls were opened at 8:30 p. m. and kept open two hours when it was found that the resolution to bond the district was unanimously carried by a vote of 25.

SEED CORN. I have on hand a few bushels of seed corn, kiln dried, for seed, and warranted to grow. The Golden Dent is a medium sized corn with very small cob and long kernel, and is sure to grow two ears on a stalk, and ripens sooner than the large variety with a smaller stalk, is not so flinty as our common corn, and is a vastly superior corn; roots well down, and withstands the drought far better, is larger and whiter, and in every respect I think a very desirable corn. I have a few bushels of the large variety treated in the same manner, and warranted to grow. Also a quantity of Mammoth corn for seed. This corn will be on sale at McClure's store at Tecumseh, or at my place near Raisin. Respectfully, J. B. COLVIN.

THE T & M. TELEGRAPH LINE.

Three years ago the families of John B. Garlinghouse, John W. Benedict and Chas. Benedict constructed a telegraph line for their own accommodation which has been used by them constantly since. But the past winter 4 or 5 wide awake young men of Clinton and Macon townships seeing the benefits derived from such a line set themselves to work and extended the line into their respective townships adding over 2 miles of wire to the G. & B. line. Then visions of city offices began to loom up and the boys commenced the task of extending the line from Mr. Garlinghouse's to Tecumseh and by the aid of business men of Tecumseh, and farmers of vicinity have been successful. The line is now in good working order with about six miles of wire and 11 instruments located as follows: Marks & Russell, Dr. North, Satterthwaite Bros. & Boyd, Garlinghouse Bros., P. V. Woodward, John W. Benedict, Wm. B. Hendershot, James Nobles and Thos. Boyce. Two or three machines will be added in a few days. The line will be known as the Tecumseh & Macon telegraph line, or T. & M. An adjourned meeting will be held Friday evening of this week at the office of Dr. North, when officers will be elected, constitution, by-laws etc. adopted. All interested are requested to attend.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. Ann Mills and family wish to express thanks to all who assisted during the sickness of husband and father, Ebenezer Mills, also to sympathising friends and neighbors who attended the funeral, to the choir that sang so beautifully and to the clergyman that officiated.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Concert Saturday night.

Where is the street sprinkler?

Mrs. W. T. Eccles is visiting at Jonesville this week.

Mrs. A. S. Doty returned from Brooklyn, N. Y., last week.

With a great many people all fools are not fools every month in the year.

S. W. Anderson started for New York, last Monday, to purchase a stock of new spring goods.

Miss Jennie Gallatin of Ypsilanti, spent last week with her Tecumseh friends and relatives.

The Kindergarten society will meet next Tuesday, Apr. 12, at Mrs. J. J. Freeman's, at 2.30 o'clock.

Thos. Lee, of Macon, is the lucky possessor of a pair of 3 yr. old colts that tip the scales at 2850 lbs.

L. F. Eddy, of Marshall, former station agent on the M. & O. at this village, was in town last Saturday.

Rudolph Heesen returned from his trip on the road last Tuesday night, and will remain here for some time.

Remember the Easter egg festival at The Patterson next Tuesday evening to be given by the ladies of the Episcopal church.

Our youthful contemporary is'nt quite as handsome as he was before election, but we have faith to believe that he knows a good deal more.

As a drawer of surplus ballots Albert Waring is a decided success. With such odds against him no wonder that Minor Davidson got left.

C. A. Dickerson, agent for the Am. Collection & Rept. associa'n, is in town this week, and is soliciting member-memberships from our business men.

The City Band had a street parade last Saturday afternoon and presented a fine appearance. A negative was taken of the full band by L. F. Wheeler.

Layern Wheeler came down from Ionia Saturday and remained until Monday noon. He is doing finely at Ionia and expects to remain there for some time yet.

The Universalist church will give an Easter festival at Reform Club hall over Heesen's store, next Friday eve., April 15. Supper 10c. Come and buy your Easter eggs.

A number of Tecumseh folks drove over to Adrian last Monday evening to hear Gilmore's celebrated 22d Reg. band. It is needless to say they were well repaid for their cold drive.

Chas. H. Smith is home again from Kansas. He brought some samples of corn and meal raised in that far off state which are fine specimens of sod grown grain. We have a sample of the millet on exhibition at our office.

A union meeting with special reference to the temperance situation, and the duty of the hour, will be held at the Presbyterian church next Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. Addresses may be expected. A general invitation is extended.

Henry Haines died very suddenly on his old homestead farm, last Monday night. He was in the village that afternoon and voted and was apparantly in his usual health at that time. The cause of his death is supposed to have been heart disease.

The Wilberforce Concert Co. have been in this village before, and their entertainment received the highest praise from those who attended. Miss Brown, the elocutionist is still with the company, and will give some of her best selections. Go and hear her at the opera house Saturday evening.

Prof. Jerome Travis, of Clinton, has invented a new blackboard eraser, on which he has applied for a patent. It is a very neat looking affair, and we presume it will prove to be a very practical article also. James Potter, of this village has taken the contract to manufacture a large number of them, and Prof. Travis designs to place them on the market at once.

Geo. Schreder has an old bound volume of "Our Boys and Girls." The number for Sept. 21, 1867, contains an account of the world's base ball match at Detroit, in which we find this item "The last prize was one presented by the reporters of the city papers to the worst beaten club, and consisted of some peanuts. It was awarded to the Tecumseh club of Tecumseh, Mich."

Those who were unlucky enough to hear the fire bell ring about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, had the privilege of walking three miles in the country north of the village, to gratify their curiosity, or go back to bed without seeing the fire. The majority went back. The fire proved to be a barn belonging to Israel Schreder, and the flames could be plainly seen. It was totally destroyed together with about 400 bushels of wheat, some chickens, corn, oats. The horses that were in the barn were saved. It was insured in the Farmer's Mutual Co.

Gainsley has a new advertising card in to days paper.

Remember the Wilberforce concert at the opera house Saturday evening.

The city band will give a concert on Military square next Saturday evening, if the weather is favorable.

Miss Helen Todd, daughter of Mayor Todd, of Adrian, was the guest of the Misses Heesen several days last week.

Albert Waring displayed prophetic qualities on the election board which entitles him to be ranked as a mind reader.

Last Friday was All Fool's day at the Lilley House. This information is gained from personal knowledge and not from hearsay.

J. D. Arner has been appointed postmaster at Ridgeway, in place of resigned. Let us shake.

There will be a meeting of the Amendment Central Committee, at the usual place of meeting, on Friday evening, April 8th at 7:30.

W. & S. W. ANDERSON & CO.

Mrs. N. R. Merritt arrived home yesterday from a visit of about two months with her son John, at Lockport, N. Y. Her Tecumseh friends will gladly welcome her back.

Mr. A. C. Preston, who has been at work for the past year in the stereotyping rooms of the Toledo Bee, has taken a position on the HERALD force. He will have charge of our illustrated department, and will devote a portion of his time to outside work.

The Tecumseh City Band will give a concert, at Union Hall, Brooklyn, Friday evening, April 15. Concert from 7:30 until 9 p. m. Doors open at 7:00. Admission 20 cents. Dance at the Skating Rink immediately after the concert.

A citizen of Tecumseh was so much elated over the election returns in Tecumseh and adjoining townships that he felt safe in buying a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, with the intention of sending it to D. Bethune Duffield, of Detroit. We learn since however, he has taken a portion of it himself.

Rev. Mr. Phelps has been corresponding for some time with the Orphanage of Trinity church, New York City, to secure the admission of Mrs. Wilson's two little girls, Rosa and Marie. He succeeded in his effort and the two little waifs were taken in charge last Monday by Seaton Anderson when he started for New York. They have doubtless arrived at their destination ere this.

F. H. Steger, our well known photographer, has sold his gallery to Heck and Gibson, two very enterprising young men. The former has been in business in this town before, and the latter has learned with Mr. Steger and afterwards worked for one of the best galleries in Detroit. They are both well versed in the business and will undoubtedly receive their share of the public patronage. Mr. Steger will remain for some time yet and assist in taking negatives and finish work.

The Chicken Pie Social last evening at the M. E. Church, drew a large gathering, and it proved to be a very enjoyable as well as profitable occasion. The autograph quilt was sold at auction, and netted $140. Ten persons clubbed together, giving $5.00 each and bid it off and then returned it. A second club of ten persons followed suit. Individual bids were then taken which raised the total to $140. Mrs. N. R. Merritt was the last bidder and took the quilt. The receipts from the supper were over $50. The organ fund was increased altogether nearly $200.

Surprise parties are again going the rounds. Last Thursday eve., Albert Howard was the victim. About twenty of the young people took possession of his home and enjoyed themselves to the fullest possible extent. They stayed till a late hour when, as they were about to go home, and were seated in the wagon, which was being backed out, the hub of one of the wheels caught against a post, cramping the wagon and breaking the tongue. The party alighted and proceeded to depart by shank's ponies instead of the usual mode; two of the young ladies took a lesson in equestrianism.

The bulk of the HERALD'S circulation is in the townships of Cambridge, Franklin, Clinton, Raisin, Tecumseh, Ridgeway and Macon. Every one went for the amendment and by the following majorities.

Clinton	8
Cambridgs	70
Franklin	151
Tecumseh	223
Raisin	251
Ridgeway	177
Macon	188
Total	1088

Which total is about 100 more than the aggregate majority in the entire county.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

J. H. Boies of Hudson, has gone to Florida on a business trip.

[illegible] all been engaged for another year.

The stock has all been taken in the Hudson Oil company, and the organization will soon begin active operations.

No arrangements were made for boring at the meeting of stockholders, Tuesday evening, but several members struck oil a short time after the adjournment. An able bodied [illegible] near the rink shows the exact point where they struck.—Hudson Gazette.

Make farmers are being victimized by a new swindle. A pretended agent for scythe sharpeners makes a present of one of his articles to the farmer, who thereupon signs a contract to push their sale in his vicinity. The contract afterwards turns up in the shape of a note.—Blissfield Advance.

The scientific editor of the Hudson Post remarks that "every day people are becoming more convinced that Lenawee county is full of oil." Bore into the earth for oil, but if you want gas, the surest method is to tap the Adrian newspapers.

The Methodist Sabbath school of Adrian has taken a new and novel departure, viz., the introduction of an orchestra with a half dozen instruments to enliven the unusual exercises.

We learn that "Tommy" Field, once a Morenci barber, has deserted his family, who are now receiving public aid at Hudson. He had sadly degenerated of late, on account of bad habits.—Morenci Observer.

The postmaster at Cincinnati has intercepted bushels of letters containing drafts, postal notes and orders, currency, etc., addressed to the manager of the St. Andrews Bay Co. The thing is a gigantic swindle, as the Gazette stated several weeks ago, and as the Hudson speculators who bought Florida land at a dollar a lot have found out to their sorrow.—Hudson Gazette.

The Weston school board and the Weston people generally, concede that it will be for their best interest to retain Prof. Trip, if possible, for another year. The professor seems to be achieving excellent success as an educator, a fact that we note with a sort of satisfaction, when we remember that he is an old Franklin boy, Franklin against the world, gentlemen.—Adrian Press.

The Odd Fellows and the Grange of Riga, will build a fine new hall, the work being now under way. That's right. Let them have a neat, cosy, roomy, cheerful home, where they can enjoy pleasant social gatherings. Riga farmers are fast becoming financially independent, and the odd fellows there are among the most enthusiastic and loyal members of the order.—Adrian Press.

It is pleasant to note that the Lake Shore company is losing no time in the effort to abolish the holocaust-breeding box stove, and substitute in its place a method that, it is held, will add to the safety of passengers in the event of a wreck. The Cincinnati accommodation, which left Cleveland Monday, consisted of five new and elegant cars, all heated by dry steam from the locomotive, the apparatus being the invention of Rev. Wm. Martin, Metholist, of Dunkirk, N. Y. If the system proves valuable, no doubt other trains will be similarly fitted out.

While the new State law admits of the killing of English sparrows and paying a bounty of one cent each, we must bear in mind that a penalty of five dollars is imposed upon any one who kills the insectiverous birds, such as robins, blue birds, martins, swallows, chipping sparrow or chippy bird, ground birds, orioles, and many others that are quite common. These birds, all of which are great insect feeders, should be encouraged to build near us, and boys would make much better wages if they would report any one who kills these birds. Therefore we would advise you to be cautious and make no mistake.

To-morrow, we are informed, the saloon men of Hudson will withdraw their patronage from the Gazette. At the commencement of the campaign they informed us of the position they expected our paper to take on the amendment question, and made it very plain that a neutral policy would be to our advantage in the way of patronage, etc. While we have not a dollar of patronage to spare, we we have no principles that are for sale. Whether right or wrong in advocating prohibition, one thing is certain the question involved too much that concerned the welfare of the public generally to permit a newspaper to take a non committal course in its discussion. In supporting the amendment we have antagonized the business of saloon men, not intemperately or maliciously, but fairly and openly. Certainly it is their right to withdraw their patronage from a newspaper that will not support their business. It may be selfish, it may be silly, but it's natural.—Hudson Gazette.

THE ELECTION IN TECUMSEH

Notwithstanding the cold, raw weather last Monday, there was a very full vote polled for a spring election. [illegible] during the entire day. We have never known a more warmly contested spring election in Tecumseh. There was not only a spirited contest over the township offices but the struggle waxed hot on the amendment from the opening of the polls till the close. We herewith present the vote in detail on both the state and township tickets.

[illegible] of ladies stationed at the foot of the stairs leading to the Council Room, who peddled ballots in favor of the amendment and in the ante room up stairs another committee distributed temperance tracts. So far as we could learn the ladies received gentlemanly and courteous treatment from every one. Although the contest was spirited, not the least disturbance of any kind occurred during the entire day.

Henry W. Stevens, R	374
James Elliott, R	347
George N. Chidester, R	334
George Stanford, R	331

The tie between Chidester and Sanford was decided by lot in favor of Sanford. There were 19 scattering votes on constables on the Democratic ticket and 7 scattering on the Republican ticket.

The total pole on township ticket was 732. There were six more ballots cast than the poll list called for. Upon drawing the surplus tickets, five Democratic tickets were drawn and one Republican.

The total poll on the state ticket was 566 and on the prohibitory amendment 699, the majority in favor of the latter being 223.

An inspection of the figures will show that there was an immense amount of scratching and independent voting on the town ticket. The scratcher was hanging around loose and he got in his work pretty effectually.

Several causes contributed to the Democratic defeat. In the first place the Republicans called an early caucus and put an unusually strong ticket in the field. The candidates were prosecuting a still hunt for ten days which counted on election day. The Democrats deferred their caucus until the last day in the afternoon, so that no effective work was done beforehand.

Is it true that the Tecumseh News ring was trading off votes all day against Alf. James to secure votes for Mr. Field for Clerk? If it is true that accounts for the result on supervisor.

The Republicans elected are all excellent men and we have reason to believe that they will perform their official duties faithfully and creditably.

The friends of the amendment have cause for congratulation over the splendid results attending their efforts here in Tecumseh. It shows that earnest determined work in behalf of a righteous cause will always bear good fruit in this community. What ever the result may be in the state at large, they have the satisfaction of having done their full duty in the premises.

And we believe that the earnest, courageous course of the HERALD contributed in no small measure to this outcome. In the towns where the HERALD has the largest circulation, the vote in favor of the amendment was the heaviest. It demonstrates the fact that even a a local newspaper can exercise a commanding influence when it boldly takes a stand on the right side of public questions.

The public examinations which were attended week before last were a decided success in every respect. Those in the Central Building were held on Thursday and the rest in all the Branch buildings on Friday. The examinations themselves showed thorough training on the part of the teachers and good scholarship on the part of the pupils while the attendance of visitors was larger by [illegible] previous public examination. In several of the rooms from forty to fifty visitors were present in the afternoon. Sixty five others were present at one time in Miss Whitney's room. One of the blackboards in Miss Lamb's room was ornamented with a fine life like crayon portrait of Tennyson, executed by Frank Swick. Miss Whitney received two fine bouquets as a gift from her pupils. The blackboards in the other rooms were decorated with drawings of various kinds, and with the program of exercises executed in Old English capitals. The blackboards in the branch schools were all decorated in a similar manner the whole displaying much artistic taste on the part of the pupils. The entire number of visitors present during the two days aggregated 661. Both teachers and patrons have abundant reason for congratulating themselves over the successful outcome of the examinations.

The spring term opened last Monday with a larger attendance than usual for the spring term. The total enrollment in the High School at present is about 80.

Prof. and Mrs. Freeman of Dundee, paid the school a visit yesterday.

The chemistry class are now engaged upon the sulphur group.

The geometry class are now on solid geometry.

A QUESTION.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD.—Please to inform me through your paper if those that voted for the Amendment have any right to drink wine at the sacrament. Will they not have to use water.

Respectfully,
A READER.

The churches to which we belong abolished the use of wine at the sacrament service years ago and has used water ever since. Many churches now use unfermented wine. We do not wish to prescribe any rule for others. Each individual must settle this question with his own conscience.

C. T. Smith and wife, of Lansing, are on a visit to his brother Chas. H. Smith, this week.

A well known temperance worker was approached on election day by an earnest friend of the amendment with an inquiry, if he was certain that the gentleman who had charge of the box containing the amendment ballots was all right. He thought his general cast of face did not indicate such a feeling. Those who know our friend Albert, appreciate the joke fully.

As we walked toward Waverley place I [illegible] Was he in error because of a valiant [illegible] through a quarrel with his own [illegible] Was he blind, had an heart-hope [illegible] or had he involved himself with a woman whom he discovered it impossible to marry?

[illegible] I should come to his [illegible] his wife being absent doing penance at a family dinner, but expected to return soon. When she entered I was greeted with more cordiality than ever before, and among other things alluded to the young Englishman.

"I don't like him," she remarked.

"And pray, why not?" I exclaimed. "He is intelligent, well read, a quick and good talker, handsome in his way—and worships your husband."

"I don't like him," said Mrs. Raymond, taking up her knitting with the most complacent air, as if "I don't like him" settled the matter logically, psychologically and sociologically for good and all.

Raymond beamed down on his wife and remarked:

"She thinks he thinks she is weak—isn't that the expression, my dear?"

Mrs. Raymond set her small sharp curved mouth.

"No, my dear, that is your expression," and, turning to me: "There are points in your character I do not like, but on the whole you will do. At any rate, you are not weak. If you did wrong you would expect and abide by the consequences. But this young Mr.—Mr.—whatever he chooses to call himself—I must say the only reason for his existence that I know of is to make me prouder than ever of my husband."

She was not allowed to finish, and, as an old friend of both, I turned to the photograph album until a little scuffle was over.

On leaving the apartments I took a walk, as is my wont before going to bed, notwithstanding the fearful condition of the streets, making a long loop about the square through Fourth street and Broadway. It had cleared overhead and the moon was out. As I turned into Waverley place I saw a figure at the side entrance of the New York hotel whom I took for a man much the worse for drink, and paid little heed to. But just as I passed I looked up and thought it was the young Englishman we had dined with. I even hesitated, but the bowed head, trembling hands, and uncertain knees of the figure belonged to a much older man, and as he seemed to be only steadying himself to enter the hotel it occasioned me only a shrug of pity and a sigh. I glanced at the windows of the hotel and wondered what further discoveries in the matter of American types my high nosed young English gentlewoman had made since she submitted me to her examination. She clung to my memory for some reason, as if she has something to say to me, some inquiry to make of far larger importance than the whereabouts of a hotel.

As I rose the stairs to my rooms the youth's face and talk returned to me, also what Raymond's wife had said, and then his speech about suicides, and I said to myself: "Anyhow, a man so light hearted and straightforward looking can have nothing criminal on his conscience."

When I fell asleep it must have been about midnight and as I dozed off it occurred to me as odd that, while I lay on my left side looking eastward, the young Englishman and the two travelers I had met must be just now in one line with me west and east for the tower to which he slept rose exactly between me and the New York hotel. "What to-morrow" was my last waking thought.

I might have slept ten minutes or a week, when my eyes opened. The great door that leads out on the roof was strangely white, doubtless, if was the moon that had stolen through the west window over my bed, and now shone almost level through the room—that was it. But no. Through the door there was a depth of whiteness like glass looking into a furnace lined with porcelain, and at its end stood in profile a still whiter figure, with one hand pendent slightly downward. I could not distinguish the features, but the figure recalled some one I had seen somewhere. In a moment it was gone, and I closed my eyes with a resolve not to forget that I had, as it were, caught in the situation of an hallucination a dream such as weaves itself out of random occurrences of the day.

Asleep in a moment! I don't know how long. Suddenly I was awake again. The light was stronger, the tunnel was not there, but just across the room at my door stood the same figure, the features not perfectly distinct, but the flowing hair and night dress unmistakable. Was it the young woman I had met? But what a look! I have seen actresses that sent the chills through me, and I have seen people in grief that this face froze the roots of one's being, it was so terrible in its striving to explain something that might be too horrible to utter—its figure was so torn by the effort to express by gesticulation what its tongue could not or would not impart.

Rubbing my eyes as I raised myself in bed, the apparition was gone, and by the broad light of the setting moon all the familiar pictures and odds and ends of the [illegible] I fell back again reassured.

Yet, I thought, Can it be possible something is happening to that girl [illegible] ever, wherever she may be, or to [illegible] she loves. And yet [illegible] able to break the bounds of [illegible] that between certain minds and minds the will power can unite favorable circumstances even based through space. I [illegible] I reviewed the scientific men who have given whole or partial adhesion to the [illegible] of psychic facts held in [illegible] [illegible] all [illegible] kind has been believed in by thousands of [illegible] I also sorely tempted to go up [illegible] relieved in the absence of my ambulatory [illegible] an hour with my delinquent object, no [illegible]

The subject was a wakeful one, but [illegible] charming its [illegible] [illegible] but luckily [illegible] [illegible] strangers with the look of one I knew in [illegible] yet could not name or place [illegible] desperate. And [illegible] she moved her right arm once, twice, [illegible] beckoning me in the direction of [illegible] tower. Was it she who was [illegible] somewhere in the neighborhood. When the young Englishman [illegible] needed help I sprang up, [illegible] but this time, following [illegible] applause, I thrust on some clothes [illegible] shoes, leaped across the room, [illegible] and ran out on the roof [illegible] to Raymond's windows, which look southward. The last ray of the moonlight shone obliquely into them.

I peered through the panes, and there, on his grand and protector's carpet, lay the young Englishman with a hole in his left temple and an ugly stain below his head.

He was beyond all aid, there was nothing to be done. After notifying Raymond and notifying the authorities I happened to look at my watch. It was hardly 1 o'clock. With the ambulance came the purveyors of news and learned all that we knew and more, for they discovered his proper name. When Raymond and I went dismally forth to get an early breakfast the papers had the story and the cry was already in the air through the quiet streets. Telling him nothing of my dream, I quietly went with me to breakfast at the New York hotel. We had finished, silently enough, when I clutched his arm.

"There!" I whispered, "that girl there came to me last night in a dream—an exact portrait—how do I know what it was? She came thrice; and I—fool that I was—delayed till the last singularly. Do you suppose I could have saved him had I gone at once?"

Raymond looked scared, as well he might, for there was nothing to show that my reason had not become unbalanced from shock. I reassured him by hastily telling of the meeting the day before, but succeeded only partially, for who believes in apparitions?

The young girl went quietly to her seat, pale as a ghost but not sorrowful looking, rather she appeared like some one who has been through great suffering and had then been permitted to forget; but the marks of the strain remain. She was joined by the elderly gentleman, and then I came to a fixed conclusion so far as their relations went, namely, that she was not his wife, not his niece, not his daughter, but stood to him in some confidential relation as of guardian to a ward. My reasons would not bear criticism, for they were founded on intangible shades of manner, mere nothings that often tell so much. She smiled and looked brave and cheerful in what was to me—but was it to anybody else?—a heartbreaking way, but went on with her meal quietly and in apparent content.

Then the devil of curiosity took possession of us, yes, even of Raymond, kind hearted of men. We hesitated, but both knew from the first that it must be done and hated ourselves cordially for doing it. Taking the paper with the account of the tragedy I marked the name of our late friend, called a waiter and told him to slip the newspaper near her plate when she was preoccupied.

Presently she unfolded a London weekly and began to read, so that the waiter found it easy to do as he was bid.

In a few moments she looked weary, glanced out of the window, dropped her paper. Her eyes fell pensively on her hands, thence to the marked journal. Ever since I have cursed curiosity and cursed my brutal deed. She gave a cry as terrible—well as terrible as the look of that apparition which came to me during the night—and fell forward on the breakfast table.

Conscience stricken at my crime, for it seemed nothing less, we hurried from the place. To this day I have never laid eyes on her or her companion.

Was she his sister his betrothed, his wife? Had he seen her the evening before, and if so, what was their interview? I do not know and shall never try to find out. Enough to have seen the wreck of two young lives and had no safety line to throw to one or the other.—"Cutis" in New York Times.

Jay Gould's Son George.

According to common reports, George Gould has settled down into a most exemplary husband since his marriage with Edith Kingdon. He has become so engrossed in his business that his old companions at the New York club are inclined to complain a little at his neglect of them. One of them said yesterday: "It is said often that a rich man's son settles down with the ambition to become richer than his father, but that is just what George Gould seems to have done. It is not so long since we used to see him every night or two at the club with a jolly lot of fellows around him. Now we never see him, but the fellows say that he has grown tremendously ambitious for vast wealth. He will be a very rich man without waiting for his father's demise."—New York Tribune.

Bruises in Woodwork.

Bruises may be taken out of the woodwork of scientific instruments by wetting with warm water. Then lay on the place brown paper about five layers thick, and apply a hot flat iron until the moisture is evaporated. If the bruise is not gone repeat the process. If the bruise is small merely soak it with warm water and apply a red hot poker very near the surface. Keep the wood wet, and in a few minutes the bruise will disappear.—Chicago Times.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made on April 2, 1881, by Orrin L. Abbott and Arsena E. Abbott, his wife, to Louisa J. Choate and Mary L. Choate, whereby the power of sale therein contained, has become operative. Said mortgage was on April 8th, 1881, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Lenawee County, and state of Michigan, in Liber 100 of mortgages on page 268. There is now claimed as due on said mortgage the sum of Two Hundred Forty-two and 70-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same, or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case provided, the lands mortgaged by said mortgage to wit: That certain piece or parcel of land situate in the township of Rollin in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section seven, (7) in town six (6) south, of range one (1) east, being forty (40) acres more or less, will on the 27th day of June, A. D., 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the east front door of the Court House in the city of Adrian in said county and state, to satisfy the said amount due with interest thereon, costs and all legal costs and charges of the foreclosure, including attorney's fees as provided by law and in said mortgage.

People of Oakland County Wild with Excitement.

PONTIAC, Mich., March 16th, 1887. On the 9th of December, 1886, I came from Orion to Pontiac, to visit my parents, and was taken suddenly ill. Dr. Galbreith of this place was called, and after making a careful examination of my case, desired council, and named as councillor Dr. McGraw, of Detroit. They met in council December 15th, made a careful examination and pronounced my disease Cancer of the Liver, and stated there was no hope for me as it was impossible to cure me. The pain was very severe and Dr. Galbreith gave his visits, administering soothing powders. A swelling began to form under my right ribs almost as large as my head, and I had given up all hopes of recovery. But having heard of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, I sent, February last, 1887, and bought a bottle of the syrup from Mr. Peter Schmitz, a druggist of this place, and took it as directed. About March 1st something broke and the swelling commenced to go down, until it has almost disappeared. Up to date I have taken two and one-half bottles of the syrup, and have so far recovered as to be able to visit my daughter, and am truly rejoicing that I am fast being relieved from such terrible pain, and desiring to acknowledge the benefit I have received in using your syrup, I send you this testimonial, hoping you will use it so that others who are afflicted may be benefited from pain as I have been.

Very truly,
CHARLES A. SPIER,
Of Orion, Michigan.

Children Starving to Death

On account of their inability to digest food, will find a most marvellous food and remedy in Scott's Emulsion. Very palatable and easy digested. Dr. S. W. Cohen of Waco, Texas, says: "I have used your's Emulsion in Infantile wasting. It not only restores wasted tissues, but gives strength and increases the appetite."

You can not resist having sympathy for the sick and afflicted, at the same time you often feel that it was by neglect of the proper means within their reach that they are suffering. We have recommended Gooch's Mexican Syrup often in case of consumption, coughs, and in fact all lung diseases, and have never had cause to regret it.

Biliousness.

We have tested its virtues, personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. We tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, but none of them gave us more than temporary relief; the Regulator not only relieved but cured us.—H. H. Jones, Ed. Whatever may be the general style of a wrap, whether short, long or only a very short cape, it is invariably made with what is known as the sling sleeve.

FREE TRADE.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufactures. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty six cents per dozen, has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sale of any medicine in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

Astronomy is a beautiful science. We are told that if a railway was to run from the earth to the nearest fixed star, and the fare was one penny for every hundred miles, and if you were to take a mass of gold to the ticket-office equal to twice the national debt—or $3,800,000,000—it would not be sufficient to pay for a ticket to the nearest fixed star aforesaid. If this be the case, it matters very little to us whether such a railway is ever constructed. It would be discouraging to go to the ticket-office with a mass of gold equal to $3,800,000,000, and be informed that the fare was $5,678,032,000. If the ticket agent wouldn't trust until we got back, we'd be compelled to forego the trip.—Norristown Herald.

CLAVERHOUSE'S SWEETHEART.

Was it my fault, or was it yours
That when you danced for me to see,
Your yellow gown caught in my spurs
And made a rent—I'm sorry yet?

I hired you for—but, as it pass,
I loved you—I'm sorry yet, I know;
I rode like one—I'm sorry yet—
In all the duties, and that was you!

Great Claverhouse looks at her and smiles,
He thinks that she is fair and true;

Ah, let him never see us turn,
He's not the kind that will be fooled;
I'm only one among his men,
And things were not to be regarded for such.

And dreaded lying—I shall get
My share, I suppose, and no end too.

And were a king to beside him as a
My sweet, that king's a cold fool to be sure!

Physical and Psychical Activity.

Starting from the common observation that when words fand thinking we can not at the same time lift heavy weights actively Dr. Loeb has attempted to estimate quantitatively the relation between physical and psychical activity. His method was to record his maximum grip on a dynamometer, then after a short rest, to begin some mental work; and while engaged in this, to record the maximum grip once more. The result was that the latter grip was decidedly less powerful, and that the difference between it and the former grip was the greater the more difficult and absorbing the mental process. For instance, in one case the normal grip with the left hand depressed the lever of the dynamometer to 77 degs., while reading and understanding a sentence could repeat the substance of it in his own words, a scientific work only to 65 degs., while simple reading it as so many sounds, 67 degs. Another gentleman, Professor Zuntz, could normally depress the lever to 69 degs.; but while reading a catalogue of names requiring little mental strain, to 53 degs.

Dr. Loeb's average maximum grip when not occupied with mental work was (mean of both hands) a depression of the lever to 85 degs.; while multiplying one number under ten by another such number the depression was 81 degs; when the two numbers were between ten and twenty only 35 degs.; when between twenty and thirty only 14 degs. This shows very clearly how the energy given over to the mental exertion is taken off from the muscular effort. It must, of course, be understood that these results have only a general value. The method presents many mechanical difficulties; the question of attention is an important factor; and Dr. Loeb simply offers these results as a preliminary statement of his intention to work upon this problem.—Science.

A Nice Present for a Friend.

Some time ago a friend of mine interested in zoology received one day a box from New Mexico without any mark upon it as to what it contained. He instructed his housekeeper to open it on finding it in his hall and went up stairs. Presently he was aroused by a considerable outcry and found that the box contained a creature about a yard long, not unlike a crocodile. It was really a lizard, and my friend immediately packed it off to the zoological gardens, with a letter to the curator, presenting it to the collection.

Next day, to his astonishment, he received a letter from the curator, saying: "Pray, next time you send us an animal for the collection, warn us of its character, for this lizard you send us is a poisonous one. The moment it was taken out of its box it bit a keeper, and the animal almost immediately died. As we took it out of the box without any hesitation this might just as well have happened to the person who unpacked the monster."

The existence of this poisonous lizard was unknown to the recipient, and was, I believe, not known at the zoological gardens. My friend wrote out to his correspondent in New Mexico, and found that he too was unaware of the poisonous nature of the animal, and had only sent it on account of its rarity. "But," said the New Mexican with charming frankness in writing, "now you mention it, I do remember that one of these lizards bit a man, and certainly that man died."—Liverpool Post.

New Use for Delivery Stamps.

The heads of the departments who have to deal with office seekers are considerably annoyed at a new use which has been made of the special delivery stamp. Persons in want of employment and failing to get an audience, or who cannot obtain any answer to their communications, now make sure of the delivery of their inquiries or requests by investing ten cents in a special delivery stamp. The letter so marked goes direct to the secretary or to whoever it is addressed, and if an answer is not obtained, there is a satisfaction in knowing that the missive has reached its intended destination, and that the official memory has been jogged and his promises made during the winter recalled to him.

With the use of the special delivery stamp there can be no claim on the part of the official that he did not receive a letter and that it had been filed without his knowledge in the regular order of business. There seems to be no escape from the workings of this new scheme unless private secretaries are directed to receipt for all mails so stamped.—Globe Democrat.

Thoroughly Content.

How a young creole girl enjoyed herself at her first ball. Her red lips smiled, her lithe form was all a quiver. She saw Arthemise and rushed over to kiss her—as young girls kiss each other. "Oh," said Olympe, clasping her palms and rolling her heavenly eyes heavenward, "oh, mon Dieu! but I have amuse myself this night! I have been so gay—I have been happy!" "Yes? What do you do?" asked Arthemise. "Me? Oh, I go out to supper with my papa, I dance one dance with my cousin Albert, I dance seex dance with my brother Jules, an' then—I sit by my mamma!"—New Orleans Picayune.

Not to Be Doubted.

A Philadelphia physician says that a great deal of what passes for heart disease is only mild dyspepsia; that nervousness is commonly bad temper, and that two-thirds of the so called neuralgia is nothing but laziness. Probably he doesn't tell his patients so; but there is no doubt a good deal of truth in what he says.—American Analyst.

The Lesseps Family.

In the Lesseps family each child, as soon as he or she measures thirty inches high, is put on the back of a pony and trained by the father to figure with honor in the equestrian battalion, which the Parisians have become accustomed to look for daily in the Bois de Boulogne.—Paris Cor. SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR is an affection of the Liver and can be thoroughly cured by that Grand Regulator of the Liver and Biliary Organs,

BILIOUSNESS

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

MANUFACTURED BY
J. H. Zeilin & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

I was afflicted with a severe cold which settled on my lungs, which resulted in a severe attack of pleurisy. I then took cold again, which settled upon my liver, from which I suffered great misery. I then tried the Simmons Liver Regulator, a description of which I had seen in the papers, and which I had heard highly recommended by physicians of Louisville, Ky., but to all purposes, entirely lost, I decided to try Simmons Liver Regulator. It soon relieved me from the pain in my side, and completely restored me to the full enjoyment of health.

MORE WORDS OF PRAISE.

Rheumatism a Blood Disease entirely cured.

ROCHESTER, April 1, 1886.

To the Pardee Medicine Co.,

GENTS:—Allow me to say a few words in praise of Dr. Pardee's Rheumatic Remedy, and if what I have to say will induce others who are afflicted with neuralgia or rheumatism to use it, I shall feel that I have been the means of doing some little good to my fellow men. December 27, 1885, while at work in the shop, I was taken suddenly with sharp, piercing pains and was compelled to leave the shop. The next morning I was unable to rise, and I grew worse daily although I was under the best medical treatment. But I obtained no relief until I began using Dr. Pardee's Remedy, which I did March 17th, and after using it three days, I could walk about the house. I continued to use it and improved rapidly every day. I am now at work and entirely free from pain, and have gained five pounds in weight, but I shall continue the remedy until I feel sure the poison is out of my blood, for I am certain that the rheumatism is a blood disease. You are at liberty to use my name or refer anyone to me, for I shall be only too glad to recommend it to anyone who is suffering as I was. I know it will cure any case of rheumatism, if used as directed.

I am, very truly yours,
GEORGE DOANE.

Foreman at Goodger & Naylor's shoe factory, 65 South St. Paul street, residence, 6 Griffith street.

Forty Years a Sufferer.

Mr. E. W. Howell, of No. 2 College street, writes that he has suffered with rheumatism in his hips, knees and arms, for forty years, and that he has not known what it was to be free from pain until he began the use of Dr. Pardee's Remedy. He has used ten bottles and has not felt any rheumatic pains or symptoms since.

Ask your druggist for Dr. Pardee's Remedy, and take no other. Price $1 per bottle; six bottles, $5.

Mrs. Alva Hendershot is on the sick list.

Cora Bush is visiting friends at Saline.

Carrie Hardcastle of Evans Lake, spent Sunday with Mrs. Ella Lancaster.

D. St. John & Son, attended the funeral of Mrs. Malu and Edward Tolph.

Grace Shutes, of Bridgewater, visited her cousin Della Benham and Gertie Millspaugh, the latter part of last week.

May Woodward, of Tecumseh, visited her friend, Clyde Marsteller, Thursday and Friday.

Frank Downs, who has been at work in the woolen mill at Peru, Indiana, returned home last Saturday.

Ida Fullerton, preceptress in the high school, went home to Ypsilanti, Saturday, to spend her vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Pardsley, of Saline, were the guests of John Bush and family, the latter part of last week.

May Fuller came down from Manchester Wednesday, to attend the marriage of her cousin, Hattie Jackson.

There was an amendment meeting at town hall Sunday evening, addressed by A. P. Codington, of Tecumseh, and also, a large gathering of like interest, at the same place, in the evening.

Virginia Daniels, who has been attending school here for the last term, is to teach the young ideas how to shoot, in the Sand Lake district, this spring. She has the best wishes of her many friends and classmates, for abundant success.

Ella Swift and Gertie Millspaugh, have been secured to teach the ideals in the Center and Allen districts—respectively—in Bridgewater. Southern Bridgewater is largely represented in the attendance at our school, and the appreciation of its advantages are noticeable in the awards of its directors.

It is reported an editor spent some time last Friday visiting the telephone office and several other points, looking for an item, before he discovered April 1 had got here. Don't mention it in the postoffice, kind reader—we may have been misinformed.

The third story of the woolen mill has been completed, and soon the last clink of the trowel will be heard on the fourth and last story, and if the machinery, which is to complete the outfit, arrives on time, the employees will yet celebrate the happy May-day within the new enclosure. Too much credit cannot be bestowed upon all concerned, in the promptness with which subscriptions both in labor and money have been met, and contractor, Mr. Meusing, is entitled to no small share of the same, as his masterly efforts to overcome the many difficulties, have in no wise proved futile. The contractor of the masonry says eight days good weather will let him off.

The election passed off quietly, and although there was much interest manifested, very little sparing was done, and though the amendment majority was small, it was gained, as far as we know, without the aid of other than a general wish for the right to prevail, by men of all parties. The Democratic ticket—with the exception of Treasurer and one constable—was elected, by majorities ranging from 1 to 40.

Bridgewater gave 117 Democratic majority; 84 against the amendment.

Last Saturday, as George Freese was driving his horse up to the cars, he became unmanageable and George [illegible] circuit of two or three streets, entered the cemetery, circled around there a couple of times, and no damage was done, until upon leaving the ground, the buggy came in contact with a shade tree, and the horse concluded his race by depositing himself upon the top a fence, elsewhere. George, however, was unharmed, and did not get left. Monday, but was elected constable by a handsome majority.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Monday, March 28th, was the date of a very pleasant event which occurred at the house of Wright Doty, in the Evan's Lake neighborhood, Franklin. The occasion being the fifth anniversary of the marriage of the host and hostess, and although the March lion growled and showed his teeth quite ferociously on the morning of that day, nearly all of the invited guests were present, many coming from the neighboring villages of Springville and Onsted, and although many met there for the first time and were strangers to each other, there was an entire lack of the formality that generally characterizes such occasions.

Thanks are due to many of those present for pleasantly entertaining the company with music, both vocal and instrumental, and especially to Mrs. Allen Wells for some finely rendered ballad singing. Her pleasant genial manners and fine voice won many words of praise.

After a time spent in this way, the guests were seated at tables groaning under a load of choice and tempting viands, and the rapidity with which they disappeared gave ample proof of the quality of the same; and in an incredibly short space of time the tables were much relieved, after which the guests did the groaning. The company numbered about sixty-five persons who brought with them many tokens of love and friendship, which were fully appreciated by Mr. & Mrs Doty, and received with many warm and heartfelt thanks, and after a day spent in a manner that can only be remembered with pleasure, they separated wishing them many a pleasant return of the day thus commemorated. Following is the list of presents left, with the names of the donors:

WHAT IS IT? AND WHAT IT IS.

Papillon (Clarke's extract of flax) Skin Cure, like many other inestimable benefits to mankind, was discovered by accident. The proprietor, engaged in the preparation of certain plants, from time to time noticed the effect of working in the pulp vats on the skin. If there was present any cutaneous eruptions, warts, blemishes or scrofulous symtoms, all disappeared as if by magic. After experimenting ten years, it has become a scientific fact and a priceless boon to the human race. From giving away a few bottles, the demand has increased until the sale for the past two years amounts to 1,032,000 bottles. Large bottles only $1.00.

It's true my butcher's bill is due;
It's true my prospects all look blue—
But don't let that unsettle you!
Never you mind!
Roll on! [It rolls on.

Papillon (Clark's extract of flax) Catarrh Cure, from an experiment, has grown to be the acknowledged superior of any remedy for similar purposes. Purely vegetable and scientically prepared, it is absolutely harmless, and effects cures where all other known remedies and the most learned medical talent fail. That it is a favorite with all classes is evidenced by the fact that during the past two years, 86,000 gallons have been sold. Positively cures Catarrh, Hay Fever, Colds, etc. Large bottles $1.00.

For sale by A. S. Doty.

Morenci people are glad because they have at last an attraction, although it is a dead one. The skeleton of an Indian has been dug up. It is a big one, and the OBSERVER says the remains "now lie in state." While they are in this condition the Observer man will take a vacation, for heretofore he has done as much lying as any man in the state, as well as the northern part of Ohio.

The City Band attired themselves in full uniform last Saturday afternoon and had a group photograph taken. Lavern Wheeler manipulated the camera, and obtained a fine negative. The picture will be mounted on a card about 14 by 20 inches in size.

Messers. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.: Have taken Hall's Catarrh Cure. Had catarrh all my life; am 48 years old. Had asthma 19 years, and a dreadful cough for five years. Have taken everything; went to the Hot Springs; I have doctored with the doctors here; I have done nothing but take medicine for 16 years. When I commenced using Hall's Catarrh Cure I was almost dead. I sent for the doctor the day I got Hall's Catarrh Cure, and I told him that I would die any way and that I would try your medicine. I was very bad. How I suffered for 6 years! I could hardly breath at times. I saw Hall's Catarrh Cure advertised in the papers and commenced taking it. I would have been under the ground to-day if it had not been for that. I have not had one bad spell of coughing since. In breathing my head feels well and I am well. It has done me a thousand dollar worth of good. There are ten of my friends, on seeing what it had done for me, taking it, is helping them. I only wish that every one who has catarrh, asthma and a bad cough could see me, so that I could tell them all to take it. All that know me here know how I have suffered. (I have been here since 1858,) and say to me that "I am so glad you found something that could cure you." Everyone says, "how much better you look." The doctors say they are glad I found Hall's Catarrh Cure as they could not cure me.

I cannot express my gratitude to you for the good Hall's Catarrh Cure has done me. You can use as much of this letter as will do the afflicted good. Publish it to the whole world—it is all true and they should know it.

Wheat and clover need rain very badly.

Some farmers are cultivating up their wheat and sowing with oats.

Wheat generally is winter killed more than was expected until lately.

Wouldn't it be a wise step to remove the delapidated sheds in the rear of the church yard, and either erect new ones, or build a tight fence in the place of the old ones.

Rumor says that some of our temperance advocates are going to give the Detroit Evening News, Adrian Times and Weekly Press the G. B., for the stand they took during the campaign in regard to the amendment.

The W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of the President, Mrs. Sarah Rappleye, on South street, next week Tuesday evening.

Friday night of last week the boys met at Cottage Hall and organized a base ball association, with a full set of officers, Prof. J. D. Huston as Capt.

W. R. Wilson comes to the front with a hens egg that measures 6¼ in. one way by 7¼ the other, and yet some fanatics think hens do not pay.

Anna Osborn has been under the Doctor's care for the past few days, but is on the gain at present.

Burton Nichols has become a citizen having moved in James Pocklington's house on North street.

W. E. Doty of Holloway, was in the village, Tuesday.

Etta Coddington of Tecumseh, was the guest of Loana Davidson Sunday.

Jessie Potter and wife spent Sunday with friends in Tecumseh.

Eugene Pilbeam and Scot Sherman left for Delta, Ohio, to work on a rail road grade, last week Wednesday.

James Campbell of St. John, spent a few days here with relatives, the fore part of the week.

Put Woodard and wife of Tecumseh, were the guests of the Osgood sisters over Sunday.

Agent Frank Allen and wife Sundayed at their parents.

Sunday evening service will begin at 7 o'clock, until further notice.

School in Dist. No. 5, began Monday with Florence French of Adrian, as Preceptress.

Lou Arner is in Milan this week with relatives, and making a general impression on the young lords of that city.

The L. C. Social will not hold any more socials until further notice.

By order of the President.

Mr. Roberts of Mason, was the guest of Miss Nellie Freer from Saturday until Tuesday.

The building committee of the Library will have plans and specifications ready for examination by Monday of next week and will receive bids for the same.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Farmers are very busy getting ready to put in their crops; several sowed oats early last week.

Wm. Witheral and family are back in their old home in Franklin.

John Burtless is running George Knapp's farm.

Mr. Luce has been hauling the stone for a new house, which he contemplates building next summer.

Many fields of wheat are looking very spotted; a good rain would change its appearance materially.

Presented to Geo. and Mary Cole on the 12th inst., one fine fat baby boy.

A duck at A. B. Wisner's, performed the extraordinary feat of laying two eggs on the same morning; one about half the ordinary size; another duck egg weighed five ozs.

A feeling of deep and almost universal regret prevails in Franklin at the defeat of the amendment. In the drouth-ridden, grass-hopper cursed, struggling young Kansas, prohibition, and now woman suffrage in cities of the 1st, 2d, and 3d, class. In peaceful, cultured Michigan, with her overflowing granaries, orchards and fisheries, the rum shop, and the brave women who dared go to the polls to assist and encourage a hesitating brother, derided and insulted.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Miss Alda Peck of London, Monroe county, is visiting at her uncle's, J. Spalding's.

School began a week ago in the Bradley district with Miss Cynthia Monaghan as teacher. Sadie Taylor resumed her duties in Dist. No. 3, on Monday, April 11.

Mary Cummins and Minnie Wisner this week enter on their work in the Nichols and Hall districts, Manchester.

Luella Taylor is spending a few weeks with her aunt, Mrs. H. W. Woods of Hillsdale.

John Lee who has been working [illegible] has moved away, and Mr. Brighton now occupies the house.

Wesley Pawson and family visited friends in Cambridge last week.

Farmers of this vicinity have generally commenced plowing for oats, all complain of dry weather and some places the ground is too dry to do good job. Wheat having been badly winter killed, and now dry weather following makes the worst looking show for wheat we have had for several years.

ONSTED ODDS.

M. O. Aldrich sowed one field of oats last week.

Several ladies from here attended the quarterly meeting at Jackson Saturday and Sunday.

E. S. Ross went to Adrian Sunday afternoon to see his sons, E. and L. B. Ross.

The plate glass front is being put in the hotel this, Tuesday, morning.

Our report about the saloon having closed for good, was wrong. It has again opened its doors.

Mechanics are nearly all busy here now, especially painters. Many are taking advantage of the low price of paint.

The spring term of school commenced at this place last Monday with twenty-nine pupils. The number will reach thirty-five when they all get there.

A number of weeks since, Mr. D. Furman of Sand Creek, Mich., while assisting at the revival meetings then being held at the church, lost a pair of gold-bowed glasses. We hear that some one from Tecumseh found a pair of glasses near the church, but not seeing them advertised in the HERALD did not know to whom they belonged. Mr. Furman can't tell the number on the glasses, but can identify them and will do so if the finder will send them to Rev. John Morey, at Onsted. Mr. Morey will return them to the finder if they do not prove to be the ones lost by Mr. Furman. As Mr. Morey is not well known in Tecumseh, the finder may, if they prefer, send the glasses to the Post Master at Onsted, or direct to Mr. Furman.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Farmers are busy—Oats and peas are going in lively. Wheat is drying up and many fields will be plowed up for spring crops.

The drouth is injuring the tile trade.

The new store is doing quite a business and is well supplied with dry goods and groceries. The streets presented quite a business appearance last Saturday.

Mrs. Henry Karcher of Addison, returned home Monday from visiting friends here.

Those wishing gallon jugs filled with maple syrup at $1 each, can be supplied at G. V. Osgood's to the number of 40.

This township voted 10cts for woodchuck scalps.

May Bunting of Saline, died Friday morning, April 8th, of consumption aged 19 years.

Grandma Martin, mother of M. J. Martin, died Saturday, April 9th. Aged 93 years.

School will commence next Monday the 18th, with Miss Mead of Milan, as mistress.

W. E. Spaulding of Franklin started for Kansas, Monday.

We notice that the HERALD has the inside track on the 'big yes majority.' It is about the only newspaper in the county that takes an interest in the general welfare of humanity.

We also notice that the Evening News has dropped its feathers since the next day after election, when it came out with its "18,171 majority against the Amendment" and "the decline of Puritanism." The continental admixture from the Teuton, the Sclav, the Celt, and the Italian is not so great outside of the city of Detroit as it apprehended. It has now got down to 3000 majority and is quite worried over the prospect of contesting the frauds, intimidations and repeatings in the cities and around the borders.

We hope that Prof. Dickey will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer. The idea of an election being taken by storm and carried thro' fraud by the roughs of this country.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Building and painting appears to be the order of the day.

Chas. Underwood, who is very sick, they think is on the gain. He has our best wishes.

C. D. Lowe has bought, all told, in this neighborhood, about 50 cars of stock, and shipped them from this place. They are loading at this writing, two cars, making 32 in all. He has shipped from other points, over [illegible] cars this season. Who can beat that for one year's shipping.

Our R. R. Agent, W. J. Clark, has a man in the office to assist him. It is a good thing. I can't see how he got through the work he did, billing what he does, some days, four cars, and some days more.

The saw mill is running in good shape. They say they can cut—without any trouble—10,000 feet of lumber per day.

The farmers are sowing their oats and getting corn ground ready. They say that the ground never was in better condition than at present.

Wm. Freyer's horses ran away Monday evening. They started on the east side of the rail road and ran into Dick Rixon's team, jumping on the wagon. There was a hook belonging to a chain and dangling lose, which caught the best horse just forward of the hind legs, and tearing him completely open so that they had to wrap a blanket around him to keep his bowels from falling out. The horse lived about an hour after he was hurt.

EXPERIMENTS WITH SEED CORN.

I have been making a few tests of seed-corn lately, and although I have proved nothing new, still perhaps it will not be uninteresting. On the 18th of March I put the following kinds of corn in a box of earth: 100 kernels of kiln dried, dent corn, 100 kernels of sun-dried dent corn, 100 kernels of corn selected from crib—the latter was as dry as I ever saw put into a crib—100 kernels sweet corn, kiln dried, some of it taken from the stocks when good boiling ears, 50 kernels kiln-dried field corn taken when in the milk. The following is the result:

Two days after planting I examined it, not every kernel but enough, to satisfy myself. The kiln-dried corn (1st. 100) sprouted one-half an inch; 2d. and 3d. lots commenced to swell; sweet corn showed sprouts somewhat more than first lot; 4th lot sprouted the most of any.

March 28th I examined every kernel. First lot every kernel sprouted with an even length of root 2 inches long; 2d. and 3d. lots 190 kernels sprouted but lacking the vigor of 1st lot in not being as forward and being uneven; 4th lot, sweet-corn, every kernel was sprouted vigorously, showing longer sprouts than 1st; 5th lot, field corn taken when in milk, every kernel sprouted and the most forward of any.

This test I think shows conclusively, first that crib corn or sun-dried corn for seed is dear at any price, and should not be planted although a test may show every kernel to sprout. A small outlay of time in the fall will secure your seed-corn in good share, which if hung up over the kitchen stove and thoroughly dried may save you many dollars.

HENRY WILSON.

The Observer, for the first time in its history, can now boast that it enjoys the advantage of having its several presses run by steam power. This week we placed in our office an Acme engine, two horse power, manufactured by Charles P. Willard & Co., Chicago, and furnished to us by their local agent, Peter Coddington. It is a beauty, substantially made, and does its required work with perfection.—Morenci Observer.

Some of the kids are down in the mouth this morning. Some time ago they had located a barrel of cider in the cellar of a Hudson citizen, and since that time had drawn regularly thereon. They would get a fruit can or some dish, draw it full, and go to the barn to vote for the amendment. The lady of the house got onto the racket, and last night found a fruit can full of cider, all ready to enter into the rising generation. She put in a bounteous dose of ipecac, and awaited results. In due time the cider followed that which had gone before, but shortly after there was a commotion in the several stomachs, and the result was such an upheaval as is rarely seen in Hudson. This morning there are pale faces among the lads, who have but little inclination to seek inspiration from the fermented juice of the apple.—Hudson Post.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson for April 17.

JOSEPH MAKES HIMSELF KNOWN.

NOTES.—"All them that stood by him."—He would have certainly had always a large body of officers and servants paying respect to him, besides those waiting on business. The public office of an Eastern ruler is open to the multitude, and is in a public court.——"Caused every man to go out."—This could be done, but the rooms outside would be closed only by curtains, if at all, so that sound could easily pass through, and Joseph's weeping be heard.——"Wept aloud."—And no one thought the worse of him for it. In the East people do not think it unmanly to express their feelings freely by tears, and often they cry when no tears follow.——"The house of Pharaoh heard."—Perhaps heard of it. More likely the court of Joseph was in the same building with that of Pharaoh, and Pharaoh's household, of whom Joseph was one, might have heard it is well as the other Egyytians in attendance.——"Doth my father yet live."—Of course he had been told that already, but then he inquired as a stranger, now as a son.——"They were troubled."—By their consciousness and their fears.——"Come near to me."—That he might thus express his affection to them.——"Whom ye sold into Egypt." He says it not to excite their fears, but to prove to them that he is really what he says he is.——"God did send me."—Yes, and they sent him, but that he purposly forgets.——"The famine."—The famines of Egypt were generally caused by a failure of the Nile to reach its ordinary level; sometimes by too great a flood. Also, in the regions of Syria a famine would be caused by a lack of rain, or by locusts. In the East it was impossible to relieve a famine by cartvans, because if no grass can be had, beasts of burden would in a few days eat up all the grain they could carry. Only water carriage, or railroads make famine impossible by making it feasible to carry the products of one land to another.——"The land of Goshen." The nearest part of Egypt to Palestine, in the northeastern corner, where they would be a defense of Egypt against invaders.—"And the flocks." —Yet their living in Egypt would civilize them and make them give up their nomadic shepherd life.

INSTRUCTION.—To weep is not necessarily a sign of weakness. There may be a time to weep. It may be better, when one is in deep grief, to weep than to keep silence.

But self-restraint is generally a better thing than to give free vent to one's feelings. That is a Western virtue, which comes with a higher civilization and religion. Don't let your inner and deeper feelings be too much made public. Keep a great deal to yourself.

We have a right to have our confidants, before whom we will unburden our feelings, while we keep them from the unsympathetic.

It was very kind in Joseph to tell his brothers not to be sorry, but it would have been wrong in them not to repent of their sin. Those who do wrong may never excuse it; but those who have suffered wrong should make all the excuses they can.

God overrules all evil by bringing good out of it. The evil is no less evil, but God's goodness shines out of the evil. The evil is in the intent, and if the evil intent was not attained God must have all the credit of the failure of the evil purpose.

It is true that God sent Joseph. But Joseph had abilities, ambitions which showed in his dreams and character. God chooses his subject wisely. It is not everybody that can expect such success, because others do not have the qualifications.

Joseph showed his delicacy in not exposing his brethren's fault before the Egyptians. He had to speak of their great sin against him, and he did not care to have it known. There are family skeletons which had better be kept in the family closet. Hide the faults of our dear ones all you possibly can.

When Joseph made himself known he did not run to kiss him. They were silent and afraid. They had good reason to be. Think how different it would have been if they had not injured their brother. One whose sin is found out can only hold his tongue. If he is guilty he has no excuse and should confess it and be silent. Sin does not pay.

Parents care for their children when they are young. When children grow up, they ought to care for their parents, to give them a good home, if necessary, and show them all possible attention.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, APR 14

PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MICHIGAN—EXECUTIVE OFFICE. The forest fame of our peninsular State is fast vanishing before the woodman's axe. Our natural groves of maple, oak, and pine are being hurriedly chased over the hills and down the valleys by fields of sunshine and waving grain. The pioneer fathers yet with us can tell of more wonderful changes they have seen wrought in the face of our beautiful State than can the added generations to come. The fertile soil which longed for the warmth of sunshine when they came, to-day rejoices in the cooling shadows of a spared tree. We build our fortunes to decay, we plant our deeds to live and grow. He who plants a tree by the wayside may not himself rest beneath its shade, but thousands of weary travelers may stop to breathe a blessing on his deed. And it is with a thought for the days to come and for those who are to inherit us, that the beautiful custom of thus publicly proclaiming an Arbor Day is now fast followed by your humble servant. I therefore respectfully and earnestly recommend that by the cottage, the mansion, the church, the school-house, the street, in the cemetery or in such other place as may be chosen, a tree may be planted on Monday, the 25th day of April, next, by every person in our State with whom it is possible. And that it may be done with a united purpose, I would suggest that each tree be dedicated to the memory of some friend, whose deeds of kindness or heroism you would keep green. And it is with confidence drawn from the past that I sincerely hope a people, unsurpassed in intelligence, unexcelled in public spirit, loyal to friends and benefactors, and proud of the best heritage in the family of States, will, on that day, add living ornaments for the blessing of posterity that only the seasons can finish for enjoyment.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the Great Seal of the State of Michigan to be affixed at Lansing, the 7th day of April, in the year of our Lord.

C. G. LUCE.

By the Governor:

O. B. OSMUN,
Secretary of State.

Pomeroy says that the boys must go. And all other sensible people say the same thing.

The latest returns from Rhode Island show that the Democrats have not only elected the State ticket, but have carried the legislature also.

Wiggins, the weather prophet, is heard from again. He is predicting some big earthquakes for the dog days. They will arrive next August.

In the death of Rev. Dr. Pilcher the M. E. church of Michigan loses one of its oldest and most venerable ministers. He was a pioneer of the church in its early history, and will go down to the grave mourned by hundreds of good people all over the State.

The New Haven News hits the nail on the head in these words:

—The Democratic party, in short, is in a situation where it can recruit itself very strongly from elements which up to the nomination of Mr. Blaine, the repubicans always claimed as their own. At a time when voting independence is active, the party has a rare chance to incorporate with itself a body of voters not only respectable in numbers, but high in standing, broad in moral influence and always willing and eager to put the shoulder to the wheel when a civic reform is at stake.

The Prohibition State committee claim that heavy frauds have been committed on the amendment vote in Detroit also in the new county of Gogebic in the upper peninsula. We doubt. Whether anything can be made out of the frauds in Detroit, but there seems to be substantial evidence in the other case to prove the polling of several hundred fraudulent votes. The committee will make a thorough investigation, and there is no doubt that Gogebic county may be thrown out on the official count.

Dr. Town, of Roxbury, made a public declaration of his intention to vote for the prohibitory amendment, and he did vote for it. A. O. Abbott voted to submit the measure to the People, but worked and voted against it on election day. We know of many temperance Republicans who declare with emphasis, that Mr. Abbott will never go to the legislature again if they can help it. Had they taken the Gazette's advice last fall and elected Dr. Town, this legislative district with a majority of 1,600 in favor of the amendment, would have a representative in accord with their principles, and one they could depend upon to serve them honestly and faithfully.—Hudson Gazette.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 8th.

It looks very much as if the name of Mr. Whitney will live in history as the Naval Secretary. He has just taken another step towards the improvement and building up of the navy by an announcement inviting sealed proposals from the shipbuilders of the United States for the building of five new iron vessels. All Americans with yards equipped for complete speed is an important consideration, and extra premium for extra quarter knots is guaranteed contractors.

Three of the vessels are to be cruisers and must be completed within two years. The others are to be gun boats and must be completed within a year and a half. It is also intended that one of the vessels shall be built on or near the coast of the Pacific ocean, and two of them on or near the coast of the Atlantic ocean.

There has been a good deal of comment here in regard to the withdrawal from the National Drill, which takes place next month, of two prominent Alabama companies—the True Blues and the Greys—because some colored militia will participate in the contest. It is argued by the managers of the coming event that since it is to be a national encampment and drill, they have enlisted civil and military or moral force in the guarantee of a united soldiery on account of their color. The drill has the recognition of the government, in this sense, as a national affair, and is simply intended to illustrate the proficiency of the soldiery in military maneuvers.

The social aspects of the occasion are quite another thing. Soldiers who come on the same field are not obliged to put up at the same hotel, or eat at the same table. As citizens they are still privileged to select their own associates. Colored troops took part in President Cleveland's inauguration. They were assigned a place in the ceremonies attending the laying of the corner-stone of the City Hall at Virginia's Capital. The managing committee of the national drill, which is composed almost exclusively of Democrats and Southern men, did not hesitate to admit the two colored companies which applied for entry. And, indeed, it is not quite clear why the militia system of the country is in any more danger from the colored element which is lawfully recognized in its organization, than is the regular army, which enlists colored men in its service and converts them into soldiers.

The first day that the Inter-State Commerce Commission was empowered to act judicially, which was on Tuesday, the day that the law went into effect, it selected permanent office quarters. The next day it announced its first official act—the suspension of the long and short haul clause as affecting the entire Southern Railway and Steamship Association. It is suspended for a period not to exceed ninety days, and is subject to revocation at any time by the Commission.

The Washington home of the new Commission is a beautiful new building with white marble front, recently erected by the Baltimore Sun company. Each Commissioner will have a spacious apartment there to himself. Applications for appointments under the Commission continue to come in by every mail. One applicant writes that he is about to take a pleasure trip to Europe, and that should the Commission require his services before the date fixed for his return they may cable him at his expense.

When the champion pugilist of the world visited the White House one day this week, it is alleged that in an unguarded moment he gave expression to the opinion that a series of Turkish baths would improve the President's health. It was fortunate for the miracle developer that he did not belong to the Medical Association of the District of Columbia, or he would be investigated for expressing sentiments so in conflict with the sacred ethics of the Medical society.

This is in connection with the action through which Dr. Sawyer has just passed for having remarked recently at an evening club that the manner of life pursued by the President was in danger of leading to apoplexy. The Medical Association of Washington have discussed Dr. Sawyer's comment on the Executive's health, and unanimously some hyper-ethical doctors argue that as the President's case was in the hands of another member of the profession any expression of opinion on the subject was unprofessional and in violation of Dr. Sawyer.

THE NUN.

She lies upon the cold stone of her cell,
And the night deepens, and the night is chill
Fasting and faint, she nerves her flagging will Remembering the inevitable Hell

And "Love, Love, Love," she hears and answers still,
The Christ frowns high against an angry hill
Her heart and Love would roam a lovely dell

Fasting and faint she lies. The chill hours Night,
Leads the calm stars across the plains of Light

Earth shutters. When shall slumber seal her (Vesper)
Who, crying with immortal pain the name
"Heaven, Heaven," lies, parted from its flame,
Hoping in the heart of God to Pardon?

DOGS OF THE GYPSIES.

The Approach of a Strange Footstep in Camp—Large Proclivities.

But there is something amiable in the positive similarity (in language) between gypsies and gypsy people. In many days I have sometimes found rest in lone places, where the pots from the kettle stacks hung up for a long morning over the crackling fire, in such a way as to keep on drowsiness speedily, and seen a half dozen dogs with their noses all sympathetically quivering from the stacks and sweet smelling smoking odors of cooking food, and been startled by the facial resemblance between them and the old men and spae wives crooning near. The dogs would appear to be half asleep. So would the gypsies. Every few moments an eye would open and a quick look note that everything was as it should be. So it was with the gypsies. The dogs would weave and sway back and forth as if about to break into a whining chant. So would the gypsies.

Now and then the approach of a strange footstep, some unusual movement among the horses and raising of the crackling fire, would cause one or more of the dogs to wakefulness if from a deep sleep, instantly rearch straight. When the suspicious sound came from and if everything was well, rearch straight back again and in a moment appear to sleep as in every slumber. It does seem to the same movement by gypsies hangers-on of times. [illegible] of it have some of Shanghai and make it you like, in both final expression still more remarkable in certain ways of walking in movements and in looks. Some of these are [illegible] and handsome. But these dogs and their people have the same wary, lulling, light movement upon their feet. They are keenly alert. They shuffle and sway, and in the presence of others than their kind make unnecessary and unaccountable dives here and there.

The gypsy dog is seldom frisky. A tremendous wagging of the tail is the only exception, if that may be so called. And, too, for all you would know, they are voiceless. I never heard a genuine gypsy dog really bark. He is like the bulldog in this. There is now and then, under great stress of excitement, an expulsion of breath, a half bark and a sort of half yaul, but even this is unusual. He is as soft and still on his feet as a cat. He is brave and strong, and will take hold of a horse or mule, or a man, and remain holding on until the necessity for the performance is over. He has also a peculiarly preconjured eye. In his case it seems to give him so serious a demeanor that I have often noticed proud and arrogant dogs from the town of [illegible] approach the camp with the manner of predetermined extermination strong upon them, suddenly deter the matter and begin to [illegible] themselves to speedy flight.

So, too, he is as much the guardian of the camp and all its belongings, night and day, as the old spae wives of which in this [illegible] I have already written. Let any prowling animal approach the camp, a [illegible] and the whole quarter [illegible] good [illegible] their boxes, and, whatever the prowling thing may be, it must instantly [illegible] its canvas will remain. All the [illegible] as with a human care not to disturb the camp. If there be human [illegible] and [illegible] surrounded by them. No one is brave enough at night to withstand on weighty reason to retire as best he may or come into camp with his [illegible] and [illegible] same [illegible] predecessors. The idea [illegible] of gypsy dogs [illegible] Vagabond [illegible] Scotch.

Waste of Means and Energy.

There is an impression that the Chinese will be the third year of the two. Suppose it was. Does that [illegible] the robbery of the world? Of what use is a yacht unless expense [illegible] purposes? When we proposed these questions to ourselves we are brought face to face with the fact that this expenditure is wasting a great deal of energy for no practical purpose. If the time and the money and the energy which are wasted in [illegible] and all the numberless forms of amusement were devoted to [illegible] and [illegible] progress [illegible] would have [illegible] and the good of arts are [illegible] in new and improved to preserve while the [illegible] which we possess and could be [illegible] in their development are wasted on those of no established utility to our [illegible] who are to come after us. Home Politeness.

A boy who is polite to his father and mother is likely to be polite to every one else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy [illegible] spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, for the impression which we make in society, coveting the good opinions of those who are in a sense a part of ourselves, and who will continue to sustain and be interested in us, notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character. We say to every lad and to every girl, cultivate the habits of courtesy and propriety at home—in the sitting room and the kitchen as well as in the parlor—and you will be sure to [illegible] to deport yourself in a pleasing and attractive manner. When one has a pleasant smile and a graceful demeanor, it is a satisfaction to know these are not put on, but that they belong to the character, and are manifest at all times and under all circumstances.

An End to Bone Scraping

Edward Shepard, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well."

Astronomy is a beautiful science. We are told that if a railway was to run from the earth to the nearest fixed star, and the fare was one penny for every hundred miles, and if you were to take a mass of gold to the ticket office equal to twice the national debt—or $3,800,000,000—it would not be sufficient to pay for a ticket to the nearest fixed star aforesaid. If this be the case, it matters very little to us whether such a railway is ever constructed. It would be discouraging to go to the ticket-office with a mass of gold equal to $3,800,000,000, and be informed that the fare was $5,678,032,000. If the ticket agent wouldn't trust until we got back, we'd be compelled to forego the trip.—Norristown Herald.

The First Sign

Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., D. D. S., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians, and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my Stomach performed its duties more perfectly. Today my health is completely restored.—Mary Hatch, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 583 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

That Tired Feelin

When the weather grows warmer, that extreme tired feeling, want of appetite, dullness, languor, and lassitude, afflict almost the entire human family, and scrofula and other diseases caused by humors manifest themselves with many. It is impossible to show in this debility and expel humors from the blood without the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I could not sleep, and would get up in the morning with hardly life enough to get out of bed. I had no appetite, and my face would be all out with pimples. I bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon began to sleep soundly, could get up with ease that tired and languid feeling, and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, O.

"I had been much troubled by general debility. Last Spring Hood's Sarsaparilla proved just the thing needed. I derived an immense amount of benefit. I never felt better." H. F. MILLET, Boston, Mass.

At no other season is the system susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable tonic and invigorant. The impure state of the blood, the deranged condition and the weak condition of the body, by its long battle with the cold blasts, all call for the reviving, purifying and restoring influences, so happily and effectively combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me a great deal of good. I had no particular disease, but was tired out from overwork, and it did me up." MRS. G. E. SIMMONS, Cohoes, N. Y.

We had no rest at night, no peace by day. Finally we were advised to try the Cuticura Remedies. The effect was simply marvellous. In three or four weeks a complete cure was wrought, leaving the little fellow's person as white and healthy as though he had never been attacked. In my opinion, your Cuticura remedies saved his life, and to-day he is a strong, healthy child perfectly well, no repitition of the disease having ever occurred.

CHAPTER I.

JOHN HAS AN ADVENTURE.

The day had been very hot even for the Transvaal, where even in the autumn the [illegible] neck of the summer is broken, though often the thunderstorms hold off for a week or two, as they occasionally will. Even the capricious blue lilies, a variety of the agapanthus tribe, which do not flourish in English greenhouses, hung their long, trumpet-shaped flowers and scented buds, and other flowers beneath the burning breath of the hot wind which had blown for days, and [illegible] the sailor-girls, they strummed on a [illegible] and indeed [illegible] the night, tolling [illegible] and rounding his [illegible] on a long [illegible] was completely coated over with a thick layer of red dust [illegible] always does toward sunset. Indeed, all that remained of it were a few strictly local and miniature whirlwinds, which would suddenly spring up on the road itself, and twist and whirl fiercely round, raising a mighty column of dust fifty feet or more into the air, where it hung long after the cause of it passed, and then slowly dissolved as its particles floated to the earth.

Coming along the road, in the immediate track of one of these desultory and inexplicable whirlwinds, was a man on horseback. The man looked limp and dirty, and the horse limper and dirtier. The hot wind had taken all the bones out of them, as the Kaffirs say, which was not very much to be wondered at, seeing that they had been journeying through it for the last four hours, without off saddling. Suddenly the whirlwind, which had been traveling along pretty smartly, halted, and the dust, after turning round a few times in the air like a dying top, slowly began to dissolve in the accustomed fashion. The man on the horse halted, too, and contemplated it in an absent kind of way.

"It's just like a man's life," he said aloud to his horse, "coming from nobody knows where, nobody knows why, and making a little column of dust on the world's highway, and then passing away and leaving the dust to fall to the ground again, and be trodden under foot and forgotten."

The speaker, a stout, well set up, rather ugly man, apparently on the wrong side of 30, with pleasant blue eyes and a reddish, peaked beard, laughed a little at his own sententious reflection, and then gave his jaded horse a tap with the sjambok in his hand.

"Come on, Blesbok," he said, "or we shall never get to old Crofts' place to-night. By Jove! I believe that must be the turn," and he pointed with his whip to a little rutty track that turned from the Wakkerstroom main road and stretched away toward a curious, isolated hill with a large flat top, that rose out of the rolling plain some four miles to the right. "The old Boer said the second turn," he went on, still talking to himself, "but perhaps he lied. I am told that some of them think it a good joke to send an Englishman a few miles wrong. Let's see, they said the place was under the lee of a table topped hill, about half an hour's ride from the main road, and that is a table topped hill, so I think I had try it. Come on, Blesbok," and he put his [illegible] and a scud of "topple," or nudging canter, [illegible] the South African horses.

"It is a queer thing," reflected Capt. John Neil to himself as he slowly ambled along. "Now here am I at the age of 34, about to begin the world again as assistant to an old Transvaal farmer. I was a pretty old rough-rider, mind you, and to fourteen years' wear in Burmah, but it is what it has to offer that I am [illegible] you had better make the [illegible]

"Just then his reflections were interrupted, for on the farther side of a gentle slope there suddenly appeared a most extraordinary sight. Over the crest, moving at speed, now [illegible] four-or-five hundred yards away, came a lady on a [illegible] and after it, with wings spread and outstretched neck, a huge ostrich was speeding along, covering twelve or fifteen feet at every stride of its long legs. The lady was still twenty yards ahead of the bird and coming toward him, and it was as it would seem, one of the swiftest things on all the farm. Four seconds passed, the group had [illegible] Neil turned [illegible] and shot his eyes [illegible] the ostrich [illegible] like a frightened [illegible]

Then it had passed the lady and struck her a blow upon the spine, knocked the saddle, for the moment stopped it paralyzing, so that it rolled [illegible] the result. Leaping [illegible] the girl [illegible] and [illegible] Neil [illegible] "[illegible] the ostrich [illegible] the lady [illegible] the ostrich [illegible] like a frightened [illegible]

"Break his neck while I hold his legs, or he will kill you!"

This roused him from his torpor, and he staggered to his feet. Meanwhile the ostrich and the young lady had come to the ground, and were rolling about together in a confused heap, over which the elegant neck and open, hissing mouth wavered to and fro like a cobra about to strike. With a rush he seized the neck in both his hands, and, putting out all his strength (for he was a strong man), he twisted it till it broke with a snap, and after a few wild and convulsive bounds and struggles the great bird lay dead.

Then he sank down, panting and exhausted, and surveyed the scene. The ostrich was perfectly quiet, and would never kick again, and the lady, too, was quiet. He wondered vaguely if the brute had killed her—he was as yet too weak to go and see—and then fell to gazing at her face. Her head was pillowed on the body of the dead bird, and its feathery plumes [illegible] it dawned upon him that the face was very beautiful, although it looked so pale just now. Low, broad brow, crowned with soft, yellow hair, the skin very round and white, the mouth sweet though rather large. The eyes he could not see, because they were closed, for the lady had fainted. For the rest, she was young—about 20—tall, and finely formed. Presently he got a little better, and, creeping toward her (for he was sadly knocked about), took her hand and began to chafe it between his own. It was a well formed hand, but brown, and showed signs of doing plenty of hard work. Soon she opened her eyes, and he noted with satisfaction that they were very good eyes, blue in color. Then she sat up and laughed a little.

"Well, I am silly," she said. "I believe I fainted."

"It is not enough to be wondered at," said John Neil, politely, and lifting his hand to take off his hat, only to find that it had gone to the tray. "I hope you are not very much hurt to the bird."

"I don't know," she said, doubtfully. "But I am glad that you killed the skellum, anyhow. He got out of the ostrich enclosure three days ago, and has been lost ever since. He killed a boy last year and I told uncle he ought to shoot him then, but he would not, because he was such a beauty."

"Uncle! Lord," said John Neil, sore vigorously, "Miss Crofts!"

"Yes, I am one of them. There are two of us, you know, and I am glad to see you, Capt. Neil, when making allowances, is behaving with the force and the estimable."

"Hard! I am as Blesbok!" he said, pointing to the dead bird. "I don't think that I [illegible]

FARMERS UNION

A large number of people were present at the last meeting of the Farmer's Union Club, held at M. Sneltzer's. The name of the society was, by unanimous vote, changed to Farmers Union. In addition to the literary part of the program which was well carried out, the audience was favored by requests with several pieces of mu[illegible]

Lester, assisted by Miss Underwood at the organ.

The discussion was earnest and was listened to with interest.

H. J. Williams. I claim that the present process of taking cream from the milk is not a fair way of dealing because a man who feeds his cow gets more butter from a gauge of cream than one who does not. Farmers can make creamery, just as well as common butter. I think it more profitable to make butter than to sell cream. The butter-milk pays for our work. Mr. Williams then told something of the system of an Illinois creamery, where the cream is taken from the milk by separation, which way he considers fairer than that now in use.

E. L. Russell. I like selling cream although I do not think the present system is what it should be. When the country is [illegible] it pays better than making butter.

M. Sneltzer. Creameries save work for the farmers, and are all right if they deal fairly with the farmers. If they do not, boycott them and sell the butter.

J. Benedict. If the stock company at Tecumseh can invest their money as they have done and profit, there must be a loss somewhere. I have had no experience in selling cream.

E. P. Anthony. Creamery butter brings a higher price than farmers' butter, consequently they can be fair and still profit. It would be more profitable to churn than to sell the cream, but by selling we save labor.

W. F. Raymond. I sell cream but think perhaps it would be more profitable to make butter. The plan of separating the milk and cream is worth investigating.

I. D. Shull. I do not consider myself a farmer in the proper meaning of that term, but of three farms I operate two sell cream because it saves labor while the other finds it more profitable to make butter and sell it at retail.

Mr. Comfort. I have had little experience in dairying. Our creamery in Tecumseh does not get enough cream to pay large prices, therefore it is not paying them very well. I think the plan of separating the cream and milk would be a superior method.

Mr. Hopkins. Whether selling is profitable or not depends on the price of cream and butter. We change our views in regard to profit as the prices of cream and butter are changed. Creameries help the price of the farmer's butter.

Adjourned till after the busy season.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

Mrs. Howlett is the new Democratic postmistress at Jonesville.

The Brooklyn school teachers have all been engaged for another year.

Progressive euchre parties are becoming fashionable at Morenci.

Our friend C. M. Cone, of Adrian, gets an increase of pension and he deserves it too.

An oil company has been started in Lodi with flattering prospects for success.

No one has arisen as yet to contest the election of Victor H. Lane to the Circuit Judgeship in this district.

Ex-prosecutor Salisbury, of Adrian, has been granted an increase of pension. He bears the scars of faithful service in the war.

A game of checkers by postal is now in progress between three of Adrian's best players and the champion player of Indiana, who resides at Ft. Wayne.

The Republicans of Hillsdale kept sight napping this year. They elected supervisor and township clerk by one majority and lost the Highway commissioner.

A detective rail caused a serious accident on the M. & O. railroad near Hanover on Friday the 8th inst., when the rear coach of the 5 o'clock passenger train was derailed. Conductor Richard Gibson was badly hurt within internally and about the head, he will hardly recover. Mrs. Louis M. Bell, of this city, had her leg dislocated and was badly bruised. Wm. Tuttle of Wheatland, Hillsdale Co., had an arm broken, and Roy Ruby of Jackson had his hands scalded. J. W. Crowell, of Hanover, had a leg and [illegible] hurt, and G. P. Patterson, of Adrian, was considerably disabled about one leg and arm. Several others were hurt, but have not been identified. There were 6 people in the coach.

HINTS FOR THE ATHLETIC CLUB

"A sound mind in a sound body" is what every young man should seek for in this day and generation. The desire among our youth to exemplify this maxim led to the establishment of our Athletic Club. It has a fine start, is well officered and contains over fifty members. Athletics are not to be sneezed at. They develop the muscles [illegible] invigorate the cranial bumps. They save doctor's bills and stimulate the thread and button trade. The horizontal bar is a better antidote for dyspepsia than bitters, and the dumb bells [illegible] than Brown's iron bitters. Young men, build up your own physical constitutions and the Athletic Club at the same time. Here are a few modest suggestions which may be of value.

"Pea Vine" stands up for the trapeze. It imparts grace and symmetry of action to the movements of the body. It is said that the ladies look with special favor upon an adept trapeze performer.

"Boiler" is a champion of the dumb bells. After sufficient exercise with these playthings he can snatch the mail bags crazy as fast as they come.

Whatever others may think, "Persimmons" bangs to the rings, but he is not a believer in tariff or whiskey rings. He holds to the genuine athletic kind which make the hand strong and the head clear.

"Twinkle" prefers the parallel bars. They are less dangerous than the trapeze and do not require the accompaniment of a feather bed. At the same time, they are a fine developer and one is nearer home, if he accidently slips his hold.

"Fore Paugh" has fallen in love with the horizontal bar. It enlarges the chest, stimulates the growth of the mustache, imparts a dignified gentlemanly demeanor, and is far better than electricity for the appetite.

Any further suggestions from our correspondents will be thankfully received.

Lace Curtains. Special attention called this week to our New Lace Curtains. All new and handsome patterns just opened. Call and see them. Prices low.

W. & S. W. ANDERSON & CO.

The spring time's coming apace,
The robin is heard in the land
And Wiggins favorite month of
Of sunshine and storm is at hand.
Then get out the shovel and spade,
Make your garden patch mellow and rich
And put in your radishes, parsley and peas
And onions and turnips and sorrel.

Catarrh. When chronic becomes very offensive. It is impossible to be otherwise healthy, and at the same time afflicted with catarrh. This disagreeable disease, in its most obstinate and dangerous forms, can be cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

THE VOTE ON THE AMENDMENT.

We present herewith a table by Counties of the vote on the Amendment and also a map of the state by counties. These figures will be changed somewhat by the official count both ways, but we think they will prove to be substantially correct.

We hope to see a large attendance at the citizen's meeting to be held at the Opera House to morrow evening. The amendment committee will submit their report, and a series of resolutions will be offered, recommending the organization of a "Law and Order League." An organization of this kind will be capable of accomplishing much good if judiciously managed. We see no reason why a movement of this character should not be heartily endorsed, not only by those who voted for the amendment—but also by all who favor the rigid enforcement of the laws which we now have. Let there be a good turn out and a free interchange of opinion; and let there be some definite action taken. Now is the opportune time.

The Art Amateur.

For April gives an attractive figure study in two colors by J. Carrol Beckwith, a time study of tulips by Victor Dangon, a double page "Flight of Swallows" for panel decorations; designs for cups and saucers, a chocolate pitcher, and a double tile; butter flies and honeysuckles; a dogwood design for an embroidered chair back, and a variety of outline sketches, monograms, and minor designs for art work. The number is specially rich in suggestions for fruit painting, both in oils and in mineral colors. Price 35 cents. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Notice.

We take this method of publicly expressing our sincere and heartfelt thanks to our kind neighbors and friends for their expressions of sympathy and offers of assistance in our severe loss by fire and especially to the families of F. A. Horton and Mrs. William Boyd by whose almost superhuman assistance we were enabled to save our house and some other valuable property, and to a kind Providence that all escaped without serious accident.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

The street sprinkler began its rounds last Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Potter, of Ridgeway, Sundayed in the village.

Mr and Mrs. Scott Campsey, of Adrian, were the guests of Joe Waring and wife last Tuesday.

Mrs. C. V. Hicks, returned to her home in Oscoda, Tuesday, after an extended visit in this village.

We issue an extra edition this week and send out a large number of sample copies. Now is the time to subscribe.

Vance DePuy is getting ready to start for Kansas. His goods will go this week, and his family probably next week. Sad.

The Board of County canvassers met Tuesday. The majority in favor of the amendment as officially declared, was 387.

The amendment is not settled neither have you settled your blacksmith bill with Thomas Elliott. Come and settle or get counted out.

Gardeners should remember the superior excellence of James Vicks seeds when purchasing. They are pure and fresh and will give general satisfaction.

We are indebted to Miss Manie Monaghan for a copy of the Boston Globe containing a very full and interesting account of the Longfellow Memorial Readings.

Levi Martin has purchased a farm of 160 acres adjoining that of Alva Waring in Kansas. Mrs. Martin will start for that state next week with her household goods.

The Sunday school class of Mrs. David McNair, enjoyed a pleasant evening at her residence last Friday evening, the occasion being the celebration of the 10th anniversary of the class.

The open air concert given by the City Band last Saturday evening was enjoyed by a large number of listeners. Wouldn't it be a good plan to continue these concerts occasionally during the season.

Mr. B. Lazell, who is acting as Superintendent of Agencies for the Mich. Mutual Benefit Association of Hillsdale was in town yesterday. He took several new risks for his company during his stay.

There was a large attendance at the Dunn auction last Saturday and everything was disposed of. The large house on the corner was purchased by George Williamson for $1350 and the small one by Ezra Coryell for $1050.

The old Stocking house next to Mrs. Spaulding's green house had a narrow escape from destruction by fire last Monday morning. Flames were discovered in the upper part of the building but were extinguished before any damage was done. The house was empty and it is thought some tramp took possession during the night, and accidentally set fire to it.

The paper knife in the HERALD job rooms received a thorough grinding last Monday, and Ed. Gray was about to put it in place after rubbing it with a whetstone, when he accidentally struck his right hand against the sharp edge and cut a deep gash about three inches long on the back of it. "Bob" will carry his hand in a sling for a few days. Moral—Don't monkey with the HERALD paper cutter.

The Easter Festival given by the young ladies of St. Peter's church at The Patterson last Tuesday evening was well attended and proved to be an enjoyable occasion. Refreshments were served, and flowers and Easter eggs were sold. The suit of rooms on the west side of the house provide splendid accommodations for an entertainment of this character. The net proceeds added a handsome sum to the treasury.

Easter Sunday was observed at St. Peters church this year with more than usual eclat. The chancel was elaborately trimmed with flower pieces and potted plants. The old choir elevation in the rear was similarly decorated, and flowers were placed in all the windows. Early services were held at six o'clock A. M. and again at 10:30 o'clock, and a special Sunday School service was given at 4:30 in the afternoon. They were all largely attended. The beautiful weather, tasty decorations and attentive congregations, all conspired to render it a most impressive Easter Day.

The land lease committee report having secured about 2,000 acres of land on the east side, where up to this time their work has been confined, and that before Saturday they will have over 2,500 acres. Then they will begin on the west side, and as every one has shown a disposition to lease their land to the committee, their work should be facilitated as rapidly as possible. It is desirable that in the neighborhood of 1,000 acres be secured and if it can be done, the capital stock will probably then be made at $10,000, so that money may be on hand to bore more than one well, if the first should be a "dry" one. Blissfield Advance.

Prepare to plant a tree.

The ulster overcoat and seal skin sacque can safely be discarded now.

The ice cream season was duly inaugurated last Saturday at the restaurants.

Mrs. Ed. C. Baird, after a visit of some length at Tecumseh, has returned to her home at Dayton, Ohio.

Street commissioner Jordan has been doing some fine work with the road-machine during the past week.

Joe Wilson, our enterprising boot and shoe dealer, has opened a branch store at Dundee, and Jim will have charge of the same.

This week with an assessment roll under his arm. He began his rounds last Monday.

The programs are out for the season's base ball games at Detroit. The first series will be played May 5, 6 and 7.

Israel Schreiber is satisfied that the burning of his barn was the work of an incendiary. His total loss will be about double the amount of the insurance.

The Wilberforce concert was not largely attended last Saturday evening, but the program presented was a very enjoyable one. This troupe is one of the best colored combinations on the road.

Mrs. Judge Cooley has been reappointed by Gov. Luce as a member of the board of control of the state institution of Adrian. A better selection could not have been made.

Geo. Hanford shipped from this station last week two of the finest loads of sheep ever collected here; one car of sheep averaging 118 pounds and one car of lambs, averaging 108 pounds each.

The Blissfield Star editor solemnly warns the Blissfield public that unless he gets twelve subscribers this week he will certainly bust, and will have to flee for bread. He gives the town just two weeks to decide whether he goes to Chicago or Deerfield to run a paper.

Jo. Rynd has bought the Thayer farm in Madison, and will soon be an applicant for membership in the grange. He has ordered a dozen pumpkin trees, a durham horse rake, a yoke of south-down hens, and will advertise for a dairy maid. But there is one thing he won't do; he won't sign any orders for lightning rods, make any contracts to sell hayforks or patent steam cookers, or give any Bohemian oat notes.—Adrian Press.

In vetoing the bill requiring supervisors to publish a report of their proceedings in some newspaper, Governor Luce has made a blunder. The expense will be something, that is true, but it is a much needed reform which should not be balanced against the slight expense necessary to accomplish it. We believe the Governor has interposed his veto in this instance without a full and thorough investigation of the question.

A union temperance meeting was held last Sunday evening at the Presbyterian church to consider the question of the hour and the duty of temperance men at the present time. Remarks were made by Revs. Babbitt and Adkins and also by Mr. Brazilai Hurry, of Franklin. The general sentiment was that work in the temperance cause should not be permitted to die out, or languish in the least. Notice was given of a public meeting in the Opera House to morrow Friday evening to receive a report from the Amendment committee and consider the question of future temperance work.

One of the pleasantest social events of the season occurred last Friday evening at the residence of O. A. Blackmar, in Cambridge. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Blackmar knowing it to be the 25th anniversary of their marriage, managed to give them a surprise. There were present besides their Cambridge friends and neighbors, a number of friends from Brooklyn and Tecumseh. In behalf of the company Mrs. Blackmar was presented with a silver tea set. Mrs. Hosmer, of Tecumseh, also presented a very pretty piece of silver ware. After spending a very pleasant evening the company dispersed to their numerous homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. Blackmar God speed for the next twenty five years.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Hon. W. H. Wadby, leaves this afternoon, for St. Louis, Mo., where, tomorrow a series of important contracts are to be let by a committee of the Indian commission, of which our fellow townsman is a member. The commissioner of Indian affairs is expected to be present, and direct in the transaction of the business to be disposed of. These contracts include provisions, clothing and an immense amount of supplies. The plan has been, heretofore, to let these contracts in the city of New York. Last year a number of western merchants entered a protest with the Indian bureau, against this course, and their representations, backed by the influence of the western members of the commission, has this year secured the desired change.—Adrian Times of Monday.

The Easter entertainment at Heesen's Hall last Friday evening given by the ladies of the Universalist church was a very enjoyable affair, and added a nice little sum to the social treasury.

The report of the Macon election last week was slightly mixed. The opposition to the regular Republican ticket was a People's Ticket, composed of men from all parties, and the clerk elected thereon, Mr. Hamilton D. Niblack is a Republican.

The American Magazine is a new candidate for public favor, the first number of which, for May, is now on sale. The initial number is well filled with choice reading and is a model of typographical excellence. It is published by R. T. Bush and Son. This fact of itself will cause people in this section to take a special interest in its success.

It was a beautiful Easter Sunday last Sabbath. People enjoyed the pleasant weather to the utmost. The services at the churches were all largely attended. The young man donned his new spring suit and the young lady her spring fixins. Old Sol sent his genial rays to the occasion and everything seemed to echo—"Winter is over and gone."

The farmers who met at Vassar last Saturday to make a pool purse to resist the payment of their Bohemian oat notes won't have a hilarious time of it. The chances altogether are that the notes are held by innocent purchasers and the courts have repeatedly decided that when such is the case the giver of the note must pay it at its maturity. But they can have a heap of fun with their pool if they can catch the agent who sold them the oats.—Morenci Observer.

The hold which Strong & McNair have gained for themselves of being the "Old Reliable Clothiers" of Tecumseh is certainly well deserved. They have been in business long so long and their reputation is so well established that they need no puffing. But we believe that enterprise merits a good word. They are now receiving the largest and best assorted stock of clothing ever displayed in this market, and their prices are marked to correspond with the times. When you buy your spring suit take our advice: select your pattern from David or George and get fitted tailor fashion at home.

Miss Georgia M. Aten died at Memphis, Mich., Friday, April 8th. She was daughter of J. W. Aten, Deerfield and 18 yrs. old. She had typhoid fever which left her paralized and suffered five months when death relieved her. She has many friends in our village who will cherish her memory as a true, kind friend.

Ira G. Rawson is circulating a subscription to raise a weekly purse for the City Band, in return for which the Band will be invited to give an open air concert every Saturday evening through the season. He is meeting with very liberal encouragement. This is a good scheme. Keep the ball rolling, Bro. Rawson. It will provide first class amusement at cheap rates. It will help the band and help the town. Keep the ball rolling.

Lenawee county keeps forging to the front in almost everything. The recent $12,000 yacht race between the Corsair and Dauntless, the American and English yachts, was won by the former, and American supremacy is sustained. The owner of the Corsair is a former Lenawee county man, Mr. R. T. Bush, a graduate of our state Normal school, husband of one of the smartest Ridgeway girls who ever took the matrimonial obligation, and a loyal Michigander. After some time Mr. Bush removed to Brooklyn N. Y., where he now resides, and where he has amassed a fortune in the oil business. He doesn't forget Ridgeway, however, and has lately established a fine library there, and the citizens are under obligation to him for the very commendable act. He and his wife frequently visit the old home and are always warmly welcomed. They never fail to send an invitation to any Lenawee county visitor at the metropolis to call upon them at their house. Mr. and Mrs. Bush will doubtless share the honors won by the yacht victory with their Lenawee county friends, who feel as equal pride with them in the result. Three cheers for the Lenawee county Coronet.—Adrian Press.

CALLED TO REST.

On Easter morning, at her home in Hillsdale, Hessie Cuppins Robinson quietly dropped into the sleep that knows no earthly waking.

The deceased was born in Tecumseh on the 8th of July 1865 and in this village she passed her childhood, youth and womanhood until her marriage. On the 24th of February 1886 she assumed the marital vows and became the wife of I. M. Robinson. In the month of April following they moved to Hillsdale, which city has since been her home. Her husband has filled the position of conductor on the Lake Shore road, his run being between Hillsdale and Jackson. Her funeral took place from Hillsdale on Monday last, and conveyed to the residence of John Corl, a cousin of the deceased. Here the funeral obsequies were held on Tuesday forenoon, Rev. W. H. Babbitt performed the office of comforter where he pronounced the happy words of the marriage ceremony only fourteen months before. It was a deeply affecting occasion. The friends who bid Hessie God-speed at the marriage altar, now gathered around her bier to mingle their tears with those of the afflicted husband who had lost the dearest treasure that man can enjoy on earth. The remains were deposited in our beautiful evergreen cemetery and her infant babe was laid to rest upon its mother's bosom in the same grave.

Hessie seemed to have had a presentiment of approaching death. On Saturday, the day before she died, she took from their hiding place some poetical scraps which she delighted to read, conning them over and over. One of them was this touching tribute from the pen of Henry Ward Beecher. How prophetic of the fate which awaited her on the dawn of Easter Day—

If I Should Die To-Night.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face
Before they laid it in its resting place,
And deem that death had left it almost fair;
And laying snow-white flowers on my breast,
Would softly say, with tearful eyes and voice,
And fold my hands with lingering caress,
Poor hands, so empty and so cold to-night.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would call to mind with sorrow
Some kindly deeds the icy hands had wrought,
Some gentle words the frozen lips had spoken,
Errands on which the willing feet had sped;
The memory of my selfishness and pride,
My hasty words would all be put aside,
And so I should be loved and mourned to-night.

If I should die to-night,
Even my enemies would be [illegible]
Recalling other days sympathetically,
The eyes that chill me with averted gaze
Would look upon me as of yore, perchance,
And soften in the old familiar way,
For who could war with a dead foe so
So blankly still, so [illegible] to all reproach?

O friends, I pray to-night,
Keep not your kisses for the dead, but give
The warm caress to the living heart.
Think gently of the erring one,
My faltering feet are pierced with many a dart,
Forgive, O heart, my failures, take my part
While gladness yet is possible to me!
The deadness [illegible]

CLINTON, MICH., APRIL 14, 1887.

Ozro Munsey, spent last week in Adrian.

Herman Holladay went to Ann Arbor to visit relatives in his absence last Saturday.

Florence Graham, of Manchester, is visiting her cousin, Miss Ella Graham, this week.

Prof. Travis gave a lecture in Tecumseh one night last week, the subject being "Electricity and Magnetism."

Miss Ella Bowen, of Ann Arbor, is visiting her cousin, Miss Ella Graham, this week.

Miss Ella Graham spent the week with her friends in Saline, returning there the entire week.

Mrs. Ellis took a short pleasure excursion, visiting friends in Jackson, Ann Arbor, Chelsea and Hillsdale last week.

Miss M. Dispaugh entered upon her duties as deputy postmaster of Tecumseh, Saturday, at the Clinton district, Saturday.

Miss Lucie Reed, sister, Rosa, visited relatives and friends during the week, returning to her home in Toledo, Monday.

Mr. Lyon, of the N. Y. Store, was in Toledo, Monday, to purchase goods for his store. He expects to be in the new store in the newly arranged store.

The churches all observed Easter Sunday with appropriate services and were beautifully and tastily decorated with plants and flowers.

Rats.—It is stated a young man disposed of several rats at a single shot from a target gun, at the freight house, the other day.

Mrs. N. Burroughs, of Cherokee, Iowa, and Mrs. H. H. Packard, of Tecumseh, were the guests of Mr. C. Dispaugh and family last week.

Miss Mary Wood, of South Bend, Ind., last week, to busy himself at a position in the woolen mill, under the direction of superintendent Lewis, in charge of this place.

Miss Taylor, Minnie Hess, Nettie Knapp, Stella Brewster, May Storey and Lou Swift were in attendance upon the examinations for teachers on Saturday.

Mr. Fitzpatrick has been very busy lately. He attended five sick horses Saturday, and has several patients of a more serious character, at the present writing, which are improving under his treatment.

Dave Hamill and Mr. Brewster, both of Adrian, arrived here on Monday, to see after the progress made upon the new mill, and we understand at the meeting of the directors for the coming year.

Frank McClure went to Toledo on a stock to supply the demands at the "Little Daisy" harness emporium. Frank is a good workman, and now has another hand to help in the force, and is bound to meet the requirements of all.

Ask Col. Samark and he will explain how is the happy father that rejoices in a family amendment, and limits help to a good cook. Parties are doing so, and it will soon be in order to elect a Salem Ward in the city.

The beautiful weather of the past few days has brought the garden seeds, diplomacies in land, and the sentiments of Earth's vegetation are assuming their allotted space in the world, and the birds upon the trees, only awaiting the coming of the gentle showers.

But we [illegible] by whom, but heard it mentioned that it might be occupied [illegible] deposits. It is a very desirable point, and would [illegible] good patrons.

[illegible] of our friend Alford, [illegible] appreciated for the morning [illegible] distribution of that decoy of [illegible] and Chocolate drops. Tecumseh Base Ball boys and "Clinton Ends" know the value of the former. Never mind, the weather is changeable. Michigan—watch the signal—there may be a blizzard yet and possibly it may bring a goodwater wave. There is not the least doubt that usquebaugh is "too rich for the blood."

TEMPERANCE COLUMN

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

The following well from the Greenville, Texas, Herald, contains a brief but pointed temperance lecture:

"Together with the [illegible] whisky, is said to be 1 [illegible] 810 cents, yet men continue to pay the regulation price—fifteen cents—for slough water, colored with tobacco, juice and flavored with spider cord, buttons, and [illegible] dregs of [illegible]

[illegible] the Democracy of the [illegible] proclaim it advocates the prohibition of the whisky traffic in this State. Well, we have to say that if Democracy means the support of the whisky business and the keeping the manufacture of whisky, [illegible] we present [illegible] what our Democracy means. We are bright enough to believe that a man can be a democrat and a temperance man at the same time. We expect our pocket-book and pocket to suffer some because we think and talk this way. The Gazette has fought hard for Democracy for a strong Republican locality long enough to know that it costs something to contend for principle.—Hudson Gazette.

These are brave words and Brother Summerhorn will merit and receive the respect of honorable men in all parties for using them.

A New Orleans paper tells of a worker who when his fellow men went out to drink beer during working hours, put in the bank the exact amount which he would have spent if he had gone out to drink. He thus kept his resolution for five years. He then examined his bank account, and found he had on deposit $27 88. In the five years he had not lost a day from ill health. Three out of five of his fellow workmen had in the meantime become drunkards, were worthless, and were discharged. The water drinker then bought out the printing office, went on enlarging the business and in twenty years from the time he began to put by his money was worth $50,000.

Editor Begole writes the Detroit Evening News in part as follows: "I agree with the editor of the Ionia Standard, that the farmers of Michigan get no benefit from the liquor tax now collected any further than whatever benefits the towns, citizens and individuals in the aggregate benefit the whole people of the state. The towns and cities get the benefit of the tax. The farmers and day laborers raise the grain and drink the most of the beer and whiska, consequently they pay the most of the taxes. You say that if the farmer abolishes the distillers and brewery he destroys a very large part of the demand for his corn, barley and rye. I agree with you that everything that the farmer can do to sustain and build up the town or city nearest to where he does his business adds to his comfort and pleasure and to the value of every acre of land he owns. But I do not believe that the abolition of the liquor traffic will detract from the price or value of any productions of the farm that are used in the manufacture of whisky and beer, with the exception of hops. I am a farmer by profession and am now largely interested in farming. I would like to take my chances for better prices and lower taxes in any community where the liquor traffic is abolished.

GALVESTON, TEX., April 9.—The anti-prohibitionists have called a meeting for the 30th, "to set forth clearly and universally the time honored principles of Democracy in its opposition to all forms of sumptuary legislation."

The News to-day publishes an open letter from Senator John H. Reagan, replying to the invitation of the committee to attend the coming meeting. Reagan's letter will produce a genuine sensation in the political world of Texas. He comes out squarely in favor of prohibition and deals the opposition some Hercules blows from a Democratic standpoint. Two years ago Mr. Reagan stood beside Senator Coke, Gov. Ireland, Congressman Milloy and other Democrats in strenuously urging the growth of the prohibition idea. Reagan's complete consent on the point surprises even his nearest friends. After declaring at length the wretchedness and disorder to be encountered in every community possessing the use of liquor, the distinguished senator says: "I must express my regret that any effort has been made to make a party question of prohibition, and especially do I regret that the Democrats should seek to identify that great and grand historic party with the fortunes and fate of the whisky shops, drunkards' dens and ruin. Viewing the question from a Jeffersonian standpoint, the secret cost me. There is a broad difference between the laws which interfere with the innate trade and which such as would interfere with the purchase and sale of necessary food and drink and raiment, called sumptuary laws and laws which have for their object the prevention and punishment of crime and the preservation of public morals and decency, and I think it hardly just to the memory of Mr. Jefferson to assume that he would not have recognized this distinction."

We have received a copy of the report of the commissioner of Patents for 1886. It contains much valuable statistical information.

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY

Of the nineteenth century, can truly be said of Papillon extract of flax Skin Cure. Thousands testify to its wonderful curative powers in seemingly hopeless cases of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas and every kind of skin diseases. Mr. O. P. Algier, of Hartford, Ohio, tried everything he heard of or saw recommended, and suffered five years with Eczema until he found Papillon Skin Cure, which cured him. Large bottles only $1.00.

Messers. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.: Have taken Hall's Catarrh Cure. Had catarrh all my life, am 48 years old. Had asthma 10 years, and a dreadful cough for five years. Have taken everything; went to the Hot Springs; I have doctored with the doctors here; I have done nothing but take medicine for 15 years. When I commenced using Hall's Catarrh Cure I was almost dead. I sent for the doctor the day I got Hall's Catarrh Cure, and I told him that I would die any way and that I would try your medicine. I was very bad. How I suffered for 6 years! I could hardly breath at times. I saw Hall's Catarrh Cure advertised in the papers and commenced taking it. I would have been under the ground to-day if it had not been for that. I have not had one bad spell of coughing since, in breathing my head feels well and I am well. It has done me a thousand dollar worth of good. There are ten of my friends, on seeing what it had done for me, taking it, is helping them. I only wish that every one who has catarrh, asthma and a bad cough could see me, so that I could tell them all to take it. All that know me here know how I have suffered. I have been here since 1855, and say to me that "I am so glad you found something that could cure you." Every one says, "how much better you look." The doctors say they are glad I found Hall's Catarrh Cure as they could not cure me.

I cannot express my gratitude to you for the good Hall's Catarrh Cure has done me. You can use as much of this letter as will do the afflicted good. Publish it to the whole world. It is all true and they should know it.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, in the City of Adrian, on the 5th day of April, A. D. 1887. Present, Hon. Edwin Lawrence, Circuit Judge. In the matter of the petition of Hiram Sherman, Executor of the last will and testament of Ira Sherman, deceased, for the sale of the real estate of said deceased. On reading and filing the petition of Hiram Sherman, executor of the last will and testament of Ira Sherman, deceased, praying for a license to sell the real estate of said deceased, it is ordered that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, to be held at the Court House in the City of Adrian, on the 5th day of May, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause why a license should not be granted to the petitioner to sell the real estate of said deceased, mentioned in said petition. And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County, three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing. EDWIN LAWRENCE, Circuit Judge. A true copy. Attest: [illegible]

TECUMSEH, April 12, 1887.

Citizens of Tecumseh

MOCKETT, OF TOLEDO, SPEAKS:

CITIZENS OF TECUMSEH: There are, no doubt, many of you in need of Clothing, Furnishing Goods, and Hats and Caps. To you who have the habit of buying these goods at home, we wish to call your attention to the fact that you can save fully 25 per cent., perhaps more, by buying your Clothing, Hats, Caps, etc., from us. If such is the case will not be to your interest, as well as ours, to come to Toledo to buy? Many of you will probably say to yourselves this is only an advertisement. We admit it, but nevertheless it contains nothing but simple truth. Would you ask us why we can sell so much lower than the dealer in your own town? We will tell you.

BECAUSE We buy our goods in larger quantities than small dealers can, and [illegible] we divide with our customers. A firm buying [illegible] at the car load, buys it lower per [illegible] than he who buys on a single order.

BECAUSE All our purchases are made for cash, we get the benefit of a cash discount. This discount alone foots up [illegible] business to from $1,000 to $2,000 a year. [illegible] dealers cannot get an [illegible] not enough business to warrant it.

BECAUSE We visit the eastern markets regularly every three or four months during the year, thus we see many opportunities are offered in country dealers, we also [illegible]

ANOTHER REASON Why we can sell you if you trade with us is. You [illegible] and [illegible] collections. [illegible] PLEASANT NOTHING MORE.

ANOTHER REASON [illegible]

SATISFY YOURSELVES [illegible]

IN ORDER [illegible]

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Frosty mornings for the past few days.

More rain is needed to make wheat and grass get to growing a little warm weather.

The elevator is receiving the second coat of paint. Lots of brush work.

The Depot has been going through the renovating process lately.

Dr Barnes of Tecumseh, is attending Mrs. P. Sharp, who is in poor health. He makes a visit weekly.

J. H. Lawrence left for Essex, (Clinton county, Tuesday, where he will spend some time.

W. Snedicor and family left for their new home near Mt. Pleasant, on Monday morning. He shipped his household effects over the C. S. & O. and P. A. A. & N. railways. Mr. Snedicor is in poor health and we wish him extra success in his change.

Art Sherman made us a flying visit last week. He is company with Wm. Sherman of Tecumseh, are going into a large Chicago poultry business at Howell, Mich.

Highway Commissioner Harrison seems to be very busy attending to business of his district, being away nearly all the time.

What is the matter with the feed-mill that it is not finished? We are asked this question nearly every day, and can only say, it is a conundrum.

C. A. Sharpe of Tecumseh, was in the village and vicinity one day last week looking up some business interests in connection with the firm of D. W. Clark.

Louis Priest of Tecumseh, spent Sunday with his brother-in law, Mrs. Cheever.

Phillip Parks of St. John, has been with friends near the village, for several days.

Mrs. W. H. Arner of Raisin, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. W. C. Wilson.

Prof. Frank Parker of Dundee, was in the village Tuesday shaking hands with friends. His health does not improve very rapidly.

Coryell & Gripton are up with the times, receiving new implements nearly every day. The latest tool received is the Lehr wheel cultivator.

W. R Wilson will have to take a back seat with his big egg, as Lewis Miller comes to the front with one that measures 7½ by 8½ inches in circumference. Who next?

S. F. Marsteller of Clinton, was in the village Tuesday.

Wm. Snedicor and family called on old acquaintances Tuesday evening. Will left for Howell, Wednesday morning. Mrs. Snedicor and the children will spend a few days with friends here before they leave for their new home. They have the heartly wishes of their many friends here, for success.

The attendance at the W. C. T. U. held at the President's Tuesday evening, was as large as usual. Their next parlor gathering will be held at Mrs. Wm. Pilbeam's south of the village, Tuesday afternoon, May 3d.

The base ball association is flourishing. The boys played their first game Saturday. Joe. Wiggins the catcher was hit by a wild ball on the nose, breaking it. Dr. Nelson being on the ground performed the surgical operation. Their new uniforms have been ordered. They are preparing an entertainment, to be given at Cottage Hall, in the near future, for the benefit of the association. It is said to be the best entertainment of the kind given at the Hall. If so, it is well worth hearing. Full particulars next week. Address all communications to J. D. Loree, Secretary.

Our citizens were surprised on Tuesday to learn that Will Clack, who has been clerking for G. W. Clark several months, had bought out the firm. He will close out the present stock of dry goods and groceries, and fill up the store with a new stock about May 1st. We wish him success. Say, Will, what's the matter of taking in a lady partner.

Detroit has its Opera, Tecumseh a Gymnasium but Saminie was Proprietor of a whole circus last week while trying to break his bronde to ride. He did not succeed until he had been thrown several times, sometime landing on his neck and ears, at others at full length on the front side of his ears, running his cuffs and collar in the sand, leaving an impression of more grit, if not experience, at each attempt to master his undertaking.

NOTICE.

Plans and specifications of the Hall Library building can now be examined at the store of Waring Bros. & Co. Sealed proposals for the construction of the same will be received by the building committee on or before Saturday April 23d.

By order of Building Committee.

LATE RIDGE RAMBLES.

The drouth continues.

Geo. Gray and family returned from their winter's stay in Florida last Friday.

Mrs. Wm. Martin of Wheatland came out to attend the funeral of Grandma Martin, and will remain this week, visiting friends and old neighbors. Her husband was not so severely injured as reported in the R. R. accident near Hanover, on the 8th, merely a general shaking up and slight bruises on elbow and face.

Thomas Watkins has leased his farm to J. G. Bailey and Fred. McCreary.

Watkins has moved to Romulus and and will work as section hand on the Wabash.

Olds & Bacon sold a pair of full blood Holsteins, last week, to A. Dickson & Son of Crawford Co., Ohio.

Willie Whiting started for Kansas last week Monday.

There were 30 couple at the Easter sugar social at Lake Ridge Hall, Monday evening the 11th.

There was a maple sugar social at Grange Hall Saturday night.

Ed. Moon is working Mrs. M. Pocklington's farm, on shares.

Allie Montonye has the mumps on both sides.

Kate Sergeant starts for Idaho territory this week, where she has a brother and sister.

We trust the legislature will resubmit, so that we can vote on it every spring. It don't require any petition from the people to submit that, and the members all vote "yes" without regard to party affiliations.

Wage labor going down, and official salaries going up. "Its a poor rule that won't work both ways."

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE

Ebenezer Mills, age 78 years, 1 month and 20 days, quietly passed away and left the cares and trials and suffering of this life, to enjoy the peace and joys that our Savior has gone to prepare for us.

Ebenezer Mills was born in Groveland, Livingston county, N. Y., Feb. 12th 1809. His father, Major Philo Mills, was a native of that state. Ebenezer Mills lived with his parents until he was 22 years old. In 1829 his father came to Michigan and purchased land in Lenawee county, and in the fall of 1830 Ebenezer came to settle on a part of it. The land was on section 18, in the present town of Franklin. He resided there until 1837 when he traded with his father for land in Hillsdale county, which he afterward sold and purchased a farm on section 8, where he now resided. At that time game was very plentiful, specially deers and wolves, and as he was one of the best marksmen it was no trouble for him to have plenty of fresh meat. We have often heard him tell of standing in his door and counting from seventy to eighty deer as they passed along on the run way in the morning. We have often heard him tell of walking from Tecumseh when there was nothing but a foot path, and the wolves followed him all the way home, and he kept them off with a club. He was the last one of his father's family that lived in Franklin. He has one brother, Philo C. Mills, who resides in Adrian, and one sister, Almira Greene, who resides in Ypsilanti. May 3d, 1831, Ebenezer Mills married Ann Brears, daughter of Thomas and Lean Brears of England, by whom they had eight children of which five are still living. They were the first couple married in Franklin. Mr. Mills had suffered with disease of the heart for some time but none thought him so near the end. On Sunday April 3d a large concourse of people met at the residence to pay their last respect and follow the remains to their final resting place. The aged wife and five children still survive him.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson for April 24.

JOSEPH AND HIS FATHER—GEN. XLVII. 1-12.

Golden Text. "Which Pharaoh is not certain.—"Pharaoh was a general title for all the Egyptian kings. He is very likely Apepi, the very last of the Shepherd kings.—"Land of Canaan." That part of Palestine west of Jordan.—"Goshen." The northern part of Egypt bearing Canaan, where the pasturage would be good and the return to Canaan the easiest.—"Took five men and presented them to Pharaoh." He did not take his father yet. He was old, and so Joseph waited till all the preliminaries were finished. "Able men." Active and competent. We are not told whether Joseph did as suggested by Pharaoh or not.—"Jacob blessed Pharaoh."—As a very old man might bless a young man. Doubtless "the less is blessed of the better," as the author of Hebrews says of Abraham and Melchisedek. But here it was only superior age which was recognized by the king as giving superiority. "How old art thou?"—Not an impertinent question, but one of respect and very proper according to Eastern ideas. He saw that Jacob was very old.—"Pilgrimage." Or sojourneying. Staying a little while in life, as nomads roam from place to place.—"Few and evil."—He had suffered peculiar trials from the time that he robbed his brother Esau. The latest had been the loss of his wives, Rachel and Leah.—"The years of the life of my fathers."—Abraham lived to be one hundred and eighty. At this time the life of man is represented as gradually diminishing.—"Rameses."—In Goshen, and a treasure city afterward.—"Nourished his father."—By regular supplies as needed, and in proportion to the number of people.—"As Pharaoh had commanded." At a later time, the Egyptians hated shepherds, on account of the Shepherd invasion. But it is not clear that they had anything to do with the treatment of the sons of Jacob now.

INSTRUCTION. Joseph was as shrewd and long-headed as his father, but not as crafty. His father's shrewdness had been selfish and sinful, as when he deceived his father and got the flocks of Laban. Joseph's was used for others, and was free from falsehood. He planned now to persuade Pharaoh to do what was best, but was honest and brave about it.

Statesmanship may be honorable. It is a politician's own fault if he is dishonest. The higher politics tells the truth. Bismark is credited with great truthfulness in his language.

Joseph's loyalty to his family is a chief lesson of this passage. If your family is good, be proud of it and keep its honor pure. If your family is humble, raise it; give it all the help you can. Above all things, do not be ashamed of it.

Keep the bad things about your family to yourself. Hide the family skeleton. We may be sure Joseph did not tell Pharaoh how his brethren, whom he was introducing, had sold him as a slave.

Pharaoh's first question was, What is your business? It naturally comes first. Everybody should have a business. It makes no difference whether one is rich or poor, he should be able to make his living by honest work. So should every woman.

Besides one's avocation, each one has some object to which his avocation is subordinate. We have a chief end in life. What is it? Conversion means the careful selecting of the right chief end.

Pharaoh was kind to the strangers because they were Joseph's brethren. If we are Christ's brethren God will love us for Christ's sake, and Christ will not be ashamed to call us brethren.

Old age deserves honor. The king should rise up before the old man. Nothing more shameful than to fail to honor the old.

Patriarchs seem to have been patrious. He called his days few and evil, but they were not so few nor so very evil. He was among patriarchs which by faith blessed Joseph on his death bed. The angel had redeemed him from all evil. He had sins to lament, but never had let their guilt [illegible] his heart [illegible] of mercy.

[illegible] spoke with a [illegible] in the memories of his children.

[illegible] that life is a pilgrimage. Our home is not here. We are but a few days, but when we take up our trust we pass to a permanent place of abode where we can have a lasting mansion. We should live as strangers and sojourners here seeking a better country, that is a heavenly.

CLINTON PAGE.

CLINTON, MICH., APR. 14, 1887.

Maggie Murphey spent last week in Adrian.

Herman Halladay went to Allegan on his relatives in Tecumseh last Saturday.

Florence Graham of Manchester visited Ella Morey Monday and Tuesday.

Prof. Travis enjoyed a trip to Toledo Evening.

Miss Charlie Burnsdale is to teach the young experts in the Dorr district this term.

Mamie Humphrey spent the vacation with her friends in Saline, returning there the entire week.

Hon. Ellis took a short pleasure excursion, visiting friends in Jackson, Battle Creek and Hillsdale, last week.

Hettie Millspaugh entered upon her duties as dispenser of intellectuality and ordinaries in the Allen district, last Monday.

Orlla Lane and sister, Rosa, visited Tecumseh friends and relatives during vacation, the former returning Monday.

George Freese went to New York Monday to purchase goods to fill in the vacant locations of the six ves in the newly arranged store.

The churches all observed Easter Sunday with appropriate services, and were tastefully and tastily decorated with plants and flowers.

Oh rats!—It is stated a young man disposed of several rats at a single shot, from a target gun, at the freight house the other day.

Mrs. N. Burroughs, of Cherokee, Iowa, and Mrs. H. H. Packard, of Tecumseh, were the guests of J. C. Burroughs and family, last week.

Fred Morey went to South Bend, Ind., last week, to busy himself at a job in the wooden mills, under the direction of superintendent Lewis, formerly of this place.

Hattie Taylor, Minnie Hess, Nellie Kishpaugh, Celia Brewster, May Morey and Ella Swift were in attendance upon the examinations for teachers, last Saturday.

Dr. Burroughs has been very busy lately. He attended five sick horses Saturday, and has several patients of like nature, at the present writing, all doing well in proving under his treatment.

David Hamilton and Mr. Brownell, of Detroit, arrived here on Monday to look after the progress made upon the new mill, and we understand, attend the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Frank McGuire went to Toledo last week to supply the demands at the "Little Daisy" harness emporium, in work, and now has another hand put in to the force, and is bound to meet the requirements of all.

Ask Ed. Semark and he will explain why he is the happy father that rejoices in family amendment, and future help in a good cause. Parties are doing well, and it will soon be in order to furnish a Schools Ward in the city.

The beautiful weather of the past few days has brought the gardener forth, implements in hand, and the appearances of early vegetation are assuming their allotted space in the garden, and the buds upon the trees, seemingly awaiting the coming of the April showers.

The kindness of our friend Allen [illegible] appreciated for remembering [illegible] the distribution of that desert of peanuts and cheese crops. Tecumseh Base Ball boys and Clinton Ends know the value of the former. Never mind the weather is changeable in Michigan—watch the signal—there may be a blizzard yet, and possibly it may bring a coldwater wave. There is not the least doubt that usquebaugh is "too rich for the blood."

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

The following wail from the Greenville, Texas, Herald, contains a brief but pointed temperance lecture:

The cost of an ordinary glass of pure whisky is said to be 5 to 10 cents, yet we continue to pay the regulation price—fifteen cents—for slough water, mixed with tobacco juice and tenpenny hopper dregs.

Some Democrats have questioned the Democracy of the Gazette lately, because it advocated the prohibition of the whisky traffic in this State. We have [illegible] that the liquor traffic means the supporting of the saloon business and obeying the mandates of whisky barons, we should certainly want our Democracy questioned. We are bold enough to believe that a man can be a democrat and a temperance man at the same time. We expect our pocket-book and popularity to suffer some because we think and talk this way. The Gazette has fought hard for Democracy in a strong Republican locality long enough to know that it costs something to contend for principle. Hud Gazette.

These are brave words and Bro. Schermerhorn will merit and receive the respect of honorable men in all parties for using them.

A New Orleans paper tells of a printer, who when his fellow men went out to drink beer, during working hours put in the bank the exact amount which he would have spent if he had gone out to drink. He thus kept his resolution for five years. He then examined his bank account and found he had on deposit $521 86. In the five years he had not lost a day from ill health. Three out of five of his fellow workmen had in the meantime become drunkards, were worthless, and were discharged. The water drinker then bought out the printing office, went on enlarging the business and in twenty years from the time he began to put by his money was worth $100,000.

Ex-Gov. Begole writes the Detroit Evening News in part as follows: I agree with the editor of the Ionia Standard, that the farmers of Michigan get no benefit from the liquor tax as now collected any farther than whatever benefits the towns, citizens and individuals in the aggregate benefits the whole people of the state. The towns and cities get the benefit of the tax. The farmers and day laborers raise the grain and drink the most of the beer and whisky, consequently they pay the most of the taxes. You say that if the farmer abolishes the distillery and brewery he destroys a very large part of the demand for his corn, barley and rye. I agree with you that everything that the farmer can do to sustain and build up the town or city nearest to where he does his business adds to his comfort and pleasure and to the value of every acre of land he owns. But I do not believe that the abolition of the liquor traffic will detract from the price or value of any productions of the farm that are used in the manufacture of whisky and beer, with the exception of hops. I am a farmer by profession and am now largely interested in farming. I would like to take my chances for better prices and lower taxes in any community where the liquor traffic is abolished.

GALVESTON, TEX., April 9.—The anti-prohibitionists have called a meeting for the 30th, "to set forth clearly and universally the time-honored principles of Democracy as its opposition to all forms of sumptuary legislation."

The News to-day publishes an open letter from Senator John H. Reagan, replying to the invitation of the committee to attend the coming meeting. Reagan's letter will produce a genuine sensation in the political world of Texas. He comes out squarely in favor of prohibition and deals the organization some Herculean blows from a Democratic standpoint. Two years ago Mr. Reagan stood beside Senator Coke, Governor Ireland, Congressman Mills and other Democrats in strenuously opposing the growth of the prohibition idea. Reagan's complete conversion on this point surprised his nearest friends. After declaring at length the wretchedness and folly of trying to legislate morality into people, he concludes with the following: "I must express my regret that any effort has been made to make a party question of prohibition, and especially do I regret that the Democrats should seek to identify that great and grand historic party with the fortunes and fate of the whisky shops, drunkards and criminals. Viewing the question from a dollars and cents standpoint the senator continues: "There is a broad difference between the laws which interfere with legitimate trade, and with such as would interfere with the purchase and sale of necessary food and drink and raiment, called sumptuary laws, and laws which have for their object the prevention and punishment of crime and the preservation of public morals and decency, and I think it hardly just to the memory of Mr. Jefferson to assume that he would not have recognized this distinction.

Drunkenness, or Liquor Habit, can be cured by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or ate without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and today believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effects results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and for particulars. Address in confidence GOLDEN SPECIFIC Co., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

ONE BOTTLE CURED HIM.

A. H. Thompson, Rockford, Ill., writes: "I have been troubled with Catarrh for years, nothing helped me until I tried Papillon Catarrh Cure. I followed directions, and with less than one bottle, I am cured." Papillon extract of flax Catarrh Cure will positively and permanently cure Bronchial Catarrh, Acute or Chronic Catarrh, also Rose Cold and Hay Fever. Large bottle $1.00.

For sale by A. S. Doty.

We have received a copy of the report of the commissioner of Patents for 1886. It contains much valuable statistical information.

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY

Of the nineteenth century, can truly be said of Papillon extract of flax Skin Cure. Thousands testify to its wonderful curative powers in seemingly hopeless cases of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas and every kind of skin diseases. Mr. O. P. Alger, of Hartford, Ohio, tried everything he heard of or saw recommended, and suffered five years with Eczema until he found Papillon Skin Cure, which cured him. Large bottles only $1.00.

Messers. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.: Have taken Hall's Catarrh Cure. Had catarrh all my life; am 18 years old. Had asthma 18 years, and a dreadful cough for five years. Have taken everything; went to the Hot Springs; I have doctored with the doctors here; I have done nothing but take medicine for 16 years. When I commenced using Hall's Catarrh Cure I was almost dead. I sent for the doctor the day I got Hall's Catarrh Cure, and I told him that I would die any way and that I would try your medicine. I was very bad. How I suffered for 6 years! I could hardly breath at times. I saw Hall's Catarrh Cure advertised in the papers and commenced taking it. I would have been under the ground to-day if it had not been for that. I have not had one bad spell of coughing since, in breathing my head feels well and I am well. It has done me a thousand dollar worth of good. There are ten of my friends, on seeing what it had done for me, taking it, is helping them. I only wish that every one who has catarrh, asthma and a bad cough could see me, so that I could tell them all to take it. All that know me here know how I have suffered. I have been here since 1855, and say to me that "I am so glad you found something that could cure you." Everyone says, "how much better you look." The doctors say they are glad I found Hall's Catarrh Cure as they could not cure me."

I cannot express my gratitude to you for the good Hall's Catarrh Cure has done me. You can use as much of this letter as will do the afflicted good. Publish it to the whole world it is all true and they should know it.

TECUMSEH, April 12, 1887.

Citizens of Tecumseh

MOCKETT, OF TOLEDO, SPEAKS:

CITIZENS OF TECUMSEH: There are, no doubt, many of you in need of Clothing, Furnishing Goods, and Hats and Caps. To you who have lost the habit of buying these goods at home, we wish to call your attention to the fact that you can save fully 25 per cent., perhaps more, by buying your Clothing, Hats, Caps, etc., from us. If such is the case we do not be to your interest, as well as ours, to come to Toledo to buy outfits. Many of you will probably say to yourselves this is only an advertisement. We admit it, but nevertheless it contains nothing but simple truth. Would you ask us why we can sell so much lower than the dealer in your own town? We will tell you.

BECAUSE We buy in much larger quantities than small dealers, cash, and in large quantities we get the benefit of very lowest quotations, which we divide with our customers. A man buying [illegible] lead, buys it lower per [illegible] than he who buys only a single bushel.

BECAUSE All our purchases [illegible] we get the benefit of a cash discount of from seven to ten per cent., which discount alone foots up a business to from [illegible] to $1,000 a year. This is an item [illegible] dealers cannot get because they do not do enough business to warrant it.

BECAUSE We visit the Eastern markets [illegible] every three or four months, [illegible] right there on the spot to buy goods [illegible] are offered to buyers [illegible] country dealers, because the [illegible] small towns to sell large stocks.

ANOTHER REASON Why we can [illegible] with us [illegible] and [illegible] from which to make your selections [illegible] CLASSED IT NOTHING MORE!

ANOTHER REASON [illegible] show you a newer and fresher stock [illegible] Our goods sell rapidly [illegible] and [illegible] every week, while [illegible] have the latest early stock to select from. You can [illegible] shop with us [illegible] you have [illegible]

SATISFY YOURSELVES [illegible] examine our goods [illegible] satisfied with your bargain. We want [illegible] will come again.

RIDGEWAY PARAGRAPHS.

Frosty mornings for the past few days.

More rain is needed to make wheat and grass get to the front at a little rapid.

The elevator is receiving the second coat of paint. Ezra Spink is doing the brush work.

The Depot has been going through the renovating process, lately.

Dr. Barnes of Tecumseh, is attending Mrs. P. Sharp, who is in poor health. He makes a visit weekly.

J. [illegible] left for Essex, Clinton county, Tuesday, where he will spend some time.

W[illegible] and family felt for their new home, near Mt. Pleasant, on Monday morning. He shipped his household goods via. Dundee, [illegible] and P. A. & Northern. Mr. Wright. As William is in p[illegible] a few wish him extra success [illegible].

A[illegible] made us a flying visit [illegible]. He in company with Wm. Sh[illegible] of Tecumseh, are going into [illegible] and poultry business at Howell, Mich.

He was Commissioner Harrison seen so very busy attending to business as present, being away nearly all the time.

What is the matter with the feed-mill that it is not finished? We are asked the question nearly every day, and can only say, it is a conundrum.

C. A. Sharp of Tecumseh, was in the village and vicinity one day last week looking up some business interests in connection with the firm of D. W. Clark.

Louis Priest of Tecumseh, spent Sunday with his mother-in law, Mrs. Cheever.

Philip Parks of St. John, has been with friends near the village, for several days.

Mrs. W. H. Atner of Raisin, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. W. C. Wilson.

Prof. Frank Parker of Dundee, was in the village Tuesday shaking hands with friends. His health does not improve very rapidly.

Coryell & Gripton are up with the times, receiving new implements nearly every day. The latest tool received is the Lehr wheel cultivator.

W. R. Wilson will have to take a back seat with his big egg, as Lewis Miller comes to the front with one that measures 7½ by 8½ inches in circumference. Who next?

S. F. Marsteller of Clinton, was in the village Tuesday.

Wm. Shedicer and family called on old acquaintances Tuesday evening. Will left for Howell, Wednesday morning. Mrs. Shedicer and the children will spend a few days with friends here before they leave for their new home. They have the heartly wishes of their many friends here, for success.

The attendance at the W. C. T. U. held at the President's Tuesday evening, was as large as usual. Their next parlor gathering will be held at Mrs. Wm. Pilbeam's, south of the village, Tuesday afternoon, May 31.

The base ball association is flourishing. The boys played their first game Saturday. Joe. Wiggins the catcher was hit by a wild ball on the nose, breaking it. Dr. Nelson being on the ground performed the surgical operation. Their new uniforms have been ordered. They are preparing an entertainment, to be given at Cottage Hall, in the near future, for the benefit of the association. It is said to be the best entertainment of the kind given at the Hall. If so, it is well worth hearing. Full particulars next week. Address all communications to J. D. Loree, Secretary.

Our citizens were surprised on Tuesday to learn that Will Clack, who has been clerking for G. W. Clark several months, had bought out the firm. He will close out the present stock of dry goods and groceries, and fill up the store with a new stock about May 1st. We wish him success. Say, Will, "what's the matter of taking in a lady partner."

Detroit has its Operas, Tecumseh a Gymnasium but Sammie was Proprietor of a whole circus last week while trying to break his bicycle to ride. He did not succeed until he had been thrown several times, sometimes landing on his neck and ears, at others at full length on the front side of his vest, ranning his cuffs and collar in the sand, leaving an impression of more grit, if not experience, at each attempt to master his undertaking.

We trust the legislature will resubmit, so that we can vote on it every spring. It don't require any petition from the people to submit that, and the members all vote "yes" without regard to party affiliations.

Wage labor going down, and official salaries going up. "Its a poor rule that won't work both ways."

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Ebenezer Mills, age 78 years, 1 month and 2[illegible] days, quietly passed away and left the cares and trials and suffering of this life, to enjoy the peace and joys that our Savior has gone to prepare for us.

Ebenezer Mills was born in Groveland, Livingston county, N. Y., Feb. 12th 1809. His father, Major Philo Mills, was a native of that state. Ebenezer Mills lived with his parents until he was 2[illegible] years old. In 1829 his father came to Michigan and purchased land in Lenawee county, and in the fall of 1830 Ebenezer came to settle on a part of it. The land was on section 18 in the present town of Franklin. He resided there until 1835 when he traded with his father for land in Hillsdale county, which he afterward sold and purchased a farm on section 8, where he now resided. At that time game was very plentiful, especially deers and wolves, and as he was one of the best marksmen it was no trouble for him to have plenty of fresh meat. We have often heard him tell of standing in his door and counting from seventy to eighty deer as they passed along on the run-way in the morning. We have often heard him tell of walking from Tecumseh when there was nothing but a foot path, and the wolves followed him all the way home, and he kept them off with a club. He was the last one of his father's family that lived in Franklin. He has one brother, Philo C. Mills, who resides in Adrian, and one sister, Almira Greene, who resides in Ypsilanti. May 3d, 1831, Ebenezer Mills married Ann Brears, daughter of Thomas and Leah Brears of England, by whom they had eight children of which five are still living. They were the first couple married in Franklin. Mr. Mills had suffered with disease of the heart for some time, but none thought him so near the end. On Sunday April 3d, a large concourse of people met at the residence to pay their last respect and follow the remains to their final resting place. The aged wife and five children still survive him.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson for April 24.

JOSEPH AND HIS FATHER. GEN. XLVI. 28-30.

NOTES. "Pharaoh." Which Pharaoh is not certain.—Pharaoh was a general title for all the Egyptian kings. He is very likely Apepi, the very last of the Shepherd kings.

"Land of Goshen." "Goshen." The northeast part of Egypt nearest Canaan, where the pasturage would be good and the return to Canaan the easiest.——"Took five men and presented them to Pharaoh."—He did not take his father yet. He was old, and so Joseph waited till all the preliminaries were finished.——"Ablemen."—Active and competent. We are not told whether Joseph did as suggested by Pharaoh or not.

"Jacob blessed Pharaoh."—As a very old man might bless a young man. Doubtless "the less is blessed of the better," as the author of Hebrews says of Abraham and Melchisedek. But here it was only superior age which was recognized by the king as giving superiority.——"How old art thou?"—Not an impertinent question, but one of respect and very proper according to Eastern ideas. He saw that Jacob was very old.——"Pilgrimage." Or sojourneying. Staying a little while in life, as nomads roam from place to place.——"Few and evil."—He had suffered peculiar trials from the time that he robbed his brother Esau. The latest had been the loss of his wives, Rachel and Leah.——"The years of the life of my fathers."—Abraham lived to be one hundred and eighty. At this time the life of man is represented as gradually diminishing.——"Rameses."—In Goshen, and a treasure city afterward.——"Nourished his father."—By regular supplies as needed, and in proportion to the number of people.——"As Pharaoh had commanded." At a later time, the Egyptians hated shepherds, on account of the Shepherd invasion. But it is not clear that they had anything to do with the treatment of the sons of Jacob now.

INSTRUCTION. Joseph was as shrewd and long-headed as his father, but not as crafty. His father's shrewdness had been selfish and sinful, as when he deceived his father and got the flocks of Laban. Joseph's was used for others, and was free from falsehood. He planned now to persuade Pharaoh to do what was best, but was honest and brave about it.

Statesmanship may be honorable. It is a politician's own fault if he is dishonest. The higher politics tells the truth. Bismark is credited with great truthfulness in his language.

Joseph's loyalty to his family is a chief lesson of this passage. If your family is good, be proud of it and keep its honor pure. If your family is humble, raise it, give it all the help you can. Above all things, do not be ashamed of it.

Keep the bad things about your family to yourself. Hide the family skeleton. We may be sure Joseph did not tell Pharaoh how his brethren, whom he was introducing, had sold him as a slave.

Pharaoh's first question was, What is your business? It naturally comes first. Everybody should have a business. It makes no difference whether one is rich or poor, he should be able to make his living by honest work. So should every woman.

Besides one's avocation, each one has some object to which his avocation is subordinate. We have a chief end in life. What is it? Conversion means the careful selecting of the right chief end.

Pharaoh was kind to the strangers because they were Josephs' brethren. If we are Christ's brethren God will love us for Christ's sake, and Christ will not be ashamed to call us brethren.

Old age deserves honor. The king should rise up before the old men. Nothing is more shameful than to fail to honor the old.

Jacob seems to have been querulous. He called his days few and evil, though they were not so few nor so very evil. He was much nearer right when he told the sons of Joseph on his death bed that God had fed him all his life long, and his angel had redeemed him from all evil. He had sons to lament, but though he had lost dear ones, his life had been full of mercy.

Joyous is the prospect will be [illegible] for each one who lays up treasure in heaven.

[illegible] that life is a pilgrimage. We have only a year that is pitched for a few days, but when we take up our tent we manage to [illegible] a permanent place of abode where we can have a lasting mansion. We should live as strangers and sojourners here seeking a better country, that is a heavenly.

Lincoln was at first opposed. He is recovering now but rather slowly.

If Secretary Windom's baby will now set up a howl for a new navy, the Secretary himself will feel obliged to head the call.

Statistics show that the consumption of whiskey and brandy is decreasing, while that of beer and wine is rapidly increasing.

The Governor is watching it right and left for his veto of the bill to publish the proceedings of the boards of supervisors. We credit Gov. Luce with the best of intentions in the matter, but he has evidently made a bad blunder.

It is somewhat amusing to see the efforts of some of our exchanges to carry the favor of the liquor interests since the election, when the same journals were watching the fray from the top of the fence before the election.

The law which prohibits murder in the State of Iowa does not seem to prohibit as well as it should, proof of which is the failure to convict Arensdorf of the murder of the Rev. Mr. Haddock. The result of the trial is a travesty on justice.

Ohio still leads them all. On an emigrant train, between Bellaire and Mt. Vernon, last Saturday, nine babies were born. This enthusiastic endeavor to increase the race of native-born Buckeyes should silence criticism as to the faithfulness and patriotism of our newly arrived emigrants from across the ocean.—Toledo Bee.

The tremendous majority against the increase of salaries amendment is a pretty broad hint that the people would probably have voted as emphatically against some other increases that have been made in the last ten years if they had been given a chance. The wise legislator who is looking for signs may safely set it down in the don'ts do so any more column.—Lansing Republican.

Wait a little longer before you buy stoves, or at least wait until the prices of stoves until the manufactures and dealers can work off the immense overstocks on hand, meanwhile saving them all expenses for wages and running machinery, and to assure them a big demand when they choose to start again, it will put millions of dollars in the bosses' pockets, while the strikers will bear all the expenses and losses. That's about the way it looks to a man who squints through a stovepipe.—Exchange.

The Detroit Tribune comments as follows on Gov. Luce's last veto:

"The object of publishing the proceedings in any form should be to keep the taxpayers informed as to the action of the supervisors on all questions by them considered. Manifestly the only way to do this is through some county newspaper. Published in a pamphlet form the proceedings are not seen at all until long after the adjournment of the board, and then not one taxpayer in twenty, as a rule, gets a copy. The extra expense incurred by having the proceedings published in one or more county newspapers would be a mere trifle. Even though its cost be double that for the pamphlets, its publication in the newspaper accomplishes the object sought, while the other plan does not. We regret that Gov. Luce did not view the measure in this light and give it his approval."

The present legislature will undoubtedly amend the present liquor law, and it is more than likely that the amended law will contain the following provisions:

Raising the tax to $500 a year.

Raising the maximum of the bonds to $10,000, with $5,000 for a minimum, the bondsmen to be compelled to list their property, and state what bonds they were already on, if any.

A prohibition of screens or curtains in a bar room, a stipulation that the bar shall be in fair and full view, and located not more than a certain number of feet from the front door.

A distribution of the proceeds of the tax, leaving one half to go as it does now, to the places in which the saloons are located, and placing the other half in the general fund of the county.

Making it incumbent on certain officers of cities, towns or villages, to prohibit the sale of liquor to certain parties, on request of their relatives.

This much seems probable. There is some talk of making the approval of any bonds discretionary with boards of town boards, and this is a good thing to aim for.

That tired feeling and loss of appetite are quickly overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine. Try it and see.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, April 15th.

Public attention is now concentrating upon the National Drill which is to take place in this city next month. The coal famine crisis has here, at least, passed, the movement towards the reorganization of the local militia, putting the companies on a footing to compete for the prizes offered. The cadet fever is at its height, and the committees have their hands full in providing for the visitors who will flock to the Capital in May, and to the thousands who will be in the drill, it is worth a trip across the Atlantic to see the most beautiful city of America in her best attire.

The warm bright sunshine of Easter Monday seemed warmer and brighter in the neighborhood of the White House than anywhere else in this city. Thousands of children, without regard to race, color, or previous condition, thronged the grounds of the Chief Magistrate for the purpose of rolling and picking eggs. It is an annual privilege custom that has long been accorded the youth of the District. They have the entire freedom of the grounds on Easter Monday. They take possession early in the morning, bring their lunches and their nurses, and roll themselves over the greensward when they are tired of rolling eggs, and never desert the sport until nightfall. One feature of the egg festival was its effect upon the afternoon reception to the public at the White House. Many of the festive little ones made free to enter and swelled the attendance to about 1,500 people. One fifth of that number is a pretty good crowd on these tri-weekly occasions. The children were English, Irish, French and Spanish, German, Italian, Dutch and Dannish. At first the President attempted to give each one a greeting with some special remark, but this generous intention was overcome in a few minutes and ere long he was trying to shake hands with three of them at a time. There were hundreds of white folks and aristocratic black folks, and they laid their hands in the Executive palm with equal confidence, occasionally a tow headed boy, soiled and hot from his morning's sport would march up solemnly, put his dirty egg smeared fingers in the Presidential hand, and then sink off as though he had done something he was ashamed of.

Since the Inter State Commerce law went into effect the number of personal applications for appointments under the administration at Washington has diminished very materially. The canceling of free passes has worked a marked falling off in the number of callers at the government departments from the various States and Territories, and individuals to urge appointments and press their claims here. Heretofore a day never passed without such delegations at all the departments, but especially would they infest that of the Interior. They would come from the Pacific coast and far Northwest, and often just in the hope of securing the pettiest office.

Probably the most absurd of all the complaints made against civil service reform is the charge that it will lead to the establishment of an office holding aristocracy. Any one who examines the lists of thousand-dollar secretaries of senators, of committee clerks attached to both houses of Congress, of unclassified officers in the departments here in Washington, and of the occupants of the most comfortable berths in custom houses, federal courts, the postal service, internal revenue and pension offices all over the country, will be astonished at the number of sons, brothers, cousins, nephews, sisters, nieces and aunts, who are drawing incomes from the public treasury.

Only last week a Senator's son was appointed to be chief of division, in one of the Washington departments, and another Senator's son received a clerical position under the Inter State Commerce commission. This is not saying that the fact of one citizen's relationship to another ought to operate as a bar to his official aspirations. But all of these above mentioned places are beyond the reach of the civil service rules. It would be scarcely possible for a more offensive form of aristocracy to obtain than this, which is under the old system of patronage. The new rules restrict admission to the civil service to persons of approved education and intelligence, extend to rich and poor, weak and powerful alike, and give the Government clerk after his installation a sense of security so long as he does his work well and behaves himself in other respects.

THE GREAT BUDDHA.

IS WORSHIPED IN JAPAN.

A Head and Shoulders Only. Ninety-five Feet Higher Laughter Right Under the God's Nose—Hanging the Great Bell of Kioto.

[illegible]

I must in sober truth say this pilgrimage at the same time is a good hearted Nippon family of country people who have come to the holy city for the first time, nearly, and folks—especially the ladies—cannot get over the idea of coming so far a-foot and there are lots of them, and oh—exclamations of surprise—little giggles and little shrieks. Now to-day this Buddha is just too funny, with his stork like neck and his stupid air—funny as any of those show men which you in make at the corners of the streets—funny as some charming caricature made to order by little children. And there the little country family are all laughing right under the very nose—laughing till the tears roll down their cheeks, and the other visitors, and even the guardian bronzes themselves, seem to be fairly laugh. Then they all make some remark—I feel sure of it, and I have to listen too—can't possibly help it. What a country this Japan, where everything is oddity and contrast! Who could ever imagine that this frivolous little people with its reverences and its eternal laugh, could have lived through centuries locked up in such ferocious mystery, and have given birth to those thousands of other temples, with their monsters and their hobgoblins?

MAKING THE GOD NO.

By the payment of two cents one is privileged to make the round of the great Buddha—one ascends by a series of sloping plank galleries, placed at a very steep angle, on which you can pass behind the head of the colossus, a little above the nape of the neck. I advance upon it, still accompanied by the voyaging family; the sloping way is slippery; old, broken through here and there, worm eaten—the ladies very nearly fall. I put out my hand to help them, and then we become good friends right away. Behind the enormous head, in a dark nook, an old bronze is squatting down—for one cent, he shows us a suit of armor and a war mask which once belonged to the great Taiko-sama—and then he throws open for our benefit sundry very ancient idol cosets, in which annual dearest divinities are conserved with various relics of weird aspect. There we do not laugh any more.

In the court of this temple is the most monstrous of all the bells of Kioto, at least seven or perhaps eight yards around. It is rung by means of an enormous beam tipped with Buddha—a sort of battering ram suspended horizontally with ropes.

For two cents extra one has the right to experiment with it. I harness myself to the pulling straps, a circle is formed around me and children run up. Even two or three young priests come behind me to take part in ringing me a great peal.

[illegible]

The united strength of the three is almost equal to the power of three good fifteens.

Meanwhile the battering ram begins to yield, gradually it begins to swing. Boom! boom! A sound awful, civilized, and personified into mighty orchestral vibrations which must be heard through the whole of the sacred city.

Then the audience is so happy!—delirious with joy—can't get enough of it, every one laughs, every one is in ecstacy.—New Orleans Times-Democrat's Translation from the French.

Metals and Alloys.

One of the curiosities of science is to be found in the effect of impurities upon an alloy of gold and copper or other metal. Workers in the precious metal have long known that minute quantities of certain other metals render gold brittle and unworkable. It is, in fact, a serious difficulty with which jewelers have always had to contend.

In an experiment recently made to demonstrate the truth, 200 sovereigns were melted and a minute portion of lead added, amounting only to the 2,000th part of the weight of the mass. A little of the pure gold had been first run into a small ingot which was bent and flattened to prove that it was perfectly workable.

The rest of the mass was allowed to harden in the form of a bar, and when it was sufficiently cool to handle it could be broken by a slight tap of a hammer, or even with the fingers. The color of the gold was quite altered and had become an orange brown, while its tenacity—that is, its resistance to a force exerted to pull it asunder—had been reduced from eighteen tons to the square inch to five tons.

A bar of tin, which could scarcely be broken, though it would readily bend double, was rubbed with a slight quantity of quicksilver. The fluid penetrated the soft tone, and in a few seconds the bar could be readily broken. Its fractured surface was white, like silver.

A Very Valuable Tonic.

Mr. Editor: I was induced by reading your good paper to try Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic for debility, liver disorder and constipation, and three bottles have cured me. Accept my thanks. Jos. C. Boggs

The Appetite

May be increased, the Digestive organs strengthened, and the bowels regulated, by taking Ayer's Pills. These Pills are purely vegetable in their composition. They contain neither calomel nor any other dangerous drug, and may be taken with perfect safety by persons of all ages.

I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was constantly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time my digestion and appetite my bowels were regulated, and, by the time I finished two boxes of these Pills my tendency to headaches had disappeared, and I became strong and well.—Darius M. Logan, Wilmington, Del.

I was troubled, for over a year, with Loss of Appetite and General Debility. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills and, before finishing half a box of this medicine, my appetite and strength were restored.—C. O. Clark, Danbury, Conn.

Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for over three years with Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time.

BY USING

three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and at the same time doing myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—P. Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking one box of Ayer's Pills, all these troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but give me the greatest vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B.

GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP

OF WILD CHERRY, TAR, GLYCERINE, ETC.

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION

And is the best remedy for the cure of all affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, such as Coughs, Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Croup, Pain or Oppression of the Chest, Hoarseness, Spitting of Blood, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

We have the gratifying fact to know that no case in which GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP has been taken, no matter how hopeless, has been found beyond the reach of its curative powers. Nature, when properly assisted, will throw off the disease, if the system is not too far gone to be organized. Now, if we can place in the system, in a form easily assimilated, a preparation of this food material, so that through the process of electric affinity it may be carried to the seat of the disease, the progress of the disease is arrested by preventing the further supply of the material on which it feeds, and Nature, left to herself, under its influence, will throw off the disease. This is the way in which this syrup does. It at once controls Coughs, Night Sweats, Pain in the Side and Breast, Difficulty of Breathing, Spitting of Blood, and all other symptoms of Consumption. Consumption is a disease of the mucous membrane and scrofulous tubercles, and is the most frightful form of all diseases, and makes the life of the patient a burden. Until recently it was generally considered an affection beyond the reach of medicine. Of late, however, there has been a marked improvement in the management of pulmonary diseases, so that now it is a fact that many practitioners have acknowledged that consumption can be cured. We are not alone in our opinion. To those afflicted with the victims to that fatal malady, we offer a remedy sure in its results to bring back health to their poor wasted frames, and joy to the hearts of their friends.

Consumptives, because all other means fail, believe not that MEXICAN SYRUP will. Not a single sufferer need perish if he or she will take GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP in time. A cough is usually the first symptom of disease. It stands in close relation with the respiratory organs, and should be taken at once at the first indication of a cough. TRY IT, you who suffer, and be convinced. Do you want to be cured from a consumptive's grave? Then make one more trial. This remedy is in the reach of everybody, it costs but a trifle, only $1 a bottle. Is your life not worth 50 cents? If so, make one more trial. Is life indeed worth one more trial? Test the truth of our words by one single bottle, and never give way to despair until you are certain there is no hope. It has saved thousands, and it will cure you. As we would plead with a friend to save him from taking his own life, we plead with you, to save yourselves from a premature grave. We positively guarantee a perceptible improvement when the medicine is faithfully and persistently used.

are a beautiful boys, owe their beauty to a combination of health, purity of blood, and the hereditary taint or humors to the use of Cuticura Remedies.

Pimples and blotches are born into the world with some eruption, such as scald head, tetter, or Lazarus scale, which spread and fasten upon the face, scalp, and body, and, in the case of scald head, a portion of which make life a burden for years, if not for life, unless properly treated.

A warm bath with CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite skin beautifier, and a single application of the Great Skin Cure, with a little Cuticura Resolvent, the New Blood Purifier, is sufficient to arrest the progress of the disease, and, if persisted in, to point to a speedy and permanent cure.

I have used the CUTICURA REMEDIES so much and with such good that I feel like saving my little girl's life to those who are troubled with the disease. My little girl was troubled with eczema, and I tried several doctors and many medicines, but none do her any good until I used your CUTICURA REMEDIES, which speedily cured her. "Please, sir," said the biggest, at last, "is this Mr. Croft's house—Mr. Croft, South African Republic?"

"Where?" I believed, startled out of my [illegible]

He looked up, and caught Bessie watching him with an air of curiosity and amusement. Jess was still leaning against the piano and gently touching the notes, over which her head was bent low, showing the coils of curling hair which were twisted round it like a coronet.

BESS WAS STILL LEANING AGAINST THE PIANO.

"Well, Capt. Niel," said the old man, waving his pipe in her direction, "and what do you say to my singing bird's music, eh? Isn't it enough to draw the heart out of a man, eh, and turn his marrow to water, eh?"

"I never heard anything quite like it," he answered, simply, "and I have heard most singers. It is beautiful. Certainly I never expected to hear such singing in the Transvaal."

She turned quickly, and he observed that, though her eyes were slight with excitement, her face was as impassive as ever.

"There is no need for you to laugh at me, Capt. Niel," she said, quickly, and then, with an abrupt "Good night," left the room.

The old man sniffed, jerked the stem of his pipe over his shoulder after her, and winked in a way that, no doubt, meant unutterable things, but which did not convey much to his astonished guest, who sat still and said nothing. Then Bessie got up and bade him good night in her pleasant voice, and with horses wildly cared inquired as to whether his room was to his liking, and how many blankets he liked upon his bed, telling him that if he found the color of the moonflowers, that grew near the Veranda, too strong, he had better shut the right hand window and open that on the other side of the room; and then at length, with a pleasant little nod of her golden head, she went out smiling. He thought as he watched her retreating figure, round, as a healthy, graceful and generally satisfactory a young woman as a man could wish to see.

"Take a glass of grog, Capt. Ned," said the old man, pushing the square bottle toward him; "you'll need it after the mauling that brute gave you." By the way, I haven't thanked you enough for saving my life. But I do thank you, you, that I do. I must tell you that Bessie is my favorite niece. Never was there such a girl never. Makes like a springbuck, and what an eye and form! Work, too—she'll do as much work as three. There's no nonsense about Bessie, none at all. She's not a fine lady, for all her fine looks."

"The two sisters seem very different," said John.

"Ay, you're right there," said the old man. "You'd never think that the same blood ran in their veins, would you? There's three years between them, that's one thing. Jess's the youngest, you see—she's just 21 and Jess is 24. Lord, to think that it is twenty-three years since that girl was born! And theirs was a queer story, too."

"Indeed?" said his listener, interrogatively.

"Ay," he went on absently, knocking out his pipe and refilling it out of a big, brown jar of coarse cut Boer tobacco; "I'll tell it to you if you like; you are going to live in the house, and you may as well know it. I am sure, Capt. Ned, that it will go no further. You see I was born in England, yes, and well born, too. I come from Cumberland—from that fat tenant's down round Sly. My father was a clergyman. Well, he wasn't rich, and when I was 20 he gave me his blessing, thirty sovereigns in my pocket and my passage to the Cape, and I shook his hand. God bless him! and off I came, and here in the old colony and this country I have been for fifty years, for I was 70 yesterday. Well, I'll tell you more about that another time, it's about the girls I'm speaking now. After I left home twenty years after or hard on it—my dear old father married again, a youngish woman with some money, but beneath him somewhat in life, and by her he had one son and three daughters. Well, it was but little I heard of my half brother, except that he had turned out very badly, married and taken to drink, till one night some twenty years ago, when a strange thing happened. I was sitting here in this very room, as, in this very chair—for this part of the house was up then, though the wings weren't built—and smoking my pipe and listening to the lashing of the rain, for it was a very foul night. When suddenly an old pointer dog I had, named Ben, gave a bark.

"'Lie down, Ben, it's only the Kaffirs,' said I.

"Just then I thought I heard a faint sort of whimpering at the door, and Ben barked again, so I got up and opened it, and in came two little girls, wrapped up in old shawls or some such gear. Well, I shut the door, looking out to see if there were any more outside, and I tell you I stood and stared at the two little things sight my mouth open. There they stood, hand in hand, the water dripping from both of them, and the eldest—she must have been 11, and the second about 8—she didn't say anything, but the eldest opened and took the shawl and hat off the youngest, that was Bessie—and there was her sweet little face and her golden hair, and dainty enough both of them were, and she put her thumb in her mouth, and stood and looked at me till I began to think that I was dreaming.

"'Please, sir,' said the biggest, at last, 'is this Mr. Croft's house—Mr. Croft, South African Republic?'

"'Yes, my dear, sir, we are your nieces and we have come to you from England.'

"'Where?' I bellowed, startled out of my [illegible]

[illegible]

"'Your mother, sir, is dead, and the girls ask if you will take them in.'

"Well, I was [illegible] thing. There they stood, wet and cold, and hungry, [illegible] I said, 'come in and get warm.' [illegible] the door and called to them to come in. [illegible] and they walked in, and I shut the door and bolted it, and turned round to look at them. [illegible] a bit frightened.

"'And how long have you been [illegible]?' I said, [illegible] 'Long before you had left your home.' [illegible]

"'And this is the tale they told me—compressed, of course, from what I learned later—[illegible] I expected a North African [illegible] sweet young thing. Cruel to treat her like a dog. He was a drunken rascal, was Jay, half brother, and he left his poor wife and shamefully neglected her, and even ill treated the two little girls, till at last the poor woman, weak as she was from suffering and ill health, could bear it no longer, and formed the wild idea of escaping to this country and throwing herself upon my protection. It will show how desperate she must have been. She scraped together and borrowed some money, enough to pay for three second class passages to Natal and a few pounds over, and one day, when her brute of a husband was away on the drink and gamble, she slipped on board a sailing ship in the London docks, and before he knew anything about it they were well out to sea. But it was her last effort, poor, dear soul, and the excitement of it finished her. Before they had been ten days at sea she died, and the two poor children were left alone. And what they must have suffered, or rather what poor Jess must have suffered, for she was old enough to feel, God only knows. But I can tell you this, she hasn't yet got over the shock to this hour. It has left its mark on her, sir. But, let people say what they will there is a power that looks after the helpless, and that power took those poor, homeless, wandering children under its wing. The captain of the vessel befriended them, and when at last they got to Durban some of the passengers made a subscription and got an old Boer, who was coming up this way with his wife to the Transvaal, to take them under his charge. The Boer and his vrouw treated the children fairly well, but they did not do one thing more than they bargained for. At the turn from the Wakkerstroom road, that you came along to-day, they put the children down, for they had no baggage, and told them if they went along there they would come to Member Croft's house. That was in the middle of the afternoon, and they were until sundown getting here. Poor little dears, for the track was fainter then than it is now and they wandered off into the veldt and would have perished there in the wet and cold and they not chanced to see the lights of the house. And that was how my nieces came here, Capt. Niel. And here they have been ever since, except for a couple of years when I sent them to the Cape for schooling, and a lonely man I was when they were away.

"And how about this father?" asked John Niel, deeply interested. "Did you ever hear any more of him?"

"Hear of him, the villain!" almost shouted the old man, jumping up in wrath. "Ay, I did—he, I heard of him. What do you think? The two chicks had been with me some eighteen months, long enough for me to learn to love them with all my heart, when one fine morning as I was sitting about the new kraal wall, I saw a fellow come riding up on an old raw boned, gray horse. Up he comes to me, and as he came I looked at him, and said to myself, 'Jay, you are drunkard, you are, and a rogue, it's written on your face, and what's more, I know your face.' You see I did not guess it was a son of my own father's that I was looking at. How should I?

"'Is your name Croft?' he said.

"'Ay,' I answered.

"'So is mine,' he went on with a sort of a drunken leer. 'I'm your brother.'

"'Are you?' I said, beginning to get my back up, for I guessed what his game was, and what may you be after? I tell you at once, and to your face, that if you are my brother you are a blackguard, and I don't want to know you or have anything to do with you, and if you are not, I beg your pardon for coupling you with such a scoundrel.'

"'Oh, that's your tune, is it?' said he, with a sneer. 'Well, now, my dear brother Silas, I want my children.' They have got a little half brother at home—for I have married again, Silas—who is anxious to have them to play with, so if you will be so good as to hand them over, I'll take them away at once.'

"'You'll take them away, will you?' said I, all of a trouble with rage and fear.

"'Yes, Silas, I will.' They are mine by law, and I am not going to breed children for you to have the comfort of their society. I've taken advice, Silas, and that's sound law,' and he leered at me again.

"I stood and looked at the mare, and thought of how he had treated those poor children and their young mother, and my blood boiled and I grew mad. Without another word I jumped over the half unbuilt wall and caught him by the leg (for I was a strong man in my years ago) and jerked him off the horse. As he came down he dropped the standback from his hand, and I caught hold of it and then and there gave him the soundest hiding a man ever had. Lord, how he did holler! When I was tired I let him get up.

"'Now,' I said, 'be off with you, and if you come back to Natal with your tricks, I'll give the South African Republic a call, and we don't care overmuch about law here.' Why, I wouldn't do it these days.

"'All right, Silas,' he said, 'all right, you shall pay for this.' I'll have it out, depend, and, for your sake, I'll make things like hell.' Mark my words, South African Republic or no South African Republic, I've got the law on my side.'

"And he took off his coat and ran at me, and I thing he should kick after him. And it was the first and last time I saw my brother.

"'What became of him?' asked John Niel.

"'I'll tell you, in a few words, I suppose you want that there is a power that keeps just such men in its eye. He went back to New Scotland that night, and went among the canteen thieves, abusing me and getting drunk and drunkenness, and at last the canteen keeper sent for his boy to turn him out. Well, the boys were rough, as Kaffirs are apt to be with a drunken white man, and he struggled and fought, and in the middle of it the blood began to run from his mouth, and he dropped down a dead of a broken blood vessel, and there was an end of him. That is the story of the two girls, Capt. Niel, and now I'm off to bed. To-morrow I'll show you round the farm, and we will have a talk about business. Good night to you, Capt. Niel, good night!"

CHAPTER III.

MR. FRANK MULLER.

John Niel woke early next morning, feeling [illegible] well beaten and then stripped up [illegible] girls. He made sport, however, to dress himself, and then, with the help of a stick, limped through the French windows that opened from his room on to the veranda and looked out of the scene before him. It was a delicious one. Just at the foot of the house was the stoep, beyond which grass ran down to a long, flat tract covered pools on which, early, some [illegible] grey-plumed geese, on the top of which the house was perched. Side of these there was a strip of the wagon road and beyond, a wide sweep of rolling veld, with [illegible] on the further side of which green [illegible] and the blue gum [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

THE FARMER'S GARDEN.

Paper Read by Abner Wilson, at the Late Farmer's Institute, held at Tecumseh.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: [illegible] I shall confine myself to gardening for home use or gardening for farmers, and would say right here to those who have an idea that the business of market gardening is a sure road to an independent fortune, that my advice is the same as Horace Greeley gave the young man of eighteen, who contemplated matrimony, "don't." I do not expect to present you any new ideas nor to exhaust the subject. When such able writers as Henderson, Gregory, Downing and Rowe have written large volumes without exhausting the subject, it would be a hopeless task for me in this short paper to even think of making a beginning. If I can by a few hints start any one to planting to supply his table with fresh wholesome vegetables, I shall feel well paid. Most farmers have already planned where they shall sow oats and plant corn, which fields they will seed down and how small a potatoe patch they will fight the bugs in, but how many are here who plan to have a garden until perhaps after corn planting. After the women folks have asked the question over a dozen times, "John when are you going to make our garden." Then at last in a fit of desperation he plows and plants a patch 3 or 4 rods square and makes the rows so close they will have to be hoed by hand, and plants lettuce, onions, sweet corn, early and late cabbage, tomatoes and squashes, all the same day. These gardens are usually kept clean until haying and harvest, when the weeds take possession of them and they are a sight to behold. Now I do not accuse any member of our Farmer's Club making gardens in this way. But I think the impression among farmers of late years is, that it is cheaper to buy vegetables of those who make a business of it than it is to raise them. This may be true, and I certainly think it is of such vegetables as late cabbage, celery, also hot bed plants of all kinds. But how many who live a distance from the market can buy them fresh every day and when wanted. How many are there who plan to buy their vegetables have asparagus, lettuce, green peas, sweet corn and cabbage during the hot weather when such food is needed for our health. I will give you a hint of how I would lay out a garden for home use.

First, as to location. It should be as near the house as possible, and, as chickens and turkeys are the pest of the garden I would have it fenced by all means and for this purpose the wire and picket fence is both effectual and and cheap.

Second, as to soil. The soil should be as sandy as possible for all kinds of vegetables. I would have my garden laid out 12 or 16 rods long and 4 to 6 rods wide for an ordinary family with a space of 12 or 16 feet on end nearest the house for asparagus, pie plant, radishes, lettuce and onions, which should be grown in beds. Between these beds and the rest of the garden have a good space to turn horse and cultivator, and also at the other end of the garden. Asparagus is the first vegetable that comes on the table in the spring and can be had in three years from roots. 100 or 150 roots will give sufficient "grass" for a large family. In starting a bed spade or plow in a fabulous amount of manure and plant the roots 3 feet apart each way with the crowns at least 4 inches below the surface. Keep clean and do not cut the tops until the third year. Pie plant is easily started from roots, half a dozen will be enough; radishes, lettuce and onions should be sown in rows one foot apart. The sets for onions will give the best satisfaction. The same rule for manure applies to lettuce, radishes and onions, but top dress the beds with ashes or soot. The balance of the garden should have 12 or 15 loads of well rotted manure to the acre. Spread evenly and plowed as early as the ground will work down fine, which is to be done with the drag or granger and roll down. Now spread unleached ashes all you have; no fear getting on too much. I have put a wagon load on 1 acre with good results. Thoroughly drag one half and mark out with a three legged marker in straight rows 2½ or 3 feet apart. In planting early potatoes cut them to one eye and drop the pieces 8 or 10 inches apart in the rows. I furrow out with a cultivator and cover with same tool set to draw the earth in. Plant peas same depth as early potatoes, about 4 inches, reserving one row for early cabbage, which may be set two feet apart in the rows. One row for beets and one for parsnips and vegetable oysters, which seed may be sown by hand and covered with a garden rake.

Now we have the hardy vegetables planted. Lettuce, radishes, onions, peas, beets and parsnips can be planted as soon as the ground can be worked; the tender sorts which it is safe to say should be planted about corn planting time or perhaps a little later, when I should drag thoroughly to kill the weeds which have started. Then about 6 rows of sweet corn, another row or two of peas, one row of bush or pole beans, one row of tomatoes with a dozen or so peppers, 200 or more late cabbage and a few to succeed broken and cut worms. The work by spring [illegible] them planted with the exception of the corn, in a separate place, and as I do not claim to be an expert in this line of gardening, will leave this part of the subject for a more experienced writer.

Now having your garden planted in long rows you can cultivate nearly all the space with the horse, and can go over the whole garden twice in a row in an hour or once in a row in half that time, and for this purpose I know of no better tool than a planet cultivator with an extra set of teeth 14 in wide and an attachment called a scuffler, which can be made by a blacksmith and consists of two steel knives running just below the surface of the ground. With these tools the hoe is nearly dispensed with. Indeed in cultivating 18 acres in garden crops this last year I am safe to say we did not use the hoe more than 9 days or one day to two acres cultivated. I could have put all the weeds in a wagon box. In regard to seeds I have urged our dealers to buy nearly all kinds [illegible] more reliable. There are several good seed farms among which I would mention Gregory, Henderson, Vick, Ellinghast and others, each having their specialty. Some kinds of seed can be kept two or three years and will grow just as well, among which are beets, melons, cucumbers, lettuce, radishes etc., so that these varieties can be purchased in quantities. The selection of varieties is so important that I have made out a list of those which in my experience are the best adapted to this latitude.

Asparagus—Conovers Colossal.
Lettuce—Curled Simpson, or Prize Head.
Radish—Long Scarlet and French Breakfast.
Onions—Bottom sets, white or yellow.
Seed onions—Yellow Danvers and Red Wethersfield.
Early Potatoes—Early Ohio.
Peas—Little Gem.
Early Cabbage—Wakefield and Winningstadt.
Late Cabbage—Premium Flat Dutch and Winningstadt.
Sweet Corn—These three varieties will give you green corn two months: Marblehead, Early Minnesota, Stowell's Evergreen.
Beets—Egyptian Turnip.
Parsnips—Hollow crown.
Muskmelon—Green Nutmeg.
Watermelon—Ferry's Peerless.
Pepper—Mountain Sweet.
Tomato—Acme and Perfection.
Squash—Hubbard and Crookneck.
Turnip—Purple top strapleaf.
Rutabaga—Yellow Swede.

In many cases after a crop of early potatoes and peas has been taken off, the ground can be sowed to turnips or planted to late cabbage and celery with good results.

Insect enemies have always been the pest of man ever since God first pronounced a curse upon our first parents. The only way to deal with insects is to fight them, or in other words to give them what they do not like. The small black flee will make its appearance very early on the small radish and cabbage plants. They should be dusted with ashes, soot or plaster when the dew is on, repeating this once or twice usually settles them. For potato bugs Paris green, for the striped squash bug one or two applications of dry ashes or plaster very early in the morning before he has had his breakfast will make him take to his wings and fly to pastures new. I am asked nearly every day in summer what to do for the green cabbage worm. In reply I would say I do not know of any successful remedy unless it is to give them just what they do not want, a thrifty growing cabbage. The keeping of vegetables for winter is a very important item, and I would say the specimens you see before you were all taken from the ground or pit since this afternoon session, and were not selected to show any extraordinary size. Beets and turnips can be kept in a cool cellar if you only put some sawdust or sand between them. Parsnips and vegetable oysters can be left in the ground till spring. Do not keep cabbage in the cellar, it not only spoils the vegetable, but it sometimes spoils the sweetness of the House. They should be kept in a pit made in this manner. The ground should be hollowed out 6 inches deep and three feet wide, the cabbage placed top downward and covered with 3 inches of straw and 3 inches of earth. Then when you take out your will have a vegetable fit for the King.

In conclusion let me urge upon you all to aim to supply your tables with health giving fruits and vegetables, thanks to the giver of every good and perfect gift that he has cast our lot in a congenial climate on fertile soil and in a land of peace and plenty.

A THRIVING INDUSTRY.

THE BUSINESS OF THE CHIC & MICH. COAL AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

A Description of their Buildings, the Present Condition of the Enterprise and Future Prospects.

This establishment, although only one year old, ranks among the first business industries of Tecumseh and Lenawee County. The company was incorporated on the 21st day of March last. On the 12th day of April ensuing they purchased the plant of S. W. Temple & Son and began business. Their custom and sales gradually increased until Aug. 20th, when they bought the yards and stock of the Tecumseh Lumber Co. Since that date their business has rapidly increased, until now, at the expiration of the first year, they have the best plant of the kind without any exception, in Southern Michigan. They carry an immense stock of lumber of all kinds, lath, shingles, moulding and coal. We had the pleasure of inspecting the yards and buildings the other day and give herewith the result of our observations.

THE FACTORY

Is a good substantial brick building 63 by 70 feet in size, and two stories high. The stone are now on the ground for an addition, which will make the building 105 by 70 feet in size, and this addition will be constructed at an early day. The engine room is a model of neatness and convenience, containing a fifty horse power engine, which is under the supervision of Elroy Zimmerman. The lower floor of the main building is under the foremanship of W. A. Burlingame. In this department the rough material is prepared for the factory. Here are located a 26 inch surfacer, rip and cut-off saws, turning lathe, shaping machine, and a heavy four sided moulder and matcher. This last machine is a wonder of perfection, working four sides of a piece of wood at once, with a feed capacity of from 40 to 60 ft. per minute. We saw some of the casings worked by this machine, and they were as smooth as though done by hand. An endless variety of knives and bits belong with the machine, by which it can turn out any imaginable style of moulding. Our attention was next called to the band saw. This is a marvel. The work from this machine is mostly in the form of plinth blocks and capitals, and when finished by the operator, are equal to the best hand work. The exhaust fan carries the shavings and sawdust from each machine and deposits them in the shaving bin ready for use in the boiler arch. As we beheld the wonderful suction of this fan a happy thought struck us. Why could not we run such a connecting fan between our woodshed and the piles of some of our pay-in wood subscribers? It would materially lessen our coal bill.

On the second floor is located the sash, door and blind department, which is in charge of P. C. Temple. In the steam dry-kiln, situated on the same floor, there were in process of seasoning over 600 doors. The machines in this department are all of the latest and most approved designs of Fay & Thompson's make, and comprise one tenoner with attachments, two mortisers, cut off and rip saws, stickers and panel raisers, also, one set of blind machinery, consisting of boring, tenoning and wiring machine, door and sash clamps, and a door and sash sand papering machines. Everything in the building was bustle and activity, and work was being turned out at a lively rate.

We next took a stroll through the coal and lumber yards. The coal bins have a capacity of about 600 tons. The flooring, siding, lath, shingle and moulding sheds have a combined length of 300 feet, and with even this capacity for storage, the large stock carried is limited for shelter. Two large warehouses are used, one for the storage of rail shipments and the other for goods sold at retail. The glazing and glass department is the small item of the business. The windows which the company are now furnishing for the Clinton Woolen Mill take nearly 4,000 lights of glass and 600 pounds of putty. The yards and glazing department are under the efficient charge of Mr. Alfred James. The stock kept on hand is one of the best assorted ever brought into this section of the state.

We next proceeded to the pleasant business office on the corner of K. K. and Shawnee streets, where we found the veteran general manager, Mr. S. W. Temple and H. M. Temple, the secretary. In reply to our inquiry as to how business was running they said there was no cause to complain. Their first year's business more than met their expectations. The opening of the second year was very flattering. Local trade was good. The new interstate commerce law had effected the lumber trade very materially, raising transportation rates when lumber came over two or more lines, and lowering it between local points. Rates on coal are a trifle higher than last fall. Soft coal rates are quoted at present from day to day.

Below we give a few of the buildings, which were constructed wholly or in part of materials bought at their establishment during the past season. Tecumseh Creamery, D. W. Clark's residence, Wes. Bordine's residence, Oscar Painner's residence, Mrs. Curtis's residence, Adrian, Mr. Dolson's residence, Ypsilanti, St. Joseph's hospital, Adrian, Treadwell Cottage at Devil's Lake, Davis Cottage at Sand Lake, and numerous other buildings in Manchester, Bridgewater, Clinton, Ridgeway, Britton, Dundee, Onsted, Addison, Clayton, Hudson, Jackson, Brooklyn, Springville, Franklin, etc., etc. The company is now engaged on a large order for Cleveland parties, and is also furnishing most of the material used in the Clinton Woolen Mill. They employ 25 hands and disburse about $600 every month. In addition to the ordinary precautions to guard against fire, they employ a night watchman, his hours of duty being from 6 o'clock P. M., until seven the next morning.

The present Board of directors are O. B. DeWolf, President, S. W. Temple, Vice President and Gen. Manager, H. M. Temple, Sec'y, and Treasurer, Wm. DeMott, and H. C. Wason, of Toledo, Ohio. Both the business and mechanical departments are under most efficient control, and all callers will receive courteous treatment, whether they buy or call for prices.

It is due to Mr. S. W. Temple to say that to his energy and labor is chiefly due the inception and organization of the present company, and it can be said with equal truth that to his long experience and efficient management is due in great measure its present success.

This establishment is a source of pride to all our citizens. It reflects much credit upon the incorporators and managers. It attracts trade not only from the towns adjacent to Tecumseh but from many places at a distance, and thus draws custom here and gives a large number of men constant employment, which adds to the wealth of the village. May their shadow never grow less.

The cut at the head of this article is a faithful representation of the factory, with the new addition. It was executed by our special artist, Mr. Peterson.

FREE CONCERTS.

The Tecumseh Cornet Band, under the leadership of Prof. C. F. Skinner, after a thorough and systematic drill for the past six months, have become one of the best bands in the state, both as to musical abilities, equipment and uniform appearance. The boys have worked hard to obtain this degree of perfection, and have been considerable expense. As is always the case, when an organization of this kind secures popular favor recognition of a substantial character generally follows. The business men of Tecumseh, desiring to show their appreciation, and with an eye to their business interests, have liberally, universally, contributed to a fund for the purpose of having a free open air concert every Saturday afternoon between the hours of five and six o'clock p. m. on the cross-walk of Chicago and Railroad streets. A suitable band stand is now being constructed, which will be placed in position at the time specified for the band to commence, and removed when it is over. Our country friends, visiting town on Saturdays will be entitled to an open air concert free, by a band, which we are sure they will appreciate, and visit our village more. The inauguration of this feature will be carried out on Saturday afternoon of next week, April 23, and the band will appear in full uniform. All come to town and hear them.

BURNHAM & CO'S MOVE

J. L. Burnham & Co., for many years one of the leading wholesale dry goods houses of Detroit, has given place to the new firm of Burnham, Munger & Co. which comprises David M. Whitney, Jr., James K. Burnham, Frederick C. Steople and Albert H. Munger. Mr. Whitney is the special partner, contributing $100,000. J. J. Toofle and James Wilson, long in the employ of the old firm, have also been admitted as general partners. The house of Toofle, Hanna & Co. of Kansas City, has been bought out by the firm of Burnham, Stoepel and Co. and will be known as Burnham, Munger & Co. Mr. Burnham will divide his time between Kansas City, Detroit and the New York office, at 34 Thomas street, and Munger will give his whole attention to the Kansas City house. Detroit Journal.

H. Brewer & Co. are driven with work now and are running their shops three extra hours each day. Last Friday they shipped a complete outfit to Iowa, comprising a tile and brick machine, elevator, clay crusher, engine and boiler. It was one of the largest single orders ever filled by the firm.

The change in the dry goods house of J. K. Burnham and Co. of Detroit, has deprived Tecumseh of one of her dry goods stores. Mr. F. R. Otto has been busy invoicing and packing the goods for the past week and they will be sent to Detroit in a few days. Although Mr. Otto has been among us for only a short time, he has made many friends who will regret his departure. He will take a position in the Detroit house.

Mr. D. C. Bemis, of Haskins, Ohio, was in the city the fore part of the present week for the purpose of introducing a contrivance, known in Ohio as "Keeler's Patent Portable Hay Roof." It is indeed, decidedly unique, and would probably sell rapidly were it properly brought before the people. A roof capable of sheltering 30 tons of Hay, can be constructed for the sum of $14. Mr. Bemis is now selling township and county rights, and all correspondence addressed to Haskins, O., will receive his prompt attention.

A LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE

[illegible] the Opera House, Friday evening, April 15th, pursuant to the call of the Amendment committee. That committee submitted a report of their doings in the interest of the prohibitory amendment in the recent campaign. They had received liberal contributions of money for the purposes of the campaign, which they had expended in procuring speakers and the use of the Opera House, and in the distribution of amendment literature, a large supply of which had been employed. All expenses had been met with the funds provided, except a small part of the amount required for rent of hall for the present meeting. This amount was promptly made up by a collection in connection with this report. In the work, the committee submitted the following preamble and resolutions for the consideration of the meeting.

WHEREAS, The Citizens Amendment Committee appointed by a meeting of the friends of the prohibitory amendment in Tecumseh, for special service in the interest of that measure during the recent campaign, has fulfilled the mission assigned to it, and

WHEREAS, The results of the recent election, with the present situation respecting the questions involved seem to justify a more extended and permanent organization of citizens for the support of law and order and reform, therefore

Resolved, That upon the adoption of the report herewith submitted, this committee shall be considered disbanded; that we respectfully recommend to a meeting of citizens called to receive this report and statement, the following resolutions for their consideration and action:

Resolved, That while the probable failure of the prohibitory amendment, indicating the present ascendency of the saloon over the home is cause for regret and sorrow to all good citizens, yet the effect of the agitation in the education of public sentiment, and the strong popular expression in favor of prohibition affords most gratifying promise for the future.

2d. That there is special cause for rejoicing in the emphatic sentiment of hostility to the liquor traffic developed in our own and adjoining townships.

3d. That it is the duty of all good citizens, by just and practicable means to foster and consolidate this favorable sentiment, and utilize it in behalf of further aggressive efforts for public reform.

4th. That the attitude of hostility to the amendment so generally assumed by the secular press of the State, is one of the most alarming features of the recent and present crisis; that it demands the solicitude of the friends of temperance and suggests the imperative need of an independent journal, committed to the fearless advocacy of this vital reform.

5th. That it is expedient and desirable that steps be immediately taken to organize a citizens "Law and Order League," embracing the substantial law abiding and order loving citizens of Tecumseh, irrespective of party, whose object shall be to bring to bear the whole moral power of the community, first to compel a respect for law on the part of those disposed to violate it; second, to aid and encourage the constituted authorities in the enforcement of righteous laws and the preservation of order, and third, to educate and lead public sentiment in the direction of more effective legislation for the suppression of crime and vice.

These resolutions were discussed and adopted by the meeting, the amendment committee discharged from further service, and a special committee appointed to solicit the names of citizens approving of such an organization as is contemplated in the fifth resolution, with power to call a meeting of such approving citizens for the purpose of perfecting such an organization, when in the judgment of the committee a sufficient number shall have expressed their approval. It may be added that this movement has no POLITICAL origin or complexion whatever, but is a sincere effort in good faith to unite all good citizens of all parties in organized efforts to enforce the laws, and to obtain and sustain more effective laws for the protection of public order. It aims first to resist the tyranny of the liquor traffic, but also further to punish and prevent other violations of law which corrupt the youth and demoralize the people. There is abundant need in our community for such a combination of the best elements of our people in the interest of order. It is to be hoped that such a movement will commend itself to all citizens who have at heart the good order of our town, and that all such will be prompt to signify to the committee their endorsement when solicited, and to pledge to the movement their moral support. The special committee mentioned above consisted of Rev. F. Adkins, M. B. Brown and A. P. Coddington.

John Jennings has presented Dr. Nix with a unique sign from his woods a letter N, about eighteen inches square, formed by the growth of the branch of one maple into the trunk of another. The maples were about five or six inches in circumference, growing about a foot and a-half apart, and the cross-piece or grafted branch is of exactly the same circumference as the two trunks that form the perpendicular lines of the initial. John said, "Nature intended that formation for the Dr.; so I cut down the trees and brought it to him." Hudson Gazette.

It is customary in the spring for the good housewife to wish the cleaning was done, and of course first to be thought of is the moving of the stoves. Perhaps Mrs. P. A. Cowley was meditating something like this as she was sitting quietly at work on Friday last, but she was thoroughly startled, all the same, when the wood stove in the room did move, especially as it moved in all directions. It was a first class explosion, the stove being blown to pieces, the fire being scattered and things about the room in a blaze. Some men at work near by hastened to the spot and put out the fire after it had done about thirty dollars damage. It is supposed some miscreant had "loaded" a stick of wood, and that it had "gone off," taking the stove with it.—Hudson Post.

One of the members of the Legislature from Lenawee county Muger P. Cole is the level headed author of a bill that certainly deserves to be successful. It aims to abolish the monopolistic insurance compact that now exists in this State, and has been up for consideration by the House this week. Our legislators will show themselves to be true servants of the people if they shall completely kill this miserable compact, which demands constant tribute from every man who has any property" that ordinary protection requires to be insured. Let free competition rule in the insurance business as in all common affairs of commercial life. What reason under the sun is there that it should be favored more than others?—Morenci Observer.

Easter day at St. John's Episcopal church was not only a joyous day, but a very sad one as well. It terminated the pleasant relations so long existing between them and their beloved Rector, Joseph St. John, who has accepted a call to St. Ignace and Mackinac. The church was very tastily decorated with plants and flowers. All the services were largely attended. The children's service after mid day service was very fine; the program varied and finely executed by all. After the distribution of eggs and beautiful easter cards, Mr. Chas. F. Clark with a few appropriate remarks, presented Mr. St. John a beautiful plain gold ring in behalf of the Sunday school. He responded feelingly.—Clinton Local.

DEATH OF W. T. B SCHERMERHORN.

Will Schermerhorn, one of the early [illegible] master of that village died at five o'clock on Monday night. He has been confined to the house since last fall with consumption and his friends had long since surrendered all hope of his recovery. He had lately been receiving a new treatment however and seemed somewhat better. But on Monday afternoon he suffered a hemorrhage of the lungs and from that time he rapidly sank until the end came. The deceased was the eldest son of Wm. T. B. and Jane Schermerhorn and was nearly twenty four years old. He was born and raised in Hudson. He received a common school education and when still a boy he entered the office of the printing office of the Gazette, where he soon developed a rare mental attainment and became a proficient printer. Upon the death of his father about two years ago, he assumed the entire control of the Gazette and conducted it with signal ability. Early in President Cleveland's administration he received the appointment of postmaster at Hudson. At the same time the care of his younger brothers and sisters was thrown upon him and the labor involved in all these responsibilities overtaxed his constitution which was never very strong. About a year since he had an attack of hemorrhage and then his brother, Cadet James Schermerhorn returned home from West Point and assumed charge of the Gazette, Will retaining the management of the Post Office. He took out door exercise as much as possible, but consumption had marked him for its own. For the past few months he has been gradually failing until death closed the struggle. He was a member of the Congregational church, and Superintendent of its Sunday School. He was possessed of fine mental acquirements and was foremost in every good work.

His career as a journalist, although brief, marked him as a natural leader in that profession.

In his untimely demise, his relatives and acquaintances lose a generous and faithful friend, the village of Hudson a true, noble citizen and the newspaper fraternity, a brilliant and promising member. Death loves a shining mark. The HERALD extends to the afflicted mourners its heartfelt sympathy and condolence. While Tecumseh friends will mourn with Hudson over his tomb.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufactures. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen, has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sale of any medicine in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

GEN. BEN BUTLER'S "SPOONS."

His Story on the Witness Stand Concerning.

Gen. Benjamin F. Butler was on the witness stand in Washington the other day in a case brought in the court of claims by the heirs of Gen. David E. Twiggs, of New Orleans, to recover the value of certain property taken by the United States during the military occupation of that city in 1862. Among the property was some silverware, of which the heirs claim spoons constitute a part—the spoons of which so much has been said and so little has been known for twenty-five years.

Gen. Butler has, of course, no family plated with kings or emperors, nor has he, for his life, ever taken the time to be a member of the aristocracy of any country. He has been engaged in a hand to hand fight for the prize money of much larger value than the spoons, and he has won it. Yesterday he was in a good humor, and when asked if he remembered the spoons he said he did. Patent Exchange, by permission, Gen. Butler, to appear a property com... Butler and his agents had and it was turned over to Gen. Banks and a receipt taken for it. As to the particular parcel containing the spoons, Gen. Butler said: "There is but one article, that I have and the mate to the combination of which was in my personal possession. The part of this property not in use was stored in the custom house, where there were large vaults, and among it was a tin box of jewelry, with a most ordinary lock upon it. My property agents at the time brought it to me and said it was very valuable. The custom house vaults were open to everybody and it might be carried off. I thereupon took it from him, sealed it up carefully with the ring which I then wore upon my finger and still wear, and put it into my own safe, and when this inventory was made I had it receipted for in the words found in the receipt. One tin box, containing jewelry, sealed. This property all went into the actual possession of Capt. McCrea before I left New Orleans. My property agent had to remain behind to settle up various matters, and I directed him to see to it that the chief quartermaster signed the receipt, which he did on the 1st of January, 1863.

"I have no further personal knowledge of what became of the property."

This particular and detailed statement, made under oath in a United States court, may be presumed to settle finally the once vexed question of what Gen. Butler did with those spoons.—New York Mail and Express.

A Granger in a Big Hotel.

"We had a funny incident only last week. A granger from Indiana strayed into the house and said he'd like to stop until the night train went out. That was just before the dinner hour. When meal time was announced the man from Indiana advanced to the counter and asked where the sink was. I knew what he wanted, and waved my hand in the direction of the washroom. He started off, and in about a minute I heard loud laughter from the people outside in the corridor. On looking out I saw my country friend busily engaged in washing his face at the drinking fountain. I hastened to him to inform him that he had made a mistake, but he met me before I could reach the spot. He presented a ludicrous sight. The water was dripping from his face, head and hands, while his hat, coat and vest lay in a heap on a chair near the fountain. It was too funny, and I, too, joined in the laughter. The old fellow appeared perplexed, but managed to stammer out: 'Whar do ye keep yer towels?' One of the porters then took pity on the old man and led him to the place he wanted, where he finished his toilet. Yes, we see all kinds of people in a hotel, and have some queer experiences," concluded the clerk, as he turned to hand out some writing material to a guest.—Chicago News.

One of New Mexico's Buried Towns.

A few days ago two prospectors, while wandering over the foothills east of the city, accidentally stumbled on signs of previous habitation, buried under heaps of sand which had drifted by the winds of years. Having selected a point at which to make an excavation, they went to work with a will and in a few hours had reached the floor of a small chamber in the form of a parallelogram. They found the remains of several human beings, several handsome vases carved with geometrical figures in different colors, stone axes, hammers, pieces of cloth apparently manufactured from the fibre of the yucca; several strings of beads, sea shells, arrow heads and an abundance of fragments of obsidian quartz, and an incredible quantity of pieces of broken pottery, including several with a blue glazing. Only in one other instance have we ever heard of this color and quality of ware having been discovered in this territory, and that was at the ancient pueblo near the Santa Rita in this county, and it indicates that the Spaniards had lived in New Mexico before the extinction of the race who inhabited this ruined and buried village.—Socorro Bullion.

Four Styles of Canal Boats.

It requires intellect to build a canal boat, even if it doesn't seem so. A canal boat never hurries, and people who think they know everything believe that speed is the only thing that requires meditation. Canal boats are built for what they can hold.

There are four styles of them—bullheads, lake boats, scows, steamboats and consorts. The bullhead is the everyday canal boat which impedes the ferries. The lakes is a size larger, and can stand a sea. The scow is an old acquaintance, but the steamboats and consorts are new. They have come to revolutionize boating and banish the mule.

There are 3,900 canal boats in commission on the state canals. They keep about 1,400 men and boys busy during the season, and pay them $15 to $30 a month and feed. Boats travel as a rule doubled up—that is, with their two teams pulling both boats.—New York Sun.

You Can't Make Death Cheerful.

"No," said a Brooklyn undertaker, "I can't say that any one has accepted a wreath of flowers as a death signal, as did the Beecher family. You should think it would become fashionable. Well, it might. There are fashions in everything, even undertaking. The idea is right and beautiful, but it isn't likely to grow. You can't make death cheerful. The Chinese are the only people who do. White's their mourning color and flowers and feasts accompany their funerals. They think a man's life only begins when it ends—if that's not too Irish for you. But this country's different. The big knots of black that flutter from bell knobs are not going to vanish yet and won't this side of the millennium. Yet I'd rather hang up flowers than crape."—New York Sun.

Bloomington, Ills., Sept. 18, 1882.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.: Have taken Hall's Catarrh Cure. Had catarrh all my life; am 48 years old. Had asthma 19 years, and a dreadful cough for five years. Have taken everything; went to the Hot Springs; I have doctored with the doctors here; I have done nothing but take medicine for 16 years. When I commenced using Hall's Catarrh Cure I was almost dead. I sent for the doctor the day I got Hall's Catarrh Cure, and I told him that I would die any way and that I would try your medicine. I was very bad. How I suffered for 5 years! I could hardly breath at times. I saw Hall's Catarrh Cure advertised in the papers and commenced taking it. I would have been under the ground today if it had not been for that. I have not had one bad spell of coughing since, in breathing my head feels well and I am well. It has done me a thousand dollar worth of good. There are ten of my friends, on seeing what it had done for me, taking it, is helping them. I only wish that everyone who has catarrh, asthma and a bad cough could see me, so that I could tell them all to take it. All that know me here know how I have suffered. I have been here since 1858, and say to me that "I am so glad you found something that could cure you." Everyone says, "how much better you look." The doctors say they are glad I found Hall's Catarrh Cure as they could not cure me.

I cannot express my gratitude to you for the good Hall's Catarrh Cure has done me. You can use as much of this letter as will do the afflicted good. Publish it to the whole world. It is all true and they should know it.

CONSERVATION OF GAME AND FISH.

[illegible] game, upon property, like land, wild game, is considered by many as free plunder, to be taken by everyone without any regard to the rights or interest of others or the welfare of those to live after us. There is yet too much of the destructive element in many of us that [illegible] down from the [illegible] savages, and lived by [illegible] instead of tilling the ground. TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

WHAT NEXT.

What shall be the next general move of Michigan's temperance hosts? They are not to be idle nor to do their work at haphazard. As elsewhere noted, the anti-prohibitionists of this city have effected a permanent organization and are preparing to fight prohibition whenever and wherever it may come up again. As usual, the daily newspapers are free with advice to prohibitionists and others. They ponder the recent vote, an endorsement of the present tax law and appear to think the law about right. They cling to its taxation features. They want the cash as price of the liquor dealers rights. They propose however in order to remove the rural jealousy of the cities and villages to divide the price among the farmers. That the cities may not loose anything by this division, some of them suggest a higher tax. They think the precious rum-holes will stand a little more cash exaction if only the prohibition tide can thereby be successfully stayed. The entire reasoning of these secular papers appears to be, not how to promote temperance and morality but how to keep the blood money and check-mate the "fanatics." Well, they have undertaken a mammoth task. The idea suggested by one of them that the election just held presages the "decline of puritanism" is as flat as it is demoniral. If prohibition be a phase of puritanism, then puritanism is on the swell. Constitutional prohibition is a rising tide. It has carried in other states and came very near sweeping the infamous tax law from our statute books in Michigan. It will do it next time. There is one thing we want to suggest to prohibitionists. In nearly all the parties in counties and representative districts you have the power in your own hands and can make the next legislature answer and for prohibition. See to it that your party puts in nominations only prohibition candidates. If some of these that have been nominated not your party. Prohibition first, party afterwards. If all the parties nominate prohibition candidates, only prohibitionists can be elected. If some of the parties nominate anti prohibitionists, the prohibitionists by ballots to their great principle can defeat them anyhow. We beseech them to do this. The Advocate will not at no time enter into party strifes, but its earnest hope is that prohibitionists of all parties will hold together far enough to accomplish their dearest hope, regardless of what may become of parties espousing the cause of rum. If prohibitionists succeed in gaining a majority in the next legislature, an amendment can then be submitted free from the objectionable features of the one just defeated. It will be liberated, too, from the disadvantage of coming from the hands of hypocritical politicians, who favored it in office, but opposed it in person. We want a chance to vote for an amendment, iron-clad in its legal phases, warmly approved by a radically temperance legislature, and handed down to the people under circumstances which will preclude as fully as possible the partisan prejudices and clamors which were made to surround and surcharge the contest just closed.—Christian Advocate.

DON'T FAIL TO TRY IT.

J. C. Burrows, Kalamazoo, Mich., writes: "For more than five years, a member of my family has been afflicted with Hay Fever, culminating late in the fall in a hacking cough. Every remedy proved futile. Not half a bottle of Papillon Extract of Flax Catarrh Cure had been used before the cough entirely disappeared, and general relief followed. 'It is simply wonderful.'" Large bottles only $1.00.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Not many April showers so far.

House cleaning has taken a stand still for warmer weather and rain water, as the cisterns are getting low.

Wm. DeMott of Tecumseh, was in the village on Wednesday of last week.

G. P. Waring and D. W. Loree were in Detroit Thursday and Friday of last week.

Mrs. Samuel Helm, spent Saturday, Sunday and Monday with her sister, Mrs. C. Henry of Adrian, who is in very poor health.

Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson spent Friday with Prof. H. C. Wilson of Blissfield, and in company with the Prof. and wife spent Saturday at Hudson, at the teacher's examination.

Edd. Holloway of Tipton, visited Willis Helm, Monday and Tuesday.

Lou Arner returned from her stay at Milan on Wednesday of last week accompanied by her cousin, Mrs. A. B. Smith.

Will Wilson of Holloway, in company with Vina Underwood, called on Mrs. Sarah Rappleye Sunday afternoon.

The funeral services of Mrs. Lyman Curtis was held at the church Sunday morning at the regular service hour. Rev. W. J. Clack officiating. The remains were intered in the cemetery west of the village.

Lewis Waldron and Emma Schreder were the guests of her aunt, Mrs. W. H. Arner, Sunday afternoon.

The next meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Winder's, at Wm. Larkin's, west of the village, instead of Wm. Pilbeams, as was announced last week.

Don't forget the Base Ball entertainment next Tuesday evening, at Cottage Hall. A very interesting drama is being prepared by members of the association. Admission, 10 and 15cts.

Irving Bush of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrived Saturday night, to spend a few months at his grandmother's, Mrs. Hall's.

The Raisin Valley Glee Club have, at the request of Mrs. Sarah Rappleye, consented to give an entertainment for the benefit of the Ladies church social, in the near future. Notice in full next week.

Several of the young folks joined with some of the young people of Tecumseh, and gave George and Loana Davidson a surprise on Saturday evening, and report a very pleasant time.

Mrs. F. J. Temple who has been spending several weeks with her parents at Lasell, Monroe Co. returned last week.

A. J. Sutton and Ace Smith each support a new hat since the new firm of Wm. F. Clack opened up and let his clack be heard. If he had not adopted the cash system we might support one also.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Death has again taken from us one of our pioneers. Mrs. Lydia Curtiss whose maiden name was Hull, was born in the town of Russia, Herkimer Co., State of N. Y. She married Hiram A. Curtiss Sept. 1841 and removed at once to Ridgeway Mich., on the place that has ever been her home until her death, April 21st, 1887. She was a member of the M. E. church of Ridgeway. She leaves a husband and two children, three children having gone before.

Dearest mother, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel.
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can still our sorrow heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled.
There in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

Card of Thanks

We wish to offer our heartfelt thanks to our neighbors and friends who have so kindly offered their assistance and sympathized with us in our sad bereavement.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN

A wee young lady has come to make her home at Ed. Pawson's.

'Libbie Eddy with Mrs. Spaulding drove out to Mrs. Spencer's in Raisin last week.

Ben Lankin has been visiting relatives in London, not the metropolis. He returned in time to assume his new title of Grandpa. On Saturday he took a trip to Winnineg, O.

Franklin had a trial of road scrapers near Wm. Fisher's, a few days ago. The township has purchased two, and we suppose that hereafter as far as the roads are concerned, "all the valleys shall be exalted and the high places brought low."

[illegible] at the home of his father in law, R. McCollum, last week. He brought with him Miss Emma McCollum who has been spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Winton.

Alanson Updike's team did some lively traveling the other day. His son Elbert was returning from a field on the south farm with a drill, when the neck-yoke slipped and the drill essayed to keep up with the horses, who, in their turn, were determined to keep ahead. Elbert went bumping along, first on one side of the road and then the other, but stuck to his seat till it appeared likely that they would take a plunge down a steep bank near the school house, when he remembered that self preservation is the first law of nature, and managed to roll off backward. The team ran into the yard at the old home where Mr. Rockwood now lives, out again, and home to the barn on Mr. Paine's place, about a mile from where they started. No damage was done except some breakage to the drill.

News lately received from Kansas would appear to indicate that some localities there might be more desirable as a place of residence. Pond water, it seems, is free, provided you can find the pond, but the sparkling fluid is worth money when taken from one of the few wells. Try another county, Will. Better drouth parched Kansas with her constitutional prohibition and advanced suffrage laws, than Michigan in her humiliation and disgrace, even though Nature's bounties have been bestowed upon her with lavish hand.

ONSTED ODDS.

Supervisor J. O. Maxwell is busy taking the assessment.

G. S. Ross is painting with Frank Jenkins of Tipton.

Mrs. H. E. Verrier has returned from her visit to Indiana.

Miss Rena Maxwell is giving music lessons.

L. H Sheeler is spending a few days at Adrian as a juror.

Bliss Lee was no better at last accounts. He was not able to sit up.

W. B. Knapp of Tecumseh, was visiting his daughter, Mrs. Secor, Sunday and Monday.

C. A. Marsh, formerly a hardware merchant of this place left here Saturday. He intends to go to Oregon in a few days.

MINING IN COLORADO.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Star Mining Company, at Ann Arbor, on the 11th inst., a resolution was passed authorizing the purchase of the necessary concentrating machinery to prepare the crude ore for market. The ore finds a ready sale at Denver and Leadville. Money realized from the sales of stock the past winter and this spring, will be used to defray the expense of this winter's development work; buy the machinery, and to begin operations in May. On or about the first of May: stock will advance to 35 cents, 35 on the dollar, and the further sale of stock will be indefinately postponed. Reports from the Contractors on the property, say that the quantity and quality of the ore improves with each foot of development into the mountain. One thousand four hundred and sixty-four (1464) feet of tunnel work has been driven, in and along the ore veins, disclosing many thousand tons of high grade ore. The development works of 1886 produced over one thousand (1000) tons of ore, which will be concentrated during this summer. A continuous cable tramway will move the ore from the mines to the mill for less than five cents (5) per ton. The distance is about 3,000 feet. Those fortunate enough to possess stock in this Bonanza, are more than pleased with their investment. The company begins operations May first.

Mr. J. J. Hagerman, formerly of Milwaukee, Wis., is now living in Colorado Springs, Colorado, and according to his brother in law, Mr. Irwin Osborn, he is enjoying the handsome income of thirty thousand dollars, ($30,000) per month, from a small investment in Colorado's mines. Mr. Hagerman went to Colorado in search of health, which he found in paying quantities. He engaged in mining when there but a short time, and fortune smiled upon him in that beautiful Italian climate. As President of the Colorado Midland R. R. he is a very popular gentleman.

MACON GRANGE.

Macon Grange met in regular session Apr. 7th, at 2 o'clock p. m., W. M. in the chair, and regular order of business gone through with, after which the programme as previously announced was carried out.

While in session, the Grange decided to give a maple sugar social on Saturday, evening the the 16th, which came off, with the following result. Receipts $8. There was not a very large gathering, but enough to have a good time.

The next meeting of Macon Grange will be on Thursday, May 5th, at 2 o'clock p. m. In connection with regular business the following program is expected:

Singing—Mrs. J. Osborn and others.
Reading—M. J. Martin.
Address—J. W. Baker.
Essay—Mrs. Edwin Howell.
Reading—Mrs. Leroy Mead.
Subject for discussion—"The growing of corn."

As we are to have meetings but once a month, it is desirable that all members be present.

SYNOPSIS OF GAME AND FISH LAWS.

Applicable to this part of the State at this time. It is unlawful to kill Woodcock, except from Aug. 1st to Jan. 1st following; also, to kill or destroy in any way, Partridge, Wood, Teal, Malard or Gray duck, from the first day of May to the first day of September, or to kill Prairie Chickens before Sept. 1st, 1882, or to trap, snare, or net any of these birds at any time. It is also unlawful to kill, or to rob or destroy, the nests of Robins, Nighthawk, Whippoorwill, Finch, Thrush, Lark, Cherrybird, Swallow, Yellowbird, Brownthresher, Wren, Bluebird, or any song bird. English Sparrows are considered a nuisance, to be abated at any time.

It is unlawful to catch, kill or destroy or attempt to kill or destroy any fish in any of the waters of the State of Michigan, except Lake Superior, Huron, Erie, and St. Clair and the St. Clair and Detroit rivers, in any way whatever—except with hook and line—from the first day of March to the first day of Oct. in each year—Mullet Suckers, Sturgeon and Red Sides, may be caught with a spear or dip net during March, April and May. Penalty for offending against this statute, not over $100 fine or over sixty days imprisonment in County Jail.

Special acts make it unlawful to fish with seine or any continuous nets in the streams, or lakes of the townships of Rollin, Medina, Seneca, Dover, Hudson, Cambridge, Franklin and Woodstock at any time. It is not lawful to shoot or spear fish in Round and Devils Lake at any time, or to catch fish in any way in those lakes, from the first day of December to the first day of April ensuing. It is made the duty of the State and deputy Wardens to enforce the laws for the protection, preservation and propagation of birds, game and fish. We hope the laws will be cheerfully obeyed, because they are just, and for the best interest of all. Let us preserve what is left and the State will replenish our depleted lakes.

J. B. ALLEN, Deputy Warden.

The Dundee Oil Well.

Drilling at the Nogar well has not yet been resumed, but probably will be the fore part of next week. The engine and boiler are being overhauled and put in thorough order also all the drilling apparatus, before work is resumed so that if possible no further delays may be experienced. The work of drilling will be continued until gas or oil are obtained. Mr. Nogar is full of faith that such a well will be obtained; in fact he never has had any doubts in his mind regarding such success, though he has often heard from the wise ones that they "know he will never find anything of the the kind; that he is fooling away his money." He is going right along with the work and footing all the bills, notwithstanding such croakings. His success means benefits to this whole region roundabout. The rock formations already passed through corresponding with those in the Ohio wells except the layers in the Nogar, are each of greater thickness. In the Ohio wells gas and oil are obtained in the "Trenton rock" the next species of rock below the slate in which the present bottom of the wells is located. The slate in Ohio wells is some 600 ft. in thickness about 250 feet of slate in the well here have already been drilled—therefore the well will probably yet have to be sunk some 400 or 500 feet before the Trenton rock is reached. Within a very few weeks our community surely may expect to hear the welcome intelligence that Mr. Nogar has secured a successful gas or oil well, then Dundee will be enjoying a boom in business prosperity unexcelled by any of the Ohio communities.—Dundee Reporter.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

LESSON XIII.

ISRAEL IN EGYPT—Exod. 1, 6-14.

NOTES.—"The land was filled with them."—It is implied that this happened under the special providence of God. They were in conditions favorable to rapid increase, they had room, plenty of food, doubtless married young and had large families. There were seventy sons of Jacob who went down, but there were besides them hundreds of servants and followers. Perhaps they began with two or three thousand sons. In 215 or 430 years—for it is not certain which is the period of the sojourn in Egypt—they may easily have doubled in every generation of thirty years. And it is easy to reckon up how short a time it would take to increase to two or three million souls, which was the number at the exodus.—"A new king"—Perhaps of a new dynasty. It is believed that the king of the oppression was Rameses II, whose mummy was discovered a few years ago, and is now on exhibition in the Bulak Museum at Cairo.—"Deal wisely with them."—It was not a wise action to protect themselves against the Jews by oppressing them. The proper way was to make them friends, and incorporate them in the Egyptian nation.—"When there falleth out any war."—The Jews were Semites, and were naturally allied with the Asiatic peoples against whom the Egyptians might be at war, the Hittites who lived in Palestine and northward, against whom Rameses II fought.—"Lest they multiply."—Here is another error. People do not cease to multiply because they are oppressed. The Negro slaves increased very rapidly from a few thousands brought to this country to more, now, than six millions.—"Taskmasters."—In Egypt, up till this year when the English stopped it, all public work has been done by forced and unpaid labor. Pictures of taskmasters can be seen, holding whips over men forced to do work.—"Pithom and Raamses."—Of these the English explorers have lately discovered Pithom and have made the site of Raamses probable.—"In mortar and in brick."—The mortar being well kneeded mud, and the bricks mostly unburnt, sun-dried bricks, considerably larger than ours, and stamped with the name, or cartouche, of the Pharaoh. The bricks generally had in them a little straw mixed, the straw being that which had been threshed, and in the threshing cut up into very small pieces, and used for fodder, with barley, by the horses or other animals.

INSTRUCTION.—It is no surprising statement that those men all died. And yet it is a very impressive thought that nobody escapes death. When we stop to consider it, it is a most serious and important thought to get fixed in the mind that we must all die.

Large families are a blessed gift of God. Where families are large, the children help each other; they grow up less selfish. Such families are generally far the happiest.

The wealth of a nation is its families of citizens, who can do hard work. It is not strange that Pharaoh thought his wealth was his danger, but he did not know much political economy.

Who could have expected a king to remember Joseph two hundred years? Each generation must carry its own burdens. It will not help us much that our parents were honored if we are bad.

Don't exaggerate. The Jews were many, but Pharaoh was wrong when he said they were more and mightier than the Egyptian people. That was an Eastern way of saying that they were very numerous, but we do not need those Eastern ways here. We did not be take a census, and then treat them like citizens.

Such worldly craft is not wisdom. It is never wise to oppress Jews or Irishmen. Oppression welds a people together, makes them feel a bond to the oppressor, and compels them to stand by each other and develop a national feeling. It justifies rebellion. That is what has banded together the races oppressed by the Turks, Bulgarians, Greeks, Armenians. That has kept the Jews a separate people. That has made the Irish a unit in Parliament. That made America an independent people. You cannot have rebellion very well where there is no injury.

Hard work is a good training. It is better to be a hard-working man than to be an idle taskmaster. A well-trained man loves to work. He would be unhappy if he could not work. All success comes from doing all the work we can.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, APRIL 5,

Representative Dakin, it seems, had 'em on the list.

The legislature of Michigan would have acted wisely if they had observed Arbor Day by planting Dakin.

The appointment of Col. Ainger of Charlotte, to the position of Adjutant General, is an excellent one and gives general satisfaction.

Lansing has decided to bore for gas. With the Daily Republican shedding its refulgence over that city, what does Lansing want of more gas?

Arbor Day was fixed ahead of the climate this year. The Governor should have conferred with the weather clerk before naming the date.

The Adrian Times comes out in a strong editorial urging a thorough investigation of the Coldwater Public School scandal. Public sentiment demands this and will be satisfied with nothing less.

There are said to be 57 bogus butter factories in the United States, and the product from December 1 to April 1, is reported at nearly 13,000,000 lbs. The tax did not prohibit manufacture but it enables some people to find out "what are you givin' us?"

The prosperity of the present is due more to our abundant currency than to any other single cause—indeed, the present volume of trade could not exist with a contracted currency. Dun & Co. report an increase of 6½ per cent of currency since July, with a notable decrease of failures, compared with a year ago.

David Prestoh, a leading citizen and banker of Detroit died very suddenly last Sunday of heart disease. He was well known as a prominent Methodist layman, and was the candidate for governor on the Prohibition ticket at the last election. His death will be sincerely regretted by hosts of friends all over the state.

An exchange says: "If those employes at the Coldwater State Public School who dared to testify against Superintendent Foster are discharged, anybody who should venture to bear witness against a member of the Board of Control would be punished still more severely. This is just what the public will understand the Board to mean by it. It won't do, gentlemen. Putting gags in the mouths of witnesses will not give the people of Michigan confidence in the Board of Control, but exactly the contrary.

This is what the Toledo Bee says about it: "The Ohio man is there again—and this time it is D. B. Ainger, a few years since editor of the Napoleon Signal, later of the Bryan Press, then of the Charlotte (Mich.) Republican, from which place he was appointed postmaster at Washington by President Hayes, in whose regiment he served during the war, but was removed by President Arthur. He served on Gov. Alger's staff, with rank of Colonel, and has now been made Adjutant General of Michigan by Gov. Luce. He possesses the usual Ohio get-there proclivities, and his success therefore is not surprising.

The graveyard insurance report to the Legislature shows beyond question that some almost if not quite infernal abuses have been foisted upon the people of Michigan under our too lax insurance laws. Indications where the blame lies and what are the guilty corporations and makes it plain that the Legislature has a duty to perform in the premises. The performance of this duty will be resisted by the rotten companies with every art that money and delivery can invent and the Legislature will have an opportunity to show whether it has any backbone and how much, and whether it is the servant of peculiar and corrupting corporations or of the people. Its action in this business will be watched by the people with close interest and one eye on the next elections to the Legislature. The path of duty will be the path of safety, and don't let any rotten order forget it. Lansing Republican.

VALUE OF REFUSE.

CASH COINED BY THE DUSTMEN OF NEW YORK CITY.

The Work at the Street Cleaning Dumps—How It Is Done—What Becomes of the Day's Collection—Strange Stories Made.

Before the scows of the street cleaning department are sent to sea with the refuse of street sweepings, ashes, etc., and of city of other kinds, it is sorted and the valuable portions are taken out and not dumped into the deep water with the refuse. Men who are employed to shovel the refuse into the river before the Roof packet the Dumpsters, may, if they wish, take the sorting into their own hands, and the contractor who has the work is a liberal-hearted man, looking upon the Church, with which he is connected, as the contractor who has the work is a liberal-hearted man, looking upon the Church, with which he is connected, as the city authorities as well by giving $200 per week for the privilege of sorting over the refuse.

Permission gives the right to remain all night in the docks when the scows are loaded, and an Parian will recognize a value in refuse material which would be rejected by scavengers of any other nationality. There are extensive docks in the wards along the North and East rivers which receive the refuse after it has been dumped into the scows. Overall sniffers the privilege of sorting this waste at some of these docks for over twenty years. The men who do the hard work of "dumping" the scows are almost exclusively Italians of the lowest and most ignorant class. They are filthy and dirty in the extreme and the clothes worn by them are in a great measure cast off garments, fished in the refuse as it is unloaded from the docks. Properly in these scows was by them. Dressmakers and tailors women by the scavengers in collection, and are supposed to be every thing all material, in which it is possible to realize any money. Many small articles, however, fall to their lot in the course of work and whatever can be secreted or stowed away and taken home does not go into the general harvest of the dump.

The day's collection of salvage goods is stored on or near the wharf until it is disposed of to some speculator. Old tin cans, old shoes, broken umbrellas, bones, clothing, coal and other refuse is carefully laid aside to await a purchaser. This material is generally sold in bulk to regular customers, who dispose of their wares to the best advantage. The bones are carefully cleaned and sold to sugar refiners, who make them into the bone black used for clarifying sugar. Bones of larger size are sold to manufacturers of cutlery, who use them in making handles for razors and knives. The tin cans, battered and bruised out of all resemblance of the attractive form they have when they stand in rows on the shelves of the grocery stores, are sold to buttonmakers. They are put in a furnace, the iron is melted out, and then the tin plate is rolled together and is run beneath heavy dies, which punch out the circular bits of metal used on the back of cloth covered buttons. The old clothes, such as are not appropriated by the workers in the harvest field, are sold to the rag merchants. In the summer time it is customary to put these collections of rags and old clothing in a big wooden cage, such as is used for the drowning of stray dogs which have not been reclaimed from the pound, and to submerge it in the river twenty-four hours before the clothes are sorted and sold. The broken umbrellas are sold to perambulating peddlers, who use the ribs and sticks in making old umbrellas "as good as new."

Occasionally articles of considerable value and even money are found by the trimmers. It may seem impossible that such a fragile article as a fine porcelaine vase could survive the vicissitudes of a journey through an ash barrel, be jolted over the rough pavements of this city in a springless cart, be dumped from the cart a distance of ten or fifteen feet into a scow, and yet escape injury, but the writer was shown not long since a handsome cream-colored vase, about three inches high, on the side of which was painted a spray of forget-me-nots, which had been dug out from among the rubbish on one of the scows of the department.

Very frequently the men find silver spoons and forks while sorting over this refuse. These they sell to second hand dealers in silver, but sometimes they keep them for their own use. There is one Italian working on one of the dumps on the east side of the city who lives with his family, consisting of a wife and eight children, in two rooms in a rear tenement in the "Bend" in Mulberry street, who has his table set with silver forks and spoons. He has collected fifteen spoons and eleven forks, all of different patterns. These articles get into the garbage pail by the carelessness of servants, and even the rag pickers avoid these pails, and will not search through them for articles of value. Every day some one on every dump in the city will find one or more coins. These never reach the contractors, but are pocketed by the finders.—New York Post.

Tendency of the Newspapers.

The time is not far distant when the newspapers will crowd out all magazines and many books. The tendency of the newspapers at this time is to put before the world all but so to speak the best efforts of the best thinkers in all departments. The other day, for instance, seven of our leading journals printed a new plan to the [illegible]

PICTURES FOR THE PRESS.

Mistakes Which are Sometimes Made.

"An artist has to be a live man," said S. H. Horgan, of the American Press Association. "Frequently mistakes are made. I remember a fraud that was perpetrated upon the Graphic. It was at the time that Sitting Bull, the Sioux chief, [illegible] of a newspaper from Dakota. An army officer came into the Graphic one morning with a picture which he claimed was a good likeness of the great chief. He wanted $20 for it. As the paper was anxious to publish the picture he was paid his price and went his way. A beautiful front page cut was made [illegible] to appear in a few days. Uncle's daughter, who object will know it to the chief, called at the office the day prior to its publication. He had just arrived from the west, where he had passed many years in Indian warfare. When the cut was shown to him he pronounced it an unmitigated fraud. He [illegible] that of an old squaw [illegible] on at Fort Lincoln. Of course, the picture was never published, and The Graphic was more careful for the future.

[illegible] Association [illegible] "At one time the engravers of fake statesmen were pressed up. The figure of Lincoln, of Michigan, was passed for that of Patrick, of Illinois, and went the rounds of the press throughout the country. Another time Lady Longchamps's portrait was published for that of the Princess Beatrice. It was some time before the error was discovered. The loss of hundreds of portraits of prominent characters is always [illegible] and we have to resort to many ingenious schemes at times. When we have borrowed a photograph or copy we must be careful not to [illegible] after we have published it, or else some other newspaper man will secure it and anticipate us. I remember the trouble we had in getting John Kelly's likeness. I went to him personally and asked him for his photograph for publication. He did not seem pleased with the idea, but laughingly gained me off with the remark, 'I guess the public have seen enough of me in caricature.' After a long search his photograph was found at last in a little place on the Bowery.

"Artists who are sent to sketch the prominent characters at state or national conventions have little trouble. Most men in such bodies come prepared for the newspaper men with written interviews and photographs in their trunks. If they come into prominence they are ready for the emergency. In case a man becomes prominent at a convention who is not so prepared we telegraph to the place where he resides for his likeness. When a new cabinet is to be appointed we procure beforehand the portraits of every conceivable candidate for the offices, so as to be ready when the appointments are actually made. In the case of Cleveland's cabinet we had twenty-four engravings made of likely men.—New York Mail and Express Interview.

A Story of Kaiser William.

The story runs that Kaiser William, while he was still crown prince and a dashing young officer, entered the Cursaal at Ems, wearing an overcoat which concealed his brilliant uniform, and, approaching the crowded table, placed there on a coin of small value, about $1. With a contemptuous gesture the banker tossed the coin upon the floor, with the remark, "For the croupier." Again the unknown gentleman threw down a coin and lost, the banker repeating his action and words, to the amusement of the other players. It was then, as now, the custom of the banks to set aside a certain sum each day, and put up a notice of the amount, beyond which they could not play. If their losses amounted to this sum the bank must close.

William glanced at this notice—200,000 francs—quietly remarking that he would play for the whole bank. "Who are you," exclaimed the dealer with sudden respect. For reply the future emperor of Germany then opened his coat, displaying the imperial star upon his breast. The cards were dealt, the prince won, and the bank was broken. Taking up the enormous sum, he deliberately dashed it on the floor, exclaiming: "For the croupier!" Then turning on his heel, left the apartment.—Baltimore American.

Disinfecting Rooms.

Drs. Guttman and Merke, of the city hospital Moabit, in Berlin, have made an investigation as to the relative value of various methods of disinfecting inhabited rooms. The main points kept in view in the inquiry were that a satisfactory method should destroy the vitality of bacteria, should not injure the house or furniture, should not be dangerous to the health of the person in the house or of the person applying it, should involve the least possible labor in its use and be as cheap as possible. The bacillus anthracis was taken as the test organism and was placed in silk fibres and scattered through the room on the rugs, etc. Disinfection was attempted by rubbing the floors, ceilings and walls with disinfectant fluids and by spraying the same on the rugs, etc. The solutions experimented with were those of [illegible] of carbolic acid, and solutions of bichloride of mercury of various strengths. Their conclusion is that a solution of bichloride of mercury, 1 to 1000, used with a fine spray, is the most certain, the cheapest and in all respects the best for disinfecting inhabited rooms.

CLAVERHOUSE'S SWEETHEART.

[illegible]

JESS.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "King Solomon's Mines" "She," Etc.

[illegible]

She blushed a little, more at the tone of his voice than the words, and went on hastily: "Jess is the dearest, best and cleverest woman in the whole world—there, I believe that she has only one fault, and that is that she thinks too much about me. Uncle told me that he had told you how we came here first when I was 8 years old. Well, I remember that when we lost our way on the veldt that night, and it rained so and was so cold, Jess took off her own shawl and wrapped it round me over my own. Well, it has been just like that with her always. I am always to have the shawl—everything is to give way to me. But there, that is Jess all over; she is very cold, cold as a stone, I sometimes think, but when she does care for anybody it is enough to frighten one. I don't know a great number of women, but somehow I don't think that there can be many in the world like Jess. She is too good for this wild place, she ought to go away to England, write books and become a famous woman; only," she added, reflectively, "I am afraid that Jess' books would all be sad ones."

Just then Bessie stopped and suddenly changed color, the bunch of lank, wet feathers she held in her hand dropping from it with a little splash back into the bath. Following her glance, John looked down the avenue of blue gum trees and perceived a big man with a broad hat and mounted on a splendid black horse, cantering leisurely toward the house.

"Who is that, Miss Croft?" he asked.

"It is a man I don't like," she said, with a little stamp of her foot. "His name is Frank Muller, and he is half a Boer and half an Englishman. He is very rich and very clever, and owns all the land round this place, so uncle has to be civil to him, though he does not like him either." I wonder what he wants now."

On came the horse, and John thought that its rider was going to pass without seeing them, when suddenly the movement of Bessie's dress between the "nantehe" trees caught his eye, and he pulled up and looked round. He was a large and exceedingly handsome man, apparently about 40 years old, with clear cut features, cold, light blue eyes and a remarkable golden beard that hung right down over his chest. For a Boer he was rather smartly dressed, in English made tweed clothes and tall riding boots.

"Ah, Miss Bessie," he called out in English, "there you are with your pretty arms all bare. I'm in luck to come just in time to see them. Shall I come and help you to wash the feathers? Only say the word, now" ——

"AH, MISS BESSIE," HE CALLED OUT IN ENGLISH.

Just then he caught sight of John Niel and checked himself.

"I have come to look for a black ox, branded with a heart and a W inside of the heart. Do you know if your uncle has seen it on the place anywhere?"

"No, Meinheer Muller," replied Bessie, coldly, "but he is down there, pointing at a kraal on the plain some half mile away, if you want to go and ask about it."

"Mr. Muller," said he, by way of correction, and with a curious contraction of the brow. "Meisiehr is all very well for the Boers, but we are all Englishmen now. Well, the ox can wait. With your permission, I'll stop here till Miss Croft's Uncle Croft comes back," and, with a further air, he jumped off his horse and, stepping down as easily as a panther, he tied it to a post and came toward Bessie with a mock bow.

"Ah, Miss Bessie," he said, as he came up, "the sun is in your bath and it struck dollo, dollo, dollo, dangerous when some one should this need to remind the messenger of Sinkat that is yellow for Malvern visitor."

"Sorry my bath is any use," she said, curling up her lip at the introduction of Mr. Frank Muller, Esqr. Niel, who has come to keep my uncle with the place."

THE MICHIGAN CAMPAIGN

[illegible]

[illegible] temperance men [illegible]

"Once satisfy them that high license binders rather than helps toward prohibition and they will demand it for [illegible]."

These words, from a paper so fair-minded as The Independent are more welcome to me as a temperance worker than any recent utterance from a quarter of equal dignity. I have just returned from Michigan, where with my friend and associate, Miss Anna Gordon, I have held thirty-three meetings in the interest of the Prohibitory Constitutional Amendment, and I am prepared to give new and significant illustrations of the fact that high license educates away from and not toward prohibition. Indeed, if the state has been lost, it may be fairly said that the friends of high license have accomplished their desire. Its apparent majority against the amendment is, as temperance workers believe, the result of frauds in the voting and in the count, perpetrated by saloon politicians in the upper peninsula, in Detroit, and elsewhere. Vigorous efforts are being made by the friends of prohibition to bring to light these dark ways, and to prove these iniquitous tricks vain, but no matter how this attempt may result, the fact stands out clear and indisputable—the friends of high license voted against the amendment. Nor were they content with this, but in public meetings planned and addressed by them, they did their utmost to defeat the measure.

The Presbyterian Church failed more notably than any other of which from its official utterances, we had reason to expect co-operation. I was present in a great rink at a "citizens' meeting," addressed by the leading elder and two or three other lights of the denomination, which meeting was placarded in the saloons and applauded by the saloon element. Its speakers declared that they represented "practical temperance" as against the "moral fictions" of those who advocated the amendment. D. Bethune Duffield, Esq., of Detroit, son of the Rev. Dr. George Duffield, of blessed memory, a prominent member of the Church his father loved, addressed anti-amendment meetings in the chief towns of Michigan, everywhere declaiming with vehemence against the amendment. He even declared that he would rather have his "good right hand burned off than to permit it to cast a Yes ballot." Mr. Duffield is the father of the "tax high license law" of Michigan, and its most enthusiastic supporter. Under this legislation no community, however moral—save a few which have a special charter—can vote to put away its saloons. The arrangements of the law contemplate the perpetuity of the curse, and make no provision for the defense of the home from its inevitable ravages. It is not claimed that the usual clauses against Sunday selling, etc., are enforced, but strong emphasis is put upon "making the traffic bear its own burdens."

I have worked in every state that has carried the amendment, and in all five have rejoiced to see the majorities roll up on the side of "Home Protection." In none until Michigan has a doubt ever be n expressed that prohibitory law had the majority—even in Ohio there were three to one only had a constitutional majority, at least not so reported, but in this progressive Western State the question is still in doubt. Put with these facts this one: Michigan is the only state where the high license method has had time to come to its ripeness.

In Kansas, Iowa, Maine, it was unknown in Ohio it had not yet wearied in Michigan alone had it lasted this other half-long enough ago to have raised a crop of wrong opinions. The virus of poisoned gold had permeated its body politic, the moral chloroform of "regulation" had lulled the perceptions of its voters, the intellectual bewilderment sure to fall upon those who justify the wicked for reward and who put darkness for light and light for darkness, had done its work, and we had ministers writing and speaking with emphatic boldness of "denunciation against the amendment" utterly unknown to the respectable classes of the other states during similar campaigns. It was something entirely new to the temperance workers to find themselves ostracised by fellow christian members, and to see the priest and the [illegible] divide with the publican and sinner. Bought in all factories, to except the Methodist Church from this unexampled [illegible]. The two great parties [illegible] and their leaders [illegible] on the platforms of the [illegible] towns made [illegible] by the amendment.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, April 22nd.

Times are dull in Washington, not a breath of news stirring. The Lenten season having passed, Washington society, which is religious in form, has reverted with zest to gayety. The most prominent social event of the week was the performance of the play of "Jim the Penman" at the National Theatre for the benefit of the Actors fund.

It seems that President Cleveland and members of his Cabinet invited the Madison Square company from New York. They arrived on a special train, were acorded a special reception at the White House, and were shown many courtesies in their visits to the various Departments. President Cleveland occupied a box at the Theatre with District Marshall and Mrs. Wilson, Col. and Mrs. Lamont. I had a seat directly opposite, and made it a point to observe, I might say diagnose him very closely, during the three hours of the performance.

Paragraphs have been going the rounds of the papers relative to Mr. Cleveland's impaired health. I have seen the President often during the past two years, but have never known him to look as well as he does now. His face has neither the haggard weariness of his earlier days in the White House, nor the redness of a later period, when its color was frequently compared to President Arthur's face. President Cleveland's complexion is clear, his eyes are bright, and his ensemble that of a man in good health and heart.

The audience at the theatre was a distinguished one. Secretary Bayard sat in the front row. Near him was the British Minister. The Secretaries of War and of the Navy were there, and almost unmarked in the brilliant assemblage sat two others who had been Secretaries of War and of the Navy in a former administration, Belknap and Robeson.

It is evident that the Administration is disposed to pursue a very conservative course with reference to the powers vested in the President by the retaliation bill. Secretary Bayard remarked during the week that he felt that the people outside of Mass. had never realized its importance, or appreciated the gravity of the alternative left to the administration—a declaration of non-intercourse, if it failed to effect a peaceable adjustment of the differences between the United States and Great Britain respecting the construction of the treaty rights of our fishermen.

It is doubtful, he said, if the interests of San Francisco in maintaining her present source for coal supply from British Columbia, aside from the importance of the great Chicago business connections with Canada, and the vast trade that ebbs and flows across the 3000 miles of our Northern boundary, do not exceed the interest of Mass. in the results of the application of such an alternative as commercial non-intercourse. The negotiations with England on this subject are progressing, and the Secretary hopes they will result in amicable and satisfactory understanding.

Some Washington newspaper gossipers are in bad repute at the White House just now. At the President's reception in the East Room on Wednesday, while he was shaking hands with about four hundred people, mostly visitors in the city, who had come to the White House to see the President, among other sights, a group of these gentlemen took a position behind the Chief Executive and laughed and commented upon the persons as they filed by in line. The facetiousness was audible and the President was so much annoyed by the discourtesy shown the strangers that he turned more than once and looked reproachfully at the offenders.

THE RESPONSE.

[illegible] new houses that have been erected in the city during the months one [illegible] Lot 8 of by [illegible] on the corner of Pottawattamie and Ottawa streets, and was purchased of H. S. Lee. The house was erected during the summer and fall of 186[illegible] and Mr. Palmer occupied it in November last. It is two stories high with a roomy basement. The latter contains a kitchen, cellar, furnace rooms, etc. The main floor has a parlor, family room, nursery, dining-room, kitchen and other small apartments. All the principal rooms in the house on both floors are 12 by 16 feet in size. We present a diagram of the ground floor, which shows the location of the different rooms, better than we could describe them. The material was purchased of the O. & M. Coal & Mfg. Co. The contract was let to A. J. Van-Winkle, who had charge of the carpenter and joiner work. The mason work was done by Orr & O'Hara. The exterior of the dwelling is painted in a light drab shade with white trimmings and presents a very tasty appearance. The interior is elegantly finished. The lower rooms are finished with butternut and pine, dressed in hard oil, showing the natural grain of the wood. There are four chambers up stairs. One of these is finished in red, one in blue, and one in green. The heating and ventilation are of the most approved modern style, the entire house being heated by a furnace. A bath room is provided which can be properly supplied with hot and cold water, and the necessary kitchen conveniences are at hand to make the task of housekeeping as easy as possible. We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Palmer upon their new domicile, and hope they may live long to enjoy it.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Abigail C. Martin, of Macon, Lenawee Co. Mich., died on the 9th of April 1887. The funeral services took place on Tuesday, April 12th, the exercises being conducted by the pastor of the church of which she was a member, Rev. Mr. Dutton, and assisted by Rev. E. W. Borden.

Mrs. Martin lived to the great age of 85 years and 28 days. Was born in New Jersey. Married Mr. Stephen Martin when 20 years of age. Leaving her native state with her husband, she settled in Seneca Co. N. Y. Thence they removed to Lenawee Co. Mich. in 1835. For many years she lived a widow and died in the care of her daughter, Mrs. Young. At the early age of sixteen she became a Christian and united with the people of God. On coming into Michigan she united with the Presbyterian church in Tecumseh, afterward she had her church membership transferred to the Reformed church, near her home. She lived an exemplary Christian life for more than seventy years. She was the mother of two sons and four daughters. One son and two daughters survive her and a large number of grand children even to the fourth generation. Her death was peaceful. E. W. Borden.

A PATENT BOUNCER.

The gymnastic boys are making some big improvements. Their latest machine for the benefit of the members who are particularly fond of equestrianism, and is to be a "home runner." The machine consists of a medium sized horse mounted on a powerful wooden spring. The rider generally summons three or four of his muscular companions to hold the horse while he mounts. Not because it is at all vicious, but because it is always best to be on the safe side. The rider places his feet in the stirrups and taking a secure position in the saddle, gathers up the reins and is ready for business. All we wish to say is, to those who persevere and master its peculiarities, we will vouch for their being able to mount and ride the most vicious "tangs" that roam o'er the western plains.

The inventor of this machine, intended, if his invention proved a success, to apply for a patent; but we are informed that he will not, as he has already received a sufficient bounty from the city doctors. He, being of a philanthropic turn of mind says furthermore that he will prosecute no one who gets up a similar machine.

A FAVORITE WITH THE FAIR SEX.

Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure is superior to all the much advertised skin beautifiers with the advantage of being beneficial, and not like the mineral preparations usually sold which are very poisonous. It will remove all inflammation, chafing and roughness of the skin, sunburn, freckles and unseemly blotches, and leave the cuticle fair and soft as an infant's. An actual necessity for the complete toilet table. Large bottles $1.00.

An effort is to be made in the legislature to reduce the railroad fare from three to two cents per mile. Under the new law, which prohibits all deadheadism, it is believed the railroad companies would make as much money at two cents as they did before the law passed at three.

The farmers will soon commence the plowing and tearing up of the highways for the purpose of working out the road tax. This method of road making is a fraud and a sham. The same amount of labor expended in drawing gravel for five years would make a good highway. The turnpike west of this village for two miles is a splendid road, and gravel has made it.

The latest "fad" is known as a Hammock social. It is after the style of kissing bees, except that it is a little nicer. A number of hammocks are stretched in a convenient place, and the young ladies of the church are auctioned off to the highest bidder, who, when the fees are paid, has the privilege of swinging in the hammock with the young lady for some stated time. Of course all the hammocks are in full view of those present, but they say it is a very profitable scheme for enriching the coffers of a church, and being new is easily made attractive.

Tell me not in mournful numbers, that the town is full of gloom, for the man's a crank who slumbers, in these bustling days of boom. Life is real, life is earnest, and the grave is not its goal, every dollar that then turnest, helps to make the old town roll. But enjoyment and not sorrow is our destined end or way; if you have no money, borrow, buy a corner lot each day. Lives of great men all remind us, we can win immortal fame, let us leave the chumps behind us, and we'll get there just the same. In this world's broad field of battle, in the bivouac of life, let us make the dry bones rattle, buy a corner for your wife. Let us then be up and doing, with a heart for any fate, still achieving, still pushing, be a booster, booming fate.

The three signs of a counterfeit coin are not often heeded by a careless public. A bad piece of silver has a hollow ring or a light weight or an imperfect rim. If these characteristics were fully learned, counterfeiters would soon be discouraged in trying to pass imperfect money.

The residence of Alfred Miller, on north Ann Arbor street, was entered by burglars last night, and $90 in money and a silver watch stolen. It appears that an entrance was made by unlocking the front parlor door opening upon the porch, from there the burglars made their way to Mr. Miller's bedroom, where they took his clothes from off the foot of his bed, carried them outside to the garden and rifled them of the money and watch, and then decamped. The theft was not discovered until this morning. No clue to the burglars has been discovered. Saline Observer.

An exchange gives the following advice, which is applicable to this latitude. "The first thing that strangers note in coming into a city is the condition of the streets. If they are strait, clean, and have good walks, the stranger is well impressed. If the yards that line the streets are neat and well kept, though they may not be expensively decorated, the impression of the thrift of the people and the beauty of the town, helps him to decide the question, and say, I will settle in this town. The officials of the city have their work to do in ordering the streets kept clean, and the sidewalks kept in repair. The citizens have their part to do in keeping their door yards clean. Every person has a work to do in making the city presentable, and they should not shirk in their duty. This is the way to attract strangers to our midst, and make citizens of them."

Yellowstone Park is the subject of one of the prominent articles in the May Harper's. Mrs. Alice Wellington Rollins writes a lively conversational sketch of the summer trip of a party to the Yellowstone. Their amusing experiences and racy dialogue are interspersed with accurate descriptions of the wonders which they witness, forming a very brilliant treatment of a magnificent theme. An abundance of admirable engravings from special drawings by four artists illustrate the narrative and the scenery with splendid effect.

James Ash of Riga attended a wedding at Palmyra with his best girl last Thursday evening. Coming home he had reached the river embankment opposite P. W. Harris', on the east side, when a heavy clap of thunder so frightened his horse that he jumped to one side, and rolled down the bank into the river, followed by the buggy and its occupants. The bank there is very steep, and some ten or twelve feet high, and it is extremely fortunate that neither of the party was seriously hurt. The buggy was broken into pieces. James and his girl tarried in the village until morning when they continued their journey homewards. Blissfield Advance.

A May Party.

The Party to be given by the Athletic association on the evening of May 2 promises to be one of the most novel entertainments of the season. The Gymnasium is being handsomely decorated with evergreens, red, white and blue bunting, etc. The small room at the front of the building on the east side will be a perfect ladies room, complete with everything suggestive to the comfort of the ladies. The office will be converted into a check room, which is a splendid feature, in as much as it does entirely away with the accumulation and losing of wraps in the dressing rooms. A portion of the north end of the building is being done off to serve as the gentleman's dressing room. In front of the "horizontal bar" a convenient stage will be erected to accommodate Hunt's Orchestra of Adrian. Should there be any hungry ones present they must hunt out Rawson's tables in the north end of the room, where the most fastidious tastes can be satisfied. There will be something new in the arrangement of the dances. They will start with a grand promenade at 8:30 P. M., upon the termination of which twelve couple go through the fantastic movements of the May Pole Dance. We trust the lovers of good music and lovers of dancing will all turn out and help to make it a splendid success. The indications now point to a very successful party. Letters of encouragement have been received from other towns indicating that there will be quite a large outside attendance. The M. & O. road have kindly consented to loan the club a locomotive head light which will be used for lighting purposes. It will be well worth the 15 cents charged to spectators to see the decorations. Here is a list of the committees.

Floor Committee—Bert Conklin and H. M. Temple.

Invitation—A. Hosser, Percy Dyer, Simmons, Chas. Patterson, Levi Rayden, Chas. Bell.

Reception—Leland Stewart, Claude Vandine, Lou Hardenbrook, Tom McCluer, Fred Tiffany.

Executive—Percy Fitzsimmons, Lewis Hayden, Chas. Whittier, Philip Hindershot, Clarence Monaghan, Fred Tiffany.

In a letter written to us by C. H. Gilmore of Boston, brother of A. D. Gilmore, the gentleman makes use of the following language, which we hope every merchant in our village will stop and consider and then act upon. Judicious advertising is indispensable to the prosperous business man."—Blissfield Advance.

"I don't wonder so many of these farmers get caught," said John Fuller, of the leasing committee that has been at work among farmers in the vicinity for the past three weeks, "out of all the farmers who have leased their land to us only three read the articles of agreement before signing. The rest took it for granted what we told them was as the lease read and signed without knowing what they were signing. I can see now, how an agent can get them all soaped over and sign papers they don't read and which afterwards turn out to be notes or orders." Undoubtedly Mr. Fuller is very correct. While in this instance both parties were well acquainted and had confidence in each other, it is always a good plan to read what you are signing, no matter if you deal with your own father. In this way you will always avoid making a mistake and sign a paper you don't mean to sign. Blissfield Advance.

By all means unburden yourself. I shall indeed be glad to serve you." She said crossing more and more gently, yielding in spite of herself to the witchery of her patronage. Pure encouraged still meeting beside her hands clasped on the arm of his chair, her upraised face sweet and innocent as that of a seven-year-old maiden, she began her story.

You, therefore without doubt, that it was a careless girl you had to deal with in days gone by. I seemed a mere plaything to you. Very likely you even begrudged the time spent upon me in the confessional, and but for my position would have delegated the charge to another. It was never as you fancied. I tried myself as many women do, putting on the self that pleases the world. I was, from the first, impressionable, sincere, capable of better things.

He was still as far as ever from divining her errand. But he found it sweet to listen to her, to be able to gaze on her, and feel in a certain subtle impersonal sense that she belonged to him as of old. He could still chide, caress, encourage.

"Just better self I felt conscious of, how could I assert it?" she cried, growing more and more eloquent on her own behalf. "I was compelled to live in the world, whether I would or no. From my cradle upward I was trained to play a part. And you, too, even you, my spiritual guide, my monitor, you did but seek to [illegible] my feelings. I should have listened to you in the confessional had your heart spoken.

The rebuke was a crushing one, and he flinched under it, a word of apology and expostulation rose to his lips, but he received it till she should have done. She anticipated him.

"I could understand your motive," she went on, "your duty was not to make a woman think for herself, or seek to be happy after her own way. Brilliant as you were, experienced as you were, you yet lowered yourself of set purpose in your dealings with my sex. As a priest, as a theologian, you could hardly act otherwise. But I read your character, although you never read mine."

Again he flinched. Her words had stung home.

"I saw through the veil," she continued, "you played with women's intellects as with toys, themselves you did not despise. But for your calling, your vows, I could have played with you in turn."

"Does the priest cease to be a human being?" he asked, bitter almost to vindictiveness. "Oh, have done: the stings of conscience I have borne, and can bear, your reproaches unman me utterly."

She touched his arm with a soothing gesture, and made him meet her look of tender pity and insinuation.

"It is not yourself I reproach," she said, very gently. "Remember that I should have made the long journey hither for such a purpose? But hear me out."

She paused for a moment as if to gather fresh courage and self reliance, then went on in quicker, more fervid tones.

"Do you remember a curious experience you happened to you during a memorable storm in Paris, just ten years ago? A hurricane so fearful raged over the city that it was dangerous to be abroad, the rain flowed in rivers through the streets, many people were injured by falling tiles, and the lightning flashes seemed as if every moment they would fire the place. Your vast church was empty, but you were at your post, when a woman dressed in black and closely veiled sank up to the confessional and knelt to you.

Again light as of sudden conviction would be break upon his mind, but this time of no importance to him. It was a conviction that he had wronged him as well as with her. He flinched, turned pale, made an effort to speak, but failed, the [illegible]

"She confessed to you in the storm" [illegible] story was that for a woman to utter to a priest to listen to! [illegible] "I passed [illegible] consolation in the thought that we two, my nameless lover and myself, were marry-

[illegible]

She flushed upon him the [illegible] pure [illegible] eyes, and said [illegible]

"Adieu to one memory. I [illegible] And when I returned to Paris [illegible]

[illegible]

The clear impassioned voice broke down, the fair head drooped, the hand she held to her heart was kissed and bedewed with tears.

[illegible] the latter part of their interview the pastor had seemed under a spell [illegible] to be interrupt, but utterance failed him. He, too, was flushed, tremulous, shaken in every limb. These last wild words, those burning tears and kisses on his hand, broke the charm and recalled him to realities. He rose now and for a moment stood over her with a strange expression, as if he were calling down the blessings of heaven upon her fair head; as if, indeed, he were shrinking from some angelic vision, that revealed his own faithless and mortality. There without a word, he led her to the window.

It looked upon the long narrow garden stretching from the house and little church, now flooded with warm sunshine. All was calm, golden, peaceful; yet Georgette gazed with a sudden, unexplained sinking of the heart. At the further end, under the shadow of a lofty plane tree, was a deal table, and by it stood a patient faced woman, evidently belonging to the peasant class, busily ironing. Homely as was her appearance, it was, nevertheless, not without a certain dignity and pathos. She looked so absorbed in the business of ironing, so forgetful of self, so lost to a sense of everything but the matter of fact, pro-

"You see yonder poor good woman," the pastor said, as the pair thus watched the unconscious figure from the window. "I loved another, whose story you have just told. But the first act of my new life, and newly awakened conscience, was to atone to her I had wronged in my youth."

* * * * * *

And romance had now surely knocked at that parsonage door for the first, last time. With burning tears, a hand clasp, a whispered word, and one long, lingering gaze into each other's eyes, the two parted. Who shall say ever to meet again?

Strange as it would seem at first sight, this fateful meeting little affected the tenor of their outward lives. It was as if all the daring, all the heroism, all the force of these two characters had been already spent, by Georgette de Beaumont upon the initiative that had been the one truly fine act of her life; by the pastor, upon the twofold sacrifice made for conscience sake. He had suddenly found himself at the parting of the ways, on the one hand, beckoned worldly fortune, the esteem of the great, a commanding social position; on the other poverty, scorn, an abnormal condition, but coupled with these, a conscience at rest. Then came the second choice. He might make material atonement to the peasant and be had wronged years before; he might then, by his disregard of this act of self reproach, think of the forsaken happiness no longer denied him, and even dream of Georgette, the beautiful Georgette!

TWO AND ONE MAKE THREE.

The freshness of young men, during their first year in college, is proverbial, and it often happens that a little that single year is passing many years know more in their own estimation than they do throughout the rest of their lives.

A father once said to his son, during his first college year, "John, the difference between you and me is simply this: You think I am a fool, while I know you are one."

There was a good illustration of this not long ago, near Detroit, Mich. The son of a plain honest farmer had been sent to the State University at Ann Arbor. In due time he returned home, and his father met him at the depot. Of course, the first question was about his son's progress in his studies. The father was proud of his son's learning, and was anxious to know how much he had learned. The son replied that he had learned to play the flute and fiddle, and had brought his flute with him. The father was disappointed, but he said nothing. The son had brought his fiddle with him, and when he came home at the end of the first year, he resembled the young dude whom our artist has presented.

The young man took special delight in puzzling his father by asking him all sorts of mathematical questions, few of which the old gentleman could answer, though he knew his son was guying him. One day, after the horn had blown for dinner, the father, mother and young man sat down to the table, on which was a platter with two ducks. Instantly an opportunity presented itself to the youth, and he said: "Father, how many ducks are there on that platter?" "Why, two; can't you see?" "No," said the young fiddler, "there are three ducks." "How do you make that out?" inquired the father. "Well now there," said the fiddler, pointing to the ducks, "that is one, and" pointing to the other, "that is two, and two and one make three." The old gentlemen, looking puzzled for a moment, said to his wife, "Well, mother, you take one, I will take the other, and let the boy have the third."

Bloomington, Ills., Sept. 18, 1882.

Messrs. Ed. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O. Have taken Hall's Catarrh Cure. Had catarrh and my life, age 38 years old. Had asthma 19 years, and a dreadful cough for five years. Have tried everything, went to the Hot Springs. I have doctored with the doctors here. I have done nothing but get worse for 19 years. When I commenced using Hall's Catarrh Cure I was almost dead. I sent for the cure the day I got Hall's Catarrh Cure, and I had hardly hoped I would live any way so that I would try your medicine. I was very bad. How I suffered for a cause I might not be able to tell at times. I saw Hall's Catarrh Cure advertised in the papers and commenced taking it. I would have been under the sod ere this if I had not tried it. I have not an one bad spell of coughing since I commenced using your medicine. I can sit up in my bed for hours without lying down. I can now do a day's work. I have not a cough with me. There are lots of my friends on seeing what it has done for me, ask me to tell them. I look upon that cure as one of the wonders of the world. Nothing else could induce me to say what I could tell if called on to do it. All that know me here know how I have suffered. I have been given up by my friends. I have spoken to many about your cure. Everybody says, "you look as well as you used to." I tell them I owe my life to Hall's Catarrh Cure. I feel as though I could not say too much in its favor. You can use as much of this letter as you wish, but the affidavit is good. Publish it to the whole world. It is all true and they should know it.

The meeting of the W. F. M. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. Ruth Waring next week Wednesday afternoon. A general invitation is extended to all.

The attendance at the base ball entertainment, Tuesday evening, was good, the hall being well filled. The drama and farce was very good and well carried out by those taking part. The association cleared above all expenses, $17.00. They expect to present the same drama and farce at Britton, next Tuesday evening. The Band will furnish the musical part of the Program. Admission 10 and 15c.

The Raisinville Club will have an entertainment at the M. E. church Ridgeway, Friday evening, May 13th, for the benefit of the ladies church Sociable society. They have also secured W. T. Barnum of Adrian to give his fine Whistling solo with guitar accompaniments. The ladies have secured some of their best home talent to help them by way of Readings, Recitations, Essays and Poems. The ladies should have the support of the entire church membership, as the money they make is all used in church repairs. We would be glad if they would promise us some new spoons to eat our "Ice Cream" with, but we do not dare to speak out loud for the world.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

EXPERIENCE OF REV. AND MRS. C. E. CONLEY.

At a gathering of many of the workers in the prohibition movement in Detroit on the evening of last Saturday evening, it was decided to appoint a superintendent for each ward to see the amendment workers were at their working posts, to relieve workers, and to supply ballots and to look after things generally.

To Rev. C. E. Conley pastor of the Clinton Av. Baptist church, was assigned the supervision of the four precincts of the eleventh ward, one of the most dangerous wards in the city.

Early Monday morning after kneeling with his family in prayer, he went out to his duty. Finding the first, second and third precincts thoroughly manned with prohibition workers, who were soliciting votes unmolested, he repaired to the fourth precinct, where the voters were Germans and Polacks.

The sight of his blue ribbon was like flaunting a red flag in the face of a bull. He was greeted with yells and most insulting epithets. Undaunted, he pushed into the seething crowd, in search of his workers. In a moment his attention was arrested by discordant cries from a knot of fifty or more at the farther side of the crowd. Working his way to the centre of it, he found one his brethren, August Seiman, a German, undergoing the most shocking tirades of oaths and jeers. His tormentor, the mean white fluttering in the air and in his hand, firmly clutched, the amendment ballots. His features were set in that stolid determination, so characteristic of a German when plainly said, "I can die, gentlemen, but I cannot be driven away."

Reaching him, Pastor Conley laid his hand upon his shoulder and greeted him with "good morning." Lower two brethren clasped hands cheerfully, it was those two. But the appearance of the pastor only increased the passion of the half intoxicated rabble. The jeers, oaths and howls seemed to break forth from hell itself. Bottles of liquor were placed to their lips and with oaths they were ordered to drink. At one time, it seemed as if the vile stuff would be forced down their throats, but when forbearance ceased to be a virtue, they were intimidated by Pastor Conley's [illegible] call the police. At this juncture, another yell arose from the opposite side of the mob. "More blue ribbons," thought the two belaugered men. They were right, for behold! they caught sight of Dr. J. M. Griffin, a member of Bro. Conley's church, and the "Boy Evangelist" Babcock, crowding their way through to the side of their brethren. This unexpected reinforcement had the effect of momentarily quelling the crowd.

Pastor Conley says, a blue ribbon never looked so good before as it did upon the coats of these men at this moment.

Taking advantage of the lull, the pastor and evangelist worked their way out of the crowd and repairing to the nearest telephone, asked for additional help from the police.

Upon their return however, they were greeted with louder cries and greater fury than ever. Twice the mob underlook by a rush to run over them. The second time the pastor found himself borne off in by the rushing crowd on the one side and by a horse on the other, whose drivers undertook to drive over him. Why they were not trampled to death and crushed in the [illegible] does not know, unless God was to them, what he was to Abraham, their shield.

In the midst of jibs and derisive yells, they retired to a grocery [illegible] with the police [illegible] who appeared disposing up on the patrol wagon, and over twenty [illegible] they were [illegible] to police headquarters for safekeeping, and the unmolested Seiman, who never had his ballot taken from the polls.

Not five seconds after his need was made known at headquarters, Evangelist H. O. Wills said Bro. Field of the First Baptist church started for the point of danger, Bro. Field remaining with Bro. Seiman until evening.

Ladies were at many of the polling places during the day. Conspicuous among those at the third precinct of the eleventh ward, where the Evening Journal had said it would be worth a person's life for him to appear wearing the blue ribbon, was Mrs. C. E. Conley.

Although insulted repeatedly and almost continually jeered, they were allowed to vote unmolested. In the afternoon, however, it was apparent that they were making votes and a crowd seemed to resolve to stop it. So gathering around them at least two hundred men kept them from reaching the newly arriving voters, not so shocking outside decency at the expense, and fling at them ribald and insulting remarks. The ladies had come prepared for the worst, and so refused to retire. There they stood hour after hour, encouraging each other by pleasantries, until nearly five o'clock, when, it being evident they could accomplish nothing more, they started for home.

But the "gallant" crowd would not part with them, but followed, hooting and running, like wolves on the track of prey. For fully an hour the mob followed them, until the ladies escaped by taking refuge in a Gratiot avenue street car. If ever ladies were heroic, they were in Detroit last Monday.

The ladies of Tecumseh who went to the poles on that day were not thus insulted, on the contrary they were treated with courtesy and respect by all present, and greeted by many of the men with words of cheer and encouragement. The ladies say they would not take a fortune for their days experience.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson for May 8.

THE BOY MOSES.—EXOD. II. 1-10.

NOTES.—"Bare a son." One would imagine that this was her first son; but the context tells us that Aaron was three years older, and we know that his sister Miriam must have been considerably older still. "A goodly child."—Strong, promising. Probably the edict to kill the male children had only just come into force, so that Aaron had not been liable to it.—"Ark."—A box or basket. It is the same word that is applied to Noah's ark, indicating that it was not a regular vessel. The ark of the covenant is indicated by a different Hebrew word.—"Bitumed."—Those were the papyrus reeds of which paper was first made.—"Slime."—This is bitumen, used generally, even in the present time, in the place of lime. It is cast up in springs at certain places where we would dig wells for coal oil.

"What would be done to him."—Whether he would be killed by a crocodile or killed by an Egyptian.—"The daughter of Pharaoh."—There have been many traditions about her name. It is possible that she may be one of those daughters of Pharaoh whose mummies have been discovered.—"To bathe."—Probably a sacred rite.—"The babe wept."—Probably frightened by the sun's light.—"His sister."—Of course not known as such to the princess, but she hastened to help the child.—"Became her son."—Then he was educated as an adopted son, in all the learning of the Egyptians.—"Called his name Moses."—In Hebrew, Moshéh. It is not clear just what the Egyptian form of the name would be. Some say it is from an Egyptian word meaning son. Josephus says that it came from the Egyptian words mo, water, and uses, saved. The word Moshéh means to draw out.

INSTRUCTION.—Marriage is a privilege and generally a duty. To shun marriage for fear of responsibility and labor is cowardly.

As long as Moses [illegible] she did. She was faithful. It was fine [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Moses's sister was not afraid to speak up when the proper time came. She put herself forward and made the suggestion. It takes courage and enterprise to succeed in the world.

Pharaoh's daughter loved children. She had good, sound human nature. People who do not love children are not fit to live or to die.

The number of Irish immigrants to America this year is phenomenal. We [illegible] will be much greater.

Industry brings prosperity. Bradstreet says that [illegible] more men are at work than at this season in [illegible]. And that's what's the matter with the country.

It is now reported that Mrs. Cleveland is in favor of a second term. That settles the business. If Grover has ever been opposed to it he can now revise his opinions.

If Barnum would engage the Michigan, Indiana and New Jersey legislatures and combine them into a tri-annual convention he would have the greatest show on earth then and no mistake.

The present immigration laws are entirely too lax in their provisions, which permit the landing in this country of criminals and anarchists. Industrious, law-abiding citizens are welcome, but these are not.

Eben Ballard, Brooks says: The Herald received forty-eight cords of wood on subscription during the past winter. Did any of our brothers do as well? The Manceloma Herald relies mighty small thing to brag over. We had 148 cords promised.

A Republican paper says: "There is every reason to expect that the next two years of Cleveland's administration will be worse than the last two." An admission rather discouraging for Republicans, for whom the first two years have been bad enough.

The resignation of Bishop Borgess which was made public in Detroit, Tuesday morning, will be a genuine surprise throughout the State. He has been an honored figure in the Catholic church of Michigan for the past seventeen years, during which time he has held the office of Bishop. In fact he has been regarded as one of the most notable Catholic dignitaries in the North-Western States.

John G. Saxe, the retired poet, was for five years editor and proprietor of the Vermont Sentinel, published at Burlington. In those days people thought a newspaper office to be far-fished for a thing and in "The Editor's Sanctum," a poem published in the Sentinel, he relates the following amusing incident over an editor subscriber, who failed to pay for several times for his subscription:

JESS.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," Etc.

Here Bessie made a gesture of disgust.

"There, I have offended you, but don't be angry with me. I am very rich, Bessie, the richest man here, and I own I have sixty farms in Ladenburg and upon them again up in Waterberg, and 1,000 head of cattle, besides sheep and horses and money in the bank. You shall have everything your own way," he went on, seeing that the inventory of his goods did not appear to impress her—"everything—the house shall be English fashion; I will build a new sit-kamer (sitting room), and it shall be furnished from Natal. There, I love you, I say. You won't say no, will you?" and he caught her by the hand.

"I am very much obliged to you, Mr. Muller," answered Bessie, snatching away her hand; "but—in short, I cannot marry you. No, it is no use, I cannot, indeed. There, please say no more, here comes my uncle. Forget all about it, Mr. Muller."

Her suitor looked up; there was old Silas Croft coming, sure enough, but he was some way off and walking slowly.

"Do you mean it?" he said beneath his breath.

"Yes, yes, of course I mean it. Why do you force me to repeat it?"

"It is that d—d rooibaatje," he broke out. "You used not to be like this before. Curse him, the white livered Englishman! I will be even with him yet, and I tell you what it is, Bessie; you shall marry me whether you like it or no. Look here, do you think I am the sort of man to play with? You go to Wakkerstroom and ask what sort of a man Frank Muller is. See, I want you—I must have you! I could not live if I thought that I should never get you for myself. And I tell you I will do it. I don't care if it costs my life, and your rooibaatje's, too. I'll do it if I have to stir up a revolt against the government. There, I swear it by God or by the devil, it's all one to me!" And growing inarticulate with passion, he stood there before her clutching and unclutching his great hand, and his lips trembling.

"YOU SHALL MARRY ME!"

Bessie was very frightened, but she was a brave woman, and rose to the occasion.

"If you go on talking like that," she said, "I shall call my uncle. I tell you that I will not marry you, Frank Muller, and that nothing shall ever make me marry you. I am very sorry for you, but I have not encouraged you, and I will never marry you—never."

He stood for half a minute or so looking at her, and then burst into a savage laugh.

"I think that some day or other I shall find a way to make you," he said, and, turning, went without another word.

A couple of minutes later Bessie heard the sound of a horse galloping, and looking up saw her wooer's powerful form vanishing down the vista of blue gums. Also she heard somebody crying out as though in pain at the back of the house, and, more to relieve her mind than anything else, went to see what it was. By the stable door she found the Hottentot Jantje, twisting round and round and shrieking and cursing, holding his hand to his side, from which the blood was running.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Baas Frank!" he said—"Baas Frank hit me with his whip!"

"The brute!" said Bessie, the tears starting into her eyes with anger.

"Never mind, missie, never mind," said the Hottentot, usually one of the most cheerful and thankless of all men; "I hit him back. I hit him this, and he fell like a log, thick stick he carries, you see. Some several not be starting from three or four times at the top of the house, I'll be bound. I'm sorry I shared a man so like the baas, but look as he will, one can see he was not a Dutch, and I think he will be."

"What do Frank Muller care for any thing like that?" said Jantje. "Bless when she got her money—ah!"

"What do you mean?" she asked, shortly, not caring to be reminded of matters to the old man.

"Why, missie, I guess I know a secret, my love. I guess I know a secret, and I know what I know. Ah! I guess I know what I know. Ah! I guess I know a secret, and I know what I know. Ah! I guess I know a secret, and I know what I know. Ah! I guess I know a secret, and

BERRIES FOR THE FARMER'S FAMILY

Paper Read by Scott Remington, at the Late Farmer's Institute held at Tecumseh.

The cultivation of berries by farmers for their own families is now [illegible] following reasons:

That they think it a [illegible] part.

That they believe it [illegible] more [illegible] than it really is.

Maybe that is written in regard to cultivation of varieties is and [illegible]

And finally they have been so [illegible] by agents recommending new [illegible] and untried varieties [illegible] they come in, and very seldom [illegible] ments.

In regard to the objection that it does not pay, I will say that there is no part of the farmer's garden that pays as well as the berry patch. And a family that has plenty of such fruit during the hot months, will not consume as much meat and will be in better health, which is something from a financial point of view. During the past season we had berries in constant succession from the last day of May until the 1st. day of September.

In regard to the other objections, I shall try to remove them by plain and simple instructions, and by recommending only such varieties as have succeeded for many years and have become so common that the plants can be procured at very little expense. The best time to plant is early in the spring, and in long straight rows if possible, to permit the use of a horse and the planet cultivator, or garden plow.

First in season and importance are the strawberries. They do the best on clay loam, but a fair crop can be raised on any soil if it is deep and rich, and if it is not deep and rich it should be made so by deep plowing and manuring at the rate of 40 to 70 loads per acre. As soon as the ground is fitted, take plants that were grown last summer—these have white roots, older plants have black roots. Plant the rows 4 feet apart and 18 inches to 2 ft. in the rows. The plants should be set about the same depth as they grew. In planting we use a spade or large mason's trowell, which is thrust deeply into the ground and then pushed forward, leaving a crevice behind into which the plant is placed with roots spread out like a fan. The tool is then withdrawn and the earth pressed down firmly and mulched with fine earth. The ground should be kept mellow and free from weeds by frequent cultivation, and avoid ridging as much as possible. The Planet horse hoe is the best for this purpose. All fruit stems should be picked off as soon as they appear. The runners should be turned to fill the space in the row and form a matted row. It is necessary to hand hoe and weed out at least twice, and perhaps three times during the season. If the summer is moist it will be necessary to cultivate in August and September to prevent runners filling up the paths. A matted row of 2 ft. is wide enough and the path can be kept the same width by the cultivator. As soon as the ground is frozen up in December, the plants should be covered with one or two inches of straw or marsh hay to prevent alternate freezing and thawing from injuring the plants. In April, as soon as freezing is over, this mulch is raked into the paths and prevents the berries and pickers from getting splashed with soil. A new plantation should be planted as often as once in two years, and the old one plowed up. Planting every spring is better, as the labor of clearing out an old patch will give a larger return if expended on a new one. In our experience the first crop is from 2 to 5 times as large as any crop after that. I should recommend the Wilson and Crescent varieties. The Wilson succeeds well, except on very light soils, and has retained longer in favor than any other variety. The Crescent succeeds almost anywhere and yields the largest of any that has ever come under our observation. As its blossoms have no pollen it must be planted near some other variety to fertilize it. The Wilson or Sharpless is used for this purpose. If it is desired to add to these varieties the Sharpless or Cumberland Triumph would be my choice.

The cultivation of Raspberries and Blackberries is about the same, so that one description will do for both. The rows should be 6 or 7 ft. apart and the plants about 3 ft. The canes should be cut back to the ground when planted. The ground should be well tilled and the first season early potatoes or other garden crop, can be grown between the rows. The growing canes should be headed back 25 in., from the ground to cause them to throw out branches and to avoid their being broken down when loaded with fruit. In the spring these branches are cut back to about two fifths their original length and the old wood is usually removed at this time. In the spring an old patch is cultivated very deep; we use 1½ inch teeth on the planet, and then kept cultivated and prevent the horse from passing through. It is necessary to hoe by hand once during the season, to kill weeds in the hill, and also to kill the suckers of the Red Raspberry and Blackberry, all of which should be destroyed except six or eight of the best for next year's crop. A plantation will last 10 or 12 years or even longer. Black Raspberries succeed well on good soil, and [illegible] are as good as any, and for late [illegible] is best. Of Red Raspberries the Cuthbert stands [illegible] well except on the lightest soils. Of Blackberries the Snyder is the hardiest as hardy outdoor and better quality of fruit. There are their variety of blackberries than those mentioned [illegible] winters. The crop is more liable to injury from drought and therefore is not so sure as the Strawberry or Raspberry.

The expense of plants for all the fruits named, sufficient for a large family ought not to exceed $4 or $5. The yield on a large scale for a series of years has been as follows:

Crescent Seedling	[illegible] bus. Sqr. Rod.
Wilson's Albany	[illegible] " " "
Sharpless	[illegible] " " "
Raspberries	[illegible] " " "

Our yields of blackberries have not been so satisfactory for causes already mentioned being only [illegible] bus. per sqr. rod. High cultivation on a small scale would perhaps increase these yields somewhat.

With the exception of the extensive Citrus family of fruits there is no acid fruit as fine as the currant, but since the advent of the current worm their cultivation has decreased. We have had good success with Paris Green when the worms first appear, and one application is usually sufficient. White hellebore is recommended. The currant is easily propagated by cuttings six inches long, taken from the new wood as soon as it is ripe and the leaves fall a little, usually in Sept. These may be planted where they are wanted to grow, leaving about 2 in. above the surface. By December they will be rooted and then well mulched to prevent heaving out. Very little pruning is required except to thin out old canes and not allow too many new ones. They can be cultivated or mulched with the coarsest manure, of which they will devour unlimited amounts. If well taken care of they will last a great many years. The White Dutch does well with us, but the Red Dutch and Red Cherry are considered the standards. We have never grown currents except for home use, but ½ bu. sqr. rod is a light crop. They can be planted as close as 4 feet each way.

Working the Highways.

In many sections of the East, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the old method of working roads, i.e., where each resident along a certain "beat," or road section, works out his assessed time thereon. The general result of such labor is poor roads. People nowadays want something better than is furnished by the old road system, and the advent of improved road working implements shows that better roads are easily obtainable.

The prevailing arguments against the contract system are that persons not owning real estate or personal property are, of course, exempt from taxation, and consequently from road working; under the old system they are assessed one day at least, and must work or commute. And taxpayers, already burdened, it may be, object to the payment in cash for labor which they can perform themselves without great inconvenience. Here the objection to the old system may be mentioned, viz., that labor on the highways is one thing, on the farm another. Everyone knows that, as a rule, the day's work on the road is "cut short at both ends;" that boy's labor often counts as man's labor; that the roads are worked once in the spring for all of the year, and at a time when such work may not be most needed; that the day is often nothing more nor less than a holiday. If perfect roads are the desideratum, the old system fails to furnish them, or only in exceptional cases. The contract system is more expensive until the roadbeds are once put in good order, then less money need be expended upon them. And yet, if a man values his time and labor at the low price of one dollar per day, the expense objection is largely overcome. Where the contract system is adopted and once fairly tried it is not often rejected. American Agriculturist.

An Excellent Medicine.

"My wife and myself were in bad health for some fifteen years. I chanced to be looking over one of Simmons Liver Regulator Almanacs and saw A. H. Stevens' and Bishop Pierce's names to testimonials. I then obtained some of the regulator, and can fairly recommend the Liver Regulator to my friends as an excellent medicine." Z. E. Harrison, M. D., Gordonsville, Va.

The old cemetery at Ann Arbor will probably be converted into a park.

D. W. CLARK'S NEW RESIDENCE.

One of the oldest and most reliable business men of which Tecumseh can boast is D. W. Clark, the Grocer. He is not what would be called a society man, but he has fallen into the prevailing fashion of building a new house. The above cut represents a view of the elevation and is a faithful picture, taken from a southeasterly direction. The house is located on the north side of Pottawatamie street, between Union street and Maiden Lane, in one of the finest residence neighborhoods of the village. It has two full stories and a roomy attic and presents quite an imposing appearance as it towers above the surrounding houses. The dwelling has but recently been finished and Mr. Clark and family are now enjoying their new home.

The contract was let to Henry Mensing who furnished all material and labor. The exterior of the house is painted a dark brown tint with trimmings of nearly the same shade. The interior is finished in the natural wood with walls of "hard finish." The clean white walls with doors and casings in light wood present a beautiful and cheerful appearance.

One feature of the interior arrangement is somewhat peculiar, but is very convenient. The front hall or vestible is a square room of good size. A large coal stove is placed therein which warms not only the hall but the parlor and dining room adjoining.

The plan below shows the exact arrangement of the rooms on the lower floor. Upstairs there are four pleasant chambers, and a truck room over the kitchen. The house is supplied with all modern conveniences, especially in the kitchen arrangements, and we surmise that Mrs. Clark had something to do with planning these. A good bath room is among the luxuries perhaps, but is something which every well regulated house is now provided with. Mr. Clark can now enjoy life better than ever. He has a good business, a good home and a good wife and he deserves them all.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 29th.

Washington is dull, terribly dull just now, all the newspaper correspondents think. Second-term gossip has about died out and the complicating situations to which it gave rise have been wrecked for all they were worth. Spring is here with such accessories as sunshades, buttonhole boquets, strawberry venders, street harpists and the woman with the hand organ and the baby, but society is comparatively quiet, weddings are still in vogue, but the gay world was pretty well exhausted with the winter's rout and does not revert to its occupation with ante-lenten zest.

But April's torpor in Washington will be more than compensated for by activity in May. Everybody is talking about the National Drill, and preparations are being carried foward as rapidly as possible. General Augur, who has been appointed commandant of the camp, is in appearance commanding, and the embodiment of soldierly qualities. He wears side whiskers and eye-glasses and is altogether a very fine looking officer. He lives with his family in an old fashioned brick house in Georgetown, and is on the retired list of the Army, for which he remarked that he was glad, because he would have leisure to attend to his new duties, while if he were in active service he could not have accepted the position.

But the drill is not the only event billed for May. Society always flocks to the Jocky Club races, and they will come off next week. Then Forepaugh's circus is coming, Patti is coming, the National Association of Hotel-Keepers is coming, there are to be re unions of one kind and another, and the unveiling of the Garfield statute, and the meeting of the Army of the Cumberland will also take place early in the month of flowers.

It looked last week, before President Cleveland's views and wishes concerning a second term had been reported, as if nothing on earth could prevent his renomination. Now that the manifestation of alleged coyness and indifference concerning that possibility is alleged of him, it looks as if his renomination could not be prevented by anything on earth beneath or in the heavens above. Above all things else the human heart desires the inaccessible, and if Mr. Cleveland should see fit to say definitely that he did not wish to be President for a second term, there would be a general clamor for him, coming even from those who are now his political enemies.

The inter state Commerce Commission has been wrestling with the long and short haul across the continent. All the transcontinental railways have applied for the suspension of a short-haul clause, and have put forth as good if not better reasons why it should be done than those that were given and proved sufficient in the case of southern railways. It looks as if the Commission will have to serve all alike, although it is a court authorized to decide different ways for each railroad. It can suspend in one case and refuse to do so in a precisely similar one.

While our tax makers are away, extensive and improvements at the Capitol, which the [illegible] are gradually being made. Two new elevators are to be put in place, one at the Senate end and one at the House end of the building. There will then be four elevators in the Capitol, one at each of the four corners, which will add greatly to the convenience of visitors as well as legislators. The contract for construction of the two new ones was yesterday awarded to a Chicago Company, at $6,645. The amount appropriated by Congress for the whole work was $7,000.

The landscape architect of the National Capital recently made the grave mistake of setting out evergreen trees on the new marble terrace around the east and west fronts of the Capitol building. The Dome has long been criticised as looking too large, or out of proportion to the rest of the structure, and the terrace was planned and built for the purpose of increasing the apparent height of the building.

THE MAY PARTY.

The first attempt of the athletic club in the direction of a social gathering was an unqualified success. Their May Party came off Monday evening. The rink is a splendid place for such a gathering, as there is plenty of room for all purposes. A stand for the orchestra was erected in the center of the main room, leaving about two thirds of the floor at the south end of the room for dancing, and one-third at the north end for refreshment tables. Ante-rooms were arranged for the dressing rooms and ticket offices, and the room was neatly decorated with evergreens, chinese lanterns and the various paraphernalia belonging to the Club. The grand march took upon the floor about 9 o'clock to the strains of Hunt's Orchestra, and from that time until three A. M., the merry maze of the dance went on. Every available seat provided for visitors was occupied, and to say that they were highly pleased with the arrangements and conduct of the affair would be putting it very mildly. Mr. Rawson, with a corps of attendants, had charge of the refreshment department. Hunt's Orchestra added new laurels by their excellent playing. With such an auspicious beginning, the club can venture to give more such parties in the future.

The Art Amateur.

For May gives a striking portrait in colors by Stephen Hill Parker of a "Norman Peasant," forcibly drawn and full of life and character. The remaining designs include a dressing decorative head by Ellen Wyman in brown, a fine study of lilacs, three full-size panels for a hall chest of carved oak, decorations for a fruit plate of plums and a vase marsh marigolds, a bird design for a fan, a page of monograms in N, and designs for a sampler and other needlework. Several illustrations are given of American pictures at the forthcoming Paris Salon, including a home page drawing by Henry Bacon, "At the Capstan Wheel," and a striking dog picture, "Shades," by Elizabeth Strong. The department of "Books Old and New" is unusually interesting to bibliophiles this month, and the whole number is an admirable illustration of skill and thoroughness with which The Art Amateur covers its field. Price 35 cents. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

The boys ascended the platform precisely at four o'clock and for nearly two hours the air was enlivened with their musical strains. These concerts are destined to be a drawing card.

C. A. Sharp will sever his connection with D. W. Clark the first of next week and start for New York city. Mr. Sharp has been studying short hand writing, receiving lessons by mail, from the school of D. L. Scott-Browne in that city, and his intention is to finish his studies at the school. Well, here's hoping that he will be able to write 100 words a minute in 3 mos. time. Mrs. Sharp will visit relatives at Rushville, Ohio, during his stay there.

James H. Aten has a curious relic in the shape of a large blue and white platter. It is made of very heavy crockery with a depression at one end to receive the drippings of gravy. The platter was made in England nearly two hundred and fifty years ago and has descended through several generations to Mr. Aten's wife, who is now the owner of the relic. We suppose this platter must be brought into requisition on special occasions like Thanksgiving or Christmas.

Prof. Morris' dog show attracted a large audience at the opera house, Tuesday evening. The "small boy" and his sister completely filled the gallery while the floor was more sparsely filled with older amusement seekers. Prof. Morris has a wonderful control over his dogs and ponies and they obey his command as though possessed of human intelligence. The performing of the six little ponies and the high jumping of the dogs was marvelous, while the performance of Mr. and Mrs. Benedict was ludicrous in the extreme.

Dr. A. E. Brown and Mrs. Dr. M. E. Brown, the celebrated mind cure doctors, will commence a series of mental treatment in Tecumseh on Monday next, May 9th. They will occupy rooms at Mrs. Whedon's on Ottawa street where they can be consulted at all hours. They are having wonderful success in all kinds of complicated diseases.

By reference to our marriage notices our readers will learn that Fanny A. Tindall has become Mrs. Coe. The bride spent her younger days in Tecumseh, and has many friends here in her former home who will unite with the HERALD in extending their congratulations to the newly married couple. Mr. Coe is a prominent business man of Toledo, and is highly respected where he lives.

H. Brewer & Co are crowded with orders now. The firm shipped two tile machines on Friday and two on Saturday. On Wednesday of last week they received an order for one machine to go to Canada. Thursday two orders came from Trenton N. J., for machines to be used in the potteries, and on Friday they received three orders by telegram for machines to go South.

Ida Casler, the girl indentured from the industrial home to Mr. Scofield, of this village, who left that gentleman's home April 17, and for whose apprehension a reward of $25 was offered, was captured by postmaster Welch, of Geneva, last Tuesday, and returned to the institution. She walked from Tecumseh to Devil's lake, and found employment in a family at the latter place.

The May Magazine of American History is filled with valuable papers covering a wide range of topics. "The White House and its Memories," by Mrs. Lamb, introduces the reader into each Presidential home and household since we had a country of our own, with illustrations of the houses occupied by President Washington in New York and Philadelphia, the old White House before it was burned by the British, and portraits of nearly all the ladies who have presided over the executive mansion, from Martha Washington to Mrs. Cleveland. It is a unique production, touching the whole line of our chief rulers within the century—a masterpiece of condensed information. Dr. R. B. L. Trippett replies to Judge Johnston's "First American Rebel;" "Original Documents" contain curious data, no wher else to be found, in the "Note," an amusing old "Guide to Politeness" has been exhumed—showing gentlemen how to take off their hats, and all the minor departments are crowded with important facts and choice reading. Price, $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

The Common Council of Morenci raised the liquor bonds from $300 to $5,000. This action is likely to drive some of the saloons out of business.

Mr. Mills, of the Michigan Stove Company, on Tuesday bought the bay carriage team of H. Kellogg for $600, and a draft mare of Ed. Cogswell for $250. The company with which Mr. Mills is connected has in the past few years paid six or seven thousand dollars for horses in this vicinity.—Hudson Post.

The petition circulated in towns along the Lake Shore road asking for a daily train leaving Adrian for Jackson every morning, and to return in the evening, was sent to Mr. Worcester, the division superintendent, at Detroit, on Tuesday. The petition was circulated at Napoleon, Norvell, Manchester, Clinton and Tecumseh, and had about 100 names, many being merchants. Clinton and Tecumseh did exceptionally well.—Jackson Patriot.

The lacteal fluid receipts at Rorick's factory, this township, daily aggregates about 4,300 pounds. It was expected that this cheese concern would be managed by Cosper Rorick the present season, but since the annual meeting he satisfactorily bargained with G. The event of the week was the social given by Saline lodge, No. 272, on Tuesday evening, in commemoration of the 68th anniversary of the establishment of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in this country, and it proved a highly successful affair. A pleasing and instructive program was presented and to the evident satisfaction of about one hundred invited guests. The principle address of the evening was delivered by Rev. J. M. Getchell, of Tecumseh, which we publish entire on the fourth page of to-day's Observer. It was a scholarly and forceful address, and was listened to with convinced attention.—Saline Observer.

Parties from Tecumseh and Chelsea have deposited $200 forfeit in the hands of John Tynan, of this city, for a foot race between G. H. Watson, of Tecumseh, and Tom Ryan, of Chelsea, to be contested in this city, on a course to be selected hereafter, Tuesday, May 10. The race is to be 100 yards, for a purse of $1,000 or $500 a side, and no admission fee will be charged. The course will probably be over the track of the Agricultural society.—Adrian Times.

The young men of Hudson can manage to get along without sweethearts, but they cannot exist without bicycles. There were five bicycles in the village and this week there have been five more ordered. Others have got the fever, and it now looks as if Hudson would this summer show up quite a little army of wheelmen. With warm weather a "best girl" must be filled with ice cream, lemonade, etc., but all a wheel wants is a little oil. Consequently the wheel is the least expensive luxury. The young ladies will have a little revenge by sympathising with the manly fellows when they have broken heads or sprained ankles. But summer will not last always, and when the weather is cool and the wheel stored away in winter quarters there will again be tittering in the back parlor, and the old game of cupid and the beau will be continued as in the olden time.—Hudson Post.

HIS LAST TAKE.

[illegible] Moir's spirit left its frail tenement of clay and ascended to the God who gave it. With a sad heart, we take up our pen to indite a tribute to his memory.

The deceased was born on the 11th of September 1861 at London, Canada, where he lived during early boyhood. His father's family moved from London to Detroit, and resided there some three or four years, and in 1875 they took up their abode in Tecumseh. [illegible] even at that early age he began to work for his own livelihood. He found employ, for a few years, with Judge Story, and different farmers, until he was old enough to learn a mechanical occupation. On New Year's Day, 1881, he entered the HERALD office and began at the bottom round of the ladder, where the "boy of all work" starts in a printing office. He made rapid progress in his chosen calling. His taste for the business, his fidelity to duty and his personal habits of temperance and economy united to form an excellent printer. After an apprenticeship of three years his progress had been so rapid that he was advanced to a journeyman's pay. For the past three years, until he was compelled by sickness to cease work last fall, he filled with credit and efficiency one of the most responsible positions in the HERALD establishment. During last spring and summer he was troubled with his lungs and the malady became worse. On Saturday, Aug. 14, 1886, he received his last credit on our books. He was advised to take a respite of two or three weeks from work, and we confidently expected that he would be "sticking type" as usual within a month. But the fates had decided otherwise. Consumption had marked him for a victim, and the dread disease was even then sowing the fatal seeds of dissolution. His natural strength of constitution and courageous will battled against the enemy for several months, but the final outcome was the same old story, and his spark of life went out with the opening of May roses in the early morning hours of Friday last.

Of his kindness of heart and manly qualities too much cannot be spoken. It would be difficult to overpaint the picture. He was remarkably modest and unassuming in demeanor and he keenly felt the lack of early education, but his filial affection, his devotion to an invalid father and widowed mother, his faithful performance of business duties, formed a noble and manly character, which many a young man of more pretentions might well seek to emulate.

For many years Will had been a member of our local military organization. He had risen from a private in Co. C. to the post of Sergeant, and no man in the company was more highly respected. His funeral was conducted by the company and he was buried with the usual military honors. The services were held Sunday afternoon. A rain in the morning laid the dust and cleared the air, about noon the clouds cleared away and the afternoon was bright and balmy.

The military escort was headed by the city band in full uniform. Next followed a delegation of former members of Co. C., to the number of nearly twenty; prominent among these were Capt. Lawrence and Lieut. Davidson, the two first officers of the company when it was organized, Drs. House and Woodward. Then came the company proper, every man in the ranks, with Capt. Wood commanding. A brief service was held at the house and the escort, followed by hearse and mourners, proceeded to the M. E. church where the principal services where conducted. The HERALD office employees attended in a body and were accorded a position immediately following the family relatives. The church was crowded to repletion, the music was beautiful and Rev. Mr. Potter's words of kindness and sympathy touched all hearts. At the close of the services at the church, the procession reformed and marched to the cemetery where the final honors were paid to the dead by the military boys.

Several floral tributes were presented by friends, two of which deserve especial mention.

The military set piece represented crossed swords on a bank of callas and Marechal Neil roses, with a shield above. The ground work of the shield was of blue. Over it was a wreath of yellow stars on yellow ribbon, the stripes of blue white primroses and scarlet geranium, the whole surmounted by a white dove. This piece was "to a gift of Co. C."

The HERALD office force presented a set piece representing a composing stick. The body of the stick was formed of white primroses with the word "Will" in pink immortelles, the brass was of blue forget-me-nots, the bundle of Marechal Neil roses, and as the whole resting upon a bank of callas and heliotrope. These pieces were the handiwork of Mrs. Spaulding. They were not only fine pieces in artistic beauty, but they revealed the fact so comforting to the mourners, that Will was dearest to the hearts of those who knew him best.

The deceased leaves a mother, two brothers James and Robert, both of Tecumseh, and one sister, Mrs. Lamont of Honeoye Falls, N. Y.

Although death comes to all, soon or late, it is especially sad to part with a young man in the prime of life with years of usefulness and honor opening before him. Will has set his last take, he has justified his last forme, he has corrected his last proof. We have full faith that his good deeds here on earth will gain him a place of honor on High. His earthly trials are [illegible]

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Abigail T. Martin, of Manmee, died April 1887. The funeral services took place on Tuesday, April 12th, the exercises being conducted by the pastor of the church of which she was a member Rev. Mr. Dutton, and assisted by Rev. L. W. Borden.

Mrs. Martin lived to the great age of 90 years and 28 days. Was born in New Jersey. Married Mr. Stephen Martin when 20 years of age. Leaving her native state with her husband she settled in Seneca Co. N. Y. Thence they removed to Lenawee Co. Mich., in 1833. For many years she lived a widow and died in the care of her daughter, Mrs. Young. At the early age of sixteen she became a Christian and united with the people of God. On coming into Michigan she united with the Presbyterian church in Tecumseh, afterward she had her church membership transferred to the Reformed church, near her home. She lived an exemplary Christian life for more than seventy years. She was the mother of two sons and four daughters. One son and two daughters survive her and a large number of grand children, even to the fourth generation. Her death was peaceful.

Her years of care and toil are past,
In Paradise she rests at last
With Him who for her died;
Gone from the church of Christ on earth,
To join with those of heavenly birth,
And there in peace abide.

Gone from all pain and mortal woe,
No sorrow she henceforth shall know,
No tears below her face;
Gone to a home of endless rest,
Our sister is forever blest,
Redeemed by sovereign grace.

herself, but I was sure that if she married him she would have a loving husband. As I had been concerned in her rescue from captivity I felt it my right as well as my duty to urge her to accept him. She did not utter a word, but remained perfectly passive. I advised him to leave the cabin and get his ship under way at once. My boat's crew would assist him. The vessel must be outside the harbor, I said, before daylight, and before sunrise be well into the Sea of Marmora. And so we parted.

It was three o'clock when I reached my ship. Sleep was out of the question. The events of the previous few days were like a dream out of which I had just awakened. The consequences might have been serious to me. But I was always ready for adventures, and had been in many a predicament equally hazardous. I lived, as all young sailors live, on romance and daring. The excitement of this occasion was as exhilarating to me as champagne is to the wine bibber.

In the morning I was visited by several of the captains who had been my guests of the night before. They had felt some fear for our safety when they learned that a conflict had taken place between the guard in the street we passed through and a band of Greek robbers. Two of the robbers had been killed. These must have been our pursuers, who, after we had eluded them, had returned and attacked the guard. They were overpowered by a company of soldiers from the fort, who were making their rounds to relieve the guard. Of course I knew nothing of what had become of the Swedish captain. I assured them that he went safely on board and was to have sailed at sunrise, and that, as the wind was fresh and fair, I supposed he was off. I feigned attack of rheumatism as an excuse for not going ashore that day. The following day our consul, hearing I was sick, came on board. From him I learned one of the wives of a pasha of the army had made her escape by the aid, it was supposed, of the Greek robbers, some of whom had been captured and would be executed unless they told where their companions and the captive were to be found. It was supposed that she was held for a ransom. A rigid search was made on board all the Greek vessels, of which there were many lying in the harbor, but, of course, the missing lady was not found.

I will here give the sequel. Nine years later, while in command of the clipper ship Dreadnaught, arriving in New York one day I made fast at my usual berth at the foot of Rector street, when Capt. Hope, a Sandy Hook pilot, who was harbormaster at the time, boarded my vessel and told me that a Swedish brig was lying at pier 8, and that her captain was very anxious to get me before he sailed. The Constantinople episode had nearly passed from my mind in the exciting years that had intervened. As soon as our gang plank was hauled ashore a lady and gentleman came on board. I was standing on the quarter deck with some custom house officers and passengers. The lady, whom I immediately recognized, came forward and embraced me with much warmth, and the gentleman followed suit. The pleasure attending this happy meeting was shared by all who witnessed it. It is needless to say that the pair were the Swedish captain and the lady whom I assisted to escape from Constantinople. That truth is stranger than fiction is here exemplified. After leaving Constantinople their joy was unspeakable upon discovering that they had been lovers in their childhood. She was the flaxen haired girl for whom my friend had pined so long. When they parted as children her family went to Moscow, where they remained several years and where she had the advantage of an excellent education and became a prodigy of beauty. Her great beauty attracted admirers, but none

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; every body said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was procured, and the first dose gave him relief. He bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds.

Trial Bottle of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at
C. A. Wright & Co.

The old cemetery at Ann Arbor will probably be converted into a park.

If the Sufferers from Consumption,

Scrofula, and General Debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brightwood, Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisis, Scrofula and Wasting Diseases generally. It is very palatable."

Fire at Romeo last week destroyed the hardware store of James R. Moreland. The loss will reach $10,000; insurance $6,000.

An Excellent Medicine.

"My wife and myself were in bad health for some fifteen years. I chanced to be looking over one of Simmons Liver Regulator Almanacs and saw A. H. Stevens and Bishop Pierce's names to testimonials. I then obtained some of the regulator, and can heartily recommend the Liver Regulator to my friends as an excellent medicine." Z. E. Harrison, M. D., Gordonsville, Va.

Every man can be accounted a good citizen who makes two trees grow where only one grew before.

The best on earth can truly be said of Grigg's Glycerine Salve, which is a sure, safe and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will positively cure piles, tetter and all skin eruption. Try this wonder-healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25cts. Sold by Dr. George Ferguson.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE IT? We are daily guaranteeing Kemp's Sarsaparilla to the people for cleansing the blood and giving a new lease of life. Price $1.00. Sold by Baker & Hall.

TO ALL MEMBERS of society: Kemp's Balsam will cure your distressing cough. We guarantee it. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial size free. Sold by Baker & Hall.

THE GUARANTEED remedy, Kemp's Balsam, for the Throat and Lungs. It never fails to cure Coughs, Colds, Croup, Bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1. Trial size free. Sold by Baker & Hall.

"Why do you not look me in the face?" "Because your breath is bad. If you would use Trix you would be much more companionable."

George F. Payne, of Adrian, died recently, aged 85 years.

What are Suppositories?

A. G. Rose, from New London, Conn., writes: Send me two boxes of your Kemp's Pile Suppositories by mail. Our druggist is out. They are for a friend. I tried everything without help, but the Suppositories cured me.

The treatment is new and within reach of all, and would advise the afflicted to give them a trial. For sale in Tecumseh by Baker & Hall, at 50c. per box.

The Jackson police have received their new hats.

Itch, Prairie Mange, and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists, Tecumseh Mich.

Drunkenness or Liquor Habit, can be cured by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and now believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effects results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and testimonials. Address in confidence GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

It costs about $50 a year to support the churches at Paris.

ENJOY LIFE

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and forests, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel, like giving it up, disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Once more the trees are dressed in garments of leaves and blossoms that are grand to behold.

Quarterly meeting next Sunday, the usual services at the usual hour.

The Sexton, Jacob Arner, has been improving the appearance of the cemetery very much of late in the way of trimming up the hickorys.

Two weeks from next Monday is Decoration day, and if we decorate some action should be taken immediately, and persons owning lots in the cemetery should note their appearance.

Minnie Barrett is suffering with inflammatory rheumatism and heart disease at present, and is in a sad condition.

G. P. Waring and his mother spent Friday and Saturday with friends in Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Cora Jackson Higdon of Barryville, formerly of Macon, spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in the village.

Jennie Calhoun and Ada Potter of Tecumseh, were the guests of Jessie Potter last week Thursday.

Jennie McClure and Cora Jones of Tecumseh, spent Sunday as the guests of Rhoba and Lou Arner.

The Tipton base ball boys were on time Saturday and the game was called at a little after 2 o'clock, with the Tipton's at the bat. Our boys run them pretty hard for the first part of the game, but were met with some fine playing the latter part of the game. The score stood 10 to 33 in favor of Ridgeway. Everything passed off satisfactorily and with good feeling.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Sharp, of Tecumseh, were in the village the fore part of the week, shaking hands with friends preparatory to leaving for a few months stay. Mrs. Sharp will go to visit her parents at Rushville, Ohio, while C. A. goes to New York city to study type writing and short hand. He has the hearty wishes of his many friends here for success.

Don't forget the entertainment Friday night of this week at the church, given by the Raisin Glee Club.

F. J. Temple is home again having finished his courting at the seat of Justice at the county seat, Tuesday.

Kittie Clark, who has been spending several weeks at Grand Rapids with relatives and friends, Mrs. Ida Arner Anderson of Ionia, and Rufus Raymond and family of Macon; also, visiting the capitol at Lansing, returned with her sister, Mrs. Frank Clarkson, Saturday, looking well having improved very much in health.

For respect to the parents of those boys from Tecumseh who made rather more noise on our streets, during services Sunday evening than the law allows, we will not give their names, but will simply say if it should be repeated, something more than their names will be heard from.

The attendance at the entertainment given by the base ball association and band at Britton, Tuesday evening was somewhat limited, but everything passed off very nicely; they took in upwards of $12.00 however. We understand the managers are making arrangements to give an entertainment at Macon, with the assistance of the Macon Band, to be given next week Friday evening.

John Lucas and wife of Dundee spent the Sabbath with their mother, Mrs. Cheever.

The base ball association wish to extend their many thanks to all who took part or helped in any way in the entertainments given at Ridgeway and Britton, especially to the ladies and Mr. Waring.

Next Saturday the Tecumseh Boys are expected to play our boys a match game in this village. A lively game is expected and a good time to all.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

John Bunting has been putting in tile on his west farm.

Sadie Taylor visited friends in the Allen district, Bridgewater, on Saturday.

Corn planting is now in order. Wesley Pawson was the first man to get his crop in the ground, here on this little corner of the world.

John Burtless went to Battle Creek last week to see about getting his machine renovated. All other threshers will do well to "look a leedle out" or get worse beaten than ever after harvest.

L. E. Taylor drove out to D. Woodward's fruit farm Saturday in quest of plants to start a family berry patch. He thinks a quarter of an acre will supply his table. He found everything thriving on Mr. W's place. Peaches, pears, grapes and berries of all kinds promise a bountiful yield, and enough to furnish good eating for all Southern Michigan.

When a young man who has always been noted for his steady habits and who has taken his father's farm to work, starts unsuddenly buys a loss suit of clothes and brand new trunk, and goes off on a western tour just in planting time it looks suspicious to say the least. Yet that is just what dame rumor says of Watson Hunt. Wonder if he expects to cast in his lot with the Iowan's? Or perhaps his Lottie's already there.

ONSTED ODDS.

Great scarcity in the news market just now.

Dennis Austin and wife of Tompkins, Jackson county, visited her father last Sunday.

Hines & Son have erected a slaughter house west of the village.

Carpenters are busy finishing the rooms over Curtis & Kane's store.

Teachout & Wooden shipped two carloads of sheep from here Monday morning.

Fred Snow has returned from Chesaning. He says work is not so plenty there as was reported.

Mrs. J. S. Kane and Miss Bancroft of Napoleon, were in town Saturday evening and Sunday.

In speaking of the birthday party at William Onsted's last week, we neglected to state that in addition to the couch presented to him, his wife received a fine hanging lamp. Mr. Reed made the presentation speech which was responded to by Mr. Onsted.

FARMER'S SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmer's Social Club held a very pleasant meeting at Uncle John Rector's, Friday afternoon, April 29. The literary part of the program was shorter than usual, but was well prepared and gave pleasure.

The profitableness of wire and picket fence was thoroughly discussed by the gentlemen and the decision was quite unanimous that the wire and picket fence was a profitable and convenient fence for the farmers to build.

After the discussion a picnic supper was served. Mr. Rector has not been able to attend the meetings of the club the past winter, consequently he enjoyed the afternoon very much.

The club adjourned to meet the last Friday in Oct. at J. W. Benedict's.

The program will be given in due season.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Sec.

The meeting of Macon Grange on May 5th was but slightly attended, owing to the condition of the weather. The meeting adjourned to meet on Thursday, May 19th, at 2 o'clock P. M. at which time the program as announced 2 weeks ago will be expected. The subject of celebrating the 9th day of June, as Children's day, in obedience to the proclamation of the Master of the State Grange will be considered at that time. Believing it can be made a good thing, a full attendance of members is requested, so that the matter may be thoroughly talked over.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualties be known to the friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No persons can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 50,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and dealers, in the United States and Canada.

The Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw R. R. Co., Michigan divison, will issue a new time card to take effect May 22d. There will be four strictly first class passenger trains, two each way. Battle Creek Express will leave Battle Creek, going east, at 6:40 a. m., and leave Toledo, going west, at 5:20 p. m., giving passengers over six hours in Toledo. This train will also connect with the Wabash Western railway at Britton, going east at 10:19 a. m., and from Detroit going west at 5:51 p. m., giving passengers five hours in Detroit. All trains will make good connections at Toledo, both directions, with the W. & L. E., C., H. V. & T., Pennsylvania company, Wabash railway, C. H. & D. and L. S & M. S. Time table will be published in full in next issue.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

THE WASTE OF DRINK.

The first, but by no means the largest item in the statement of the waste of drink, is the $900,000,000 annually spent for the intoxicating liquors consumed as a beverage by the people of the United States. It is not necessary to take into account the harm drink does to its victims and to society in order to prove that the money spent for it is wholly wasted by the consumers. All that is necessary is to show that alcoholic liquors do the drinkers no good. To do them good it must in some way promote good health, and furnish nourishment and strength to body and mind. In other words, it must contain nutritious properties which, when taken into the stomach, act as a food. If it does contain such properties then it is some benefit, at least to the drinker, and on the supposition that it does him no harm, or less harm than good, the money he spends for it is not wholly wasted. It will be seen that the validity of this part of the argument depends upon the truth of the views held by physicians and chemists. What those views are has been recently shown by Dr. Hargreaves in his series of articles in THE LEVER, on "The Scientific Basis of Alcohol." Their testimony to the point before us—"Is Alcohol a Food?"—is well summed up in his own words.

"No sane professional man will dare to stake his reputation, at this day, by asserting that alchol contains any of the properties that constitute a food—as it contains nothing that can form a single particle of tissue. It cannot give strength nor force, as it contains nothing that can strengthen, any more than the whip or spur can strengthen the poor, wornout, old, jaded horse."

Since alcohol is not a food it can do its consumers no good whatever, and, therefore they waste the $900,000,000 they spend for it annually as completely as if they gathered that huge sum together in bank bills and burned it to ashes in a bonfire.

But while alcohol does no good, it does infinite, incalable harm, only a part of which can be estimated in dollars and cents. And yet this small part constitutes an amount of annual financial waste more than twice as large as the drink bill. Here are some of the items of the harm account. First, 100,000 people die annually, and prematurely, of course; from the effects of drink. It is estimated that an average of fifteen years is thus taken from the natural life of these 1000,000 victims of alchol; that is an annual loss of 1,500,000 years. At the average yearly wages of a sober man—$350—this item amounts to $525,000,000 annually. Second. We have a standing army of 200,000 paupers and criminals made by drink. This army has to be restrained and supported at a public expence of $200 apiece per year, which gives us another item of $40,000,000. Third. The loss of labor of these 200,000 paupers and criminals at $350 each per annum amounts to $70,000,000. Fourth. There are, it is said, 100,000 criminal prosecutions each year, which cost on an average $500 apiece, and 100,000 which average $100 each, making a total of that item of $50,000,000 annually. Fifth. The additional annual expense for criminal courts and police made necessary by drink is $200,000,000. A sixth item is $100,000,000 yearly cost of prisons, almshouses, jails, and asylums for the victims of drink. To this should be added the amount lost by men who are often temporarily incapacitated for work or business by drink. It has been estimated and we believe it is much too low an estimate, that drinking men lose as much through waste of time and reduction of wages caused by their habits as they pay for drink. The seventh item then, is $900,000,000 lost in this way annually. The eighth is the drink bill itself $900,000,000 which, as we have seen, is spent for that which does the drinkers no good and does them and society infinite harm. We attempt no estimate of the amount squandered by intoxicated and half-intoxicated men in gambling with sharpers, and in worse vices, but sum up in tabular form, for the convenience of the reader, the eight items above given of the tremendous waste and harm annually caused by drink.

1. Value of time lost by premature deaths through drink	$525,000,000
2. Support of 200,000 paupers and Criminals	40,000,000
3. Value of labor lost by the same	$70,000,000
4. Cost of criminal prosecutions	60,000,000
5. Cost of criminal courts and police	200,000,000
6. Prisons, almshouses, asylums	100,000,000
7. Value of time lost by drinking men	900,000,000
Total, without the drink bill	$1,845,000,000
8. Annual drink bill	$900,000,000
Total	$2,795,000,000

Observe that this immense sum is absolutely wasted by the people of this country. In return for it they have nothing whatever of value to show. They have to show crime, pauperism, insanity, idiocy, the premature death of thousands, and the untold misery and shame of 200,000 wives and children of drunkards. These are the products of the annual waste of $2,795,000,000. In view of this waste what should be thought of the men who propose to make the liquor traffic pay its cost to the people in national revenue and high license fees? The total value of the liquor business of the country, plant and all, is $1,200,000,000. It would require more than twice that sum to pay the money damage it does to the people every year of its accursed existence. We have no patience to argue with men who are in favor of tolerating it for a moment.—The Lever.

A Great Offer Made by the Mellin's Food People, of Boston, Mass.

In order to advertise "Mellin's Food," the following offer is made to readers of this advertisement: On receipt of Thirty-five Cents, Doliber, Goodale & Co., proprietors of "Mellin's Food," will mail to any address two beautiful lithoed water-color engravings and a copy of "Sunshine for Little Children," a magazine crowded with charming pictures and exquisite stories for the little ones. These engravings are by Ida Waugh, the greatest of American child artists, and Bouguereau, of Paris, whose radient child faces are known in every quarter of the globe. One, an exquisite picture of rare excellence, represents a lovely infant, with a face as beaming as the morning; the other is a young miss in school, book in hand, puzzled over a difficult lesson. They are now selling in New York city at One Dollar and Twenty five Cents apiece. They are pronunced by the artists to be of unusual merit. They offer both, with the beautiful "Sunshine," for the price of Thirty-five Cents. The offer is absolutely limited to 100,000 pairs of pictures. When these are gone the supply will be exhausted for the season. As a mother's gift to her girl or boy, nothing could be more appropriate or acceptable. "Mellin's Food" is advertised only on the inside of the "Sunshine" covers. All orders should be addressed to Doliber, Goodale & Co., Proprietors of "Mellin's Food," 49, 41, 42 and 43 Central Wharf, Boston, Mass.

NO. 67,060.

That Is the Number of the Ticket that Caught on to $150,000.

One Tenth of the Amount Comes to a Cheboygan Lady.

At the last drawing of The Louisiana State Lottery Company, ticket No. 67,060 drew the capital prize of $150,000, and as most of our readers are aware a one-tenth part of this ticket was owned by Mrs. M. R. Newberry, of this city, who is now rejoicing in the receipt of her $15,000, which arrived here the first of the week, the amount having been collected by the First National Bank of Cheboygan. There is rejoicing over their good fortune in the home of Mr. & Mrs. Newberry and all of our people are glad to see them catch on, this being the first lottery ticket ever bought by Mrs. Newberry. We are sorry to learn that they will remove to Grand Rapids and there purchase a home and settle down and enjoy the benefit of their good luck. The balance of the money left after getting a home will be put out at interest, or placed in some safe place. The lottery company came to the front promptly and paid the amount of money due on presentation of the ticket without any quibbling.—Cheboygan Mich. Democrat, April 28th.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1884.

A Langsburg man has three daughters and a dog that chew gum.

The state constabulary inspectorship seems to be a pretty soft berth.

The bill providing for a state constabulary to enforce the liquor law, is likely to become a law. It passed the House by a vote of 60 to 15.

Texas is beginning to warm up on the prohibition question. As the election will be held August 4, the campaign promises to be hot in more senses than one.

It is said that President Cleveland is starved recently that he was "in the jaws of his friends." If this is true, his devoted adherents have what might be called a good appetite.

A Florida hotel-keeper recently parboiled a party of Northerners by saying, "In the days of their invasions the Yanks cheated us out, but now we beat the Yanks out every time they come."

Barney was inspecting the new baby for the first time and his dictum was as follows: "I spose it's nice enough, what there is of it to be said, without enthusiasm; but I am sorry it isn't a girrot."

Why should all this hue and cry be raised about the size of strawberry boxes? If the berries themselves be of the proper size, it makes but little difference what the size of the box may be.

The dish-it-was-loaded shotgun did its work at a fearful rate down at Wilmington, N. C., the other day. While one negro boy was blowing out a tube the gun prematurely went off, killing four boys and seriously wounding a fifth.

The Oil City Derrick is level headed as usual. It says: "The inter-state commerce bill is a dead lead. We have examined it carefully, and can find no clause that requires a newspaper to give a railroad company $7 worth of advertising for fifty cents."

A bill restoring the death penalty was choked to death in the senate, the vote being 19 to 13 against its passage. This is right. Michigan should take no retrograde steps on this question. A firm enforcement of the laws we have will be far better than the reinstatement of hanging for murder.

A state temperance council has been called to assemble in Detroit, May 27th and 28th. It will be entirely NON-PARTISAN, representing the people of the state regardless of any previous or present party affiliation. It is the desire of those calling the meeting to call out the best temperance workers of the state, and formulate a plan for future temperance work. Let there be a large gathering.

A bill has been passed the senate providing that township proceedings, registration notices, election notices, notices of letting highway and bridge contracts, notices of the board of health, notice of marshals' sales, execution sales of personal property, notices of annual school meetings and all other similar notices shall be published in one or more newspapers in the town, township or county at least once a week for two consecutive weeks. It will undoubtedly pass the House. But will it pass the governor? Instead of passing the bill he may order it spread upon the journals and the supervisors sent.

Some of the preachers wear a mourning for Stanley is the question that the anglomaniacs are asking themselves because the Prince of Wales objected to the moustache of the priest who read the service at the opening of the English church, still in memory of the Duke of Albany. The prejudice against the royal moustache is strange indeed, and it is pleasing to observe that American clergymen of more determinate character do not preclude their young men in such matters have the independence to wear the moustache if they choose. A moustache may, as the Lancet says, make a man look like a dragoon, but that is because it is the dragoon style of moustache. A neatly trimmed and kept moustache adds to the dignity of many a manly appearance, and is not necessarily out of place on a clergyman's face.—Philadelphia Times.

IT WILL SETTLE ITSELF

There's a general flurry among the Democratic organs and politicians over the reported declination of a second term candidacy by President Cleveland. They forget that the question of Cleveland's candidacy next year will be certain to settle itself in due time, and probably with as little regard for the President's personal wishes as for the wishes of the party.

Mr. Cleveland's strength has not been among the politicians. They devoted the first year of his administration to discussing the utter demoralization of the party under his policy. But when they got home among the people they with one accord confessed that the demoralization was confined largely to themselves, while the great mass of the Democrats sustained the President in his sincere efforts to make the honest government the first aim of his administration.

The question of Cleveland's renomination will settle itself and will settle the politicians with it. If Democracy shall advance to maintain its own standard as declared in the Cleveland campaign, and be ready to give a hearty support to the President, Cleveland will not only be renominated, but he will defeat the strongest man the Republicans can nominate. In that case the party would nominate him unanimously, and he would have no right to refuse obedience to such a demand. If the party shal divide on the spoils issue it can easily defeat itself and its defeat would be much more overwhelming with any other than Cleveland as its candidate.

No party can take a step backward toward the old spoils system in this enlightened age. It was the spoils system that defeated the Democracy in 1880. It was the spoils system that defeated the Republicans before the people in 1876 and again in 1884, and Blaine will be unavailable in 1888, if the Democrats shall sustain Cleveland, solely because he is the boldest embodiment of the spoils system that twice wrecked his party. When the Republicans come to make up their ticket and their issues for 1888, the appeal won't be made to the spoilsmen of the party. They will imitate the policy of Cleveland as closely as possible, alike in their candidate and in their platform.

Democracy is now in a transition and uncertain state. The Kentucky whisky ring, the ultra free trade destructionists and the camp-followers who have no political convictions but "the cohesive power of a public plunder," would all unite to defeat Cleveland's renomination if they could, and most of them would prefer Blaine to Cleveland as President; but they see that Democratic sentiment is overwhelmingly against them, and they will settle themselves down to Cleveland's renomination, support him ostentatiously if they can't defeat him, and they will be ready to slaughter him by any sort of crookedness under cover. Every indication now points to a heartily united Democracy in support of Cleveland, not only as a necessity, but as a matter of choice, and that would settle him as the candidate, while if the Democrats shall divide on the spoils system, it would settle not only the nomination against Cleveland, but also the country against the return of Democratic authority for another quarter of a century. The question of Cleveland's candidacy in 1888 will settle itself, and it's waste of time to bother about it now.

The above article is clipped from the Philadelphia Times, which is a high tariff Republican newspaper. It is another proof of the fact that President Cleveland is gaining the confidence of men of all shades of opinion. Revenue reformers certainly have no fault to find with him. He is in substantial accord with Speaker Carlisle in his efforts to reduce war taxes and revise the tariff, and if the President had held the power in his own hands the present war tariff would have been modified months ago. The truth of it is, Cleveland is gaining the confidence of the people and the respect of the business classes regardless of party.

THE BEST PLACE FOR A DOLLAR

"The best place for a dollar that is not righteously demanded for the public good is in the pocket of the man who earned it." So says the vigorous language of Hon. Colquitt of Georgia, and it is to stand as the answer to a forcefull tariff essay. Let whoever a money owes it, until the government also finds a reason why it is to maintain a current expense. Why not otherwise taken from the owner of it is robbery. The present tariff practically so increases the money needed for Government, that the man who earned half a month's wages for Government, finds that he has to work the entire month to get the same money. Still more, it puts the burden oppressively upon the poor, who have to work the entire month for a dollar, and the harder the work the more attention is practiced by the upper class, and the poor days are the higher. And still further does the robbery extend. Millions of dollars in taxes are collected in the form of profit on goods that are not taken at equal consequence the government is not touched a farthing. But the people have to pay their money to help make the money of others still richer. It is a startling fact that a good portion of the United States allow such extortions to continue. Hon. Colquitt utters a truism that every man should learn by heart and ponder well in mind, and resolve to help right this monstrous tariff wrong. The money that the government does not need belongs to the people.

A DENTAL COLLEGE

HALF FLEDGED DENTISTS PRACTICING ON THEIR PATIENTS.

Operating Chair—Manufacture of Plates and Teeth—The Museum—Students from Everywhere.

The exterior of the building is so large and so extensive in appearance that few people would suspect that inside there were only two rooms devoted to the business of dentistry. The entrance is through a long hallway, with a door on each side, leading into the operating rooms, and which, when open, exhibit the interior of a dentist's office. Two hundred and fifty men, about to be turned loose upon the community to pick its teeth, to establish the reputation of the office to establish a practice, to make the honest people believe that they need the services of a dentist, to induce people to bring their children to have their teeth fixed, to induce people to pay two dollars and say "open your mouth—a little wider, please. There, a little lower for a moment, then a few strokes to repair the ravages of decay, followed presently by an equal number of strokes drawn also expressive of immeasurable relief. It almost takes away one's breath to think of it.

Observing several pets in entering with that American grit and troubled expression of countenance which mark the novices, a reporter looked up by an equally active venture into this place the other day to see what was to be seen. Ascending a flight of stairs, he found himself in a large hall, pale books and pamphlets carefully distributed, they ascended a flight of stairs and entered a long, narrow room containing about a dozen chairs of a kind but too familiar to need description. They were occupied by twelve unfortunate mortals, in various stages of unhappiness. There wasn't cheerfulness enough diffused over all their countenances put together to make up one single sickly delighted candidate the day after election smile. But there was enough good nature on the faces of the operators, as well as on those of the other students who were visible, to rather more than overbalance the gloom that otherwise characterized the proceedings.

By rare good fortune the artist recognized a friend in a six feet student, who was watching a young man run a buzz saw between the teeth of a neatly dressed and rather attractive young lady. He consented to act the part of cicerone, and under his guidance and protection the twain made the tour of the premises, beginning with the extracting room. That is, they began with it after a while, but not quite immediately, for on trying the door it proved to be locked, and various hollow groans and muffled cries from beyond conveyed but too plainly to the listeners the fact that some student was adding to his information as to the ratio between his dexter arm and some decayed premaxillary grinder. When the student had concluded his operations the door was opened. About a dozen students were gathered around the operating chair, and a young woman in a state of collapse was departing. The students seemed to be having a little discussion as to whose turn it was to have the next "crack," and waved various dreadful looking instruments of torture about them in an alarmingly careless manner.

Leaving this chamber of horrors, the exploring party ventured out into the third story. Here was another large room, with more chairs and more unfortunates. All the chairs were full and the students were working away for dear life. The professors look at the patient's teeth before the student begins to operate and after he has completed his work. If it is satisfactory, he receives a mark in accordance with the excellence of his work. If it is not good, he has to take it out and do it over again. This, the reporter was informed, did not very often happen, but when it did it was apt to engender ill feeling between the operator and operative. Adjoining this was a large room devoted to the manufacture of plates and sets of teeth. In one corner of the room was a furnace about as hot as a crematory in full blast. The student led the unhappy visitors directly to this and planted them within six inches of it while he gave them all the details he could think of concerning the institution.

The professor afterward took the visitors in charge and showed them the museum, containing among other things casts of the heads of persons upon whom remarkable dental and surgical operations had been performed by the faculty of this institute. There was the case, for instance, of a young man whom they called "Tommy," who, through some cancerous affection, had lost his entire nose and all his teeth. As shown by the cast, he must have been a hideous object to look upon. The terrible disease of his boyhood was found down upon his face. The skin opened and left a gaping hole in the middle. When such a hole takes place the finger was cut off at the first joint and the man had a very terrible looking nose at the expense of a finger.

The professor was interrogated as to the nationality of the students. He replied that they came from all parts of the world, and ranged in age from 17 to 40. There was among them each one from Asia Greece. He was a handsome, quiet looking individual, and the professor said, was very conscientious and careful in his work. The course of study is one of two years, the first year being devoted to the theory of dentistry and the second year to practical work. The institute has a corps of 12 professors, and has a capacity for 250 students. The institute has been in existence for 12 years, and has graduated 1,500 students, who are now practicing in all parts of the world. The institute has a museum containing about 1,000 specimens of the results of dental and surgical operations, and also a collection of human teeth, showing the peculiarities of the human mouth, and which, when taken together, are quite a curiosity. MISSION GLIMPSES.

States report 187, candidates for mission fields.

Secular newspapers all over the country are opening their columns to lively facts of missionary news.

One-half of all the money raised for missions in Christendom goes within the limits of the United States for the benefit of our own citizens.

During the past twelve years the number of Christian converts in Japan has increased from 150 to 100,000. But an index of foreign influence is civilization.

Freetown, Sierra Leone, Africa had five years ago many people who had the true God. Freetown is now building a stone church to seat 1000 people.

Life Saving Stations of the U. S. service now number 203 on lake and ocean coast. Last year out of 2,439 lives imperiled, only 11 lives were lost. The Government proposes to extend the service until a net work of brave, sturdy, helpful hands shall be clasped all along our coasts. The churches life saving service lies along all the [illegible] those brave men and extends also through all the interior, with new stations hoisting the Gospel flag and running out eternity's life boat.

Contrast the social life of these millions of heathen with your own. You have Christian homes full of comfort and blessing; their homes abound in degradation and misery. You have schools for the culture of morals and intellect, they have none. You have skilled physicians to attend you when stricken with disease; they have none, save the few who are sent out as missionaries. Forty million heathen die annually. The death roll of China alone nearly equals in three months the total population of London. A woman in India broke both her limbs, they decayed and fell off at the break for want of medical attention. Imagine her suffering, yet helpless and neglected. You have a Christian literature which fosters purity and stimulates the love of truth, but their literature reeks with the very sediments of vileness. You have the Christian Church, with its holy book, its stately and inspiring services; they the pagan temple, with its senseless idols, its low and revolting ceremonies, presided over by sensual priests and priestesses.

You care for your infant girls with motherly love and tenderness; in China little girls are sold in the cities like chattels, and generally for the vilest purposes. You educate your young women and prepare them for every possible sphere of usefulness, but in Japan the father frequently compels the grown-up daughter to enter upon a life of shame and misery that he may derive profit from her debauchery and ruin. You decorate the walls of your homes with paintings and precious souvenirs; but the King of Dahomey a few years since slaughtered 6,000 captives that he might ornament the walls of his palace with their heads. But why more? The contrast is becoming painfully dark. On your side all bright, on theirs all gloom—an ever-deepening gloom! Why? Because you have the Gospel and they have not; because you know Christ, and they do not.—Exchange.

Encourage Men to Own Homes

A man's first duties are to his family and himself. The State should not make those primary duties more difficult by taxing any of the necessaries of life. The necessity for the major portion of the enormous revenue needed by government arises from vice and folly in their various forms. The causes of taxation should bear the brunt of taxation. All public revenues should be drawn from indirect taxes upon conduct and conditions more or less inimical to the general welfare. Luxuries, vices, follies, excessive wealth, and all conduct, either of citizens or foreigners, which tends to generate evil and injustice, should be taxed as far as practicable. Such a system of taxation would necessarily have a correlative effect, viz., the encouragement of virtuous acts by freeing them from public burdens. Instead of a policy which would make it impossible for any individual to ever become the absolute owner of a homestead—that would make mankind more nomadic and lessen their interest in and affection for their homes—the State should encourage every man to get a piece of ground and a home of his own. To this end, all homesteads to a limited amount of value should be exempt both from taxation and from attachment for debt. The tendency of such a measure would be silently to prevent and cure the evil of a monopoly of land by a comparatively few, as well as the evil of a tenant population with little interest in the soil upon which their toil and lives are spent.—John Philip Phillips, in The American Magazine.

DIED.

HAINES—Suddenly at Tecumseh, Mich., April 4th, 1887, Henry Haines aged 66.

1821, at No. 2 Ship Tavern, passage Leaden Hall market, Grace church St., in the parish of All Hallowees, London, England. He remained at home until he was fourteen, receiving a fair education. But at this age he embarked on a sailors life and followed the sea for 14 years. He then learned the miller's trade. In 1849 he came to America and for seven years lived at Venice, 3 miles from Sandusky, O., following his occupation of a miller. In 1856 he came to Adrian, Mich., still following his trade, and working in the old red mill. In 1870 he moved to Tecumseh and was employed in Croft's mill. In 1876 he removed to the farm two miles west of Tecumseh, where he died suddenly of heart disease. The changes mentioned are the leading ones of his life. There was one notable one however which has not been mentioned. As a sailor he had been what sailors often are, jovial and free hearted, but reckless and profane. Three years before he died a change came over him and he became a sincere Christian. He united with the Presbyterian church of Tecumseh and up to the day of his death he lived consistently with his profession. His death it is believed was not so sudden but that it found him ready for his departure. W. H. B.

STOUTZ—On her farm in the township of Manchester, Washtenaw Co. on the 6th inst., Mrs. Kleopha Fisher Stoutz, aged 57 years.

The funeral was attended on Sunday last in the Presbyterian church at Manchester, the Rev. Mr. Phelps from Tecumseh officiating. The choir from St. John's church, Clinton, attended the funeral and rendered the musical portion of the service in a very acceptable manner. Mrs. Stoutz was an old settler in Manchester, having lived on the farm where she died thirty one years. She was the widow of Mr. Godfrey Stoutz who died a number of years since. Four grown up children survive to mourn the loss of a most affectionate mother.

Hints on Advertising

The first time a man looks at an advertisement he does not see it.

The second time he does not notice it.

The third time he is dimly conscious of it.

The fourth time he faintly remembers something of the kind before.

The fifth time he half reads it.

The sixth time he turns up his nose at it.

The seventh time he throws the paper down impatiently.

The eighth time he ejaculates, "There's the confounded thing again!"

The ninth time he wonders if there's anything in it.

The tenth time he thinks it might possibly suit somebody else's case.

The eleventh time he thinks he will ask his neighbor if he has tried it, or knows anything about it.

The twelfth time he wonders if the advertiser can make it pay.

The thirteenth time he rather thinks it must be a good thing.

The fourteenth time he happens to think it is just what he wanted.

The fifteenth time he, for a long time, resolves to try it as soon as he can afford it.

The sixteenth time he examines the address carefully and makes a memorandum of it.

The seventeenth time he is tantalized to think he is hardly able to afford it.

The eighteenth time he sees painfully how much he is in need of that particular article.

The nineteenth time he counts his money to see how much he would have left if he bought it.

The twentieth time he rushes frantically forth and buys it. Exchange.

Our Wealthy Men.

Much has been said in newspapers of men who have made large fortunes in comparatively a few years in various business industries. Many of these articles are written by correspondents of prominent newspapers, and copied into others of lesser note. Correspondents generally are seldom men of business qualifications and wrongfully picture these men and their business as a thing of accident; this is not the case with those we have met. We find that where men have made large fortunes by their own business talent and industry they chose with sagacity and forethought such business as would lead to success when handled with business judgment. No man has been brought before the public as an example of success, both in wealth and magnitude of his business outside of stock and railroad men more prominent than Dr. G. G. Green, of Woodbury, N. J. He is at the head of many large business industries, and yet comparatively a young man. When the fact that August Flower, for dyspepsia and liver complaint and Boschee's German Syrup, for coughs and lung troubles, has grown to a wonderful sale in all parts of the world, it proves that it was not an accident or spontaneous strike at wealth. His medicines are recognized as valuable and established remedies and the business has grown gradually and permanently during the last eighteen years on account not alone of Dr. Green's abilities as a business man or his "good luck," but on the actual merits of the two preparations. Copied from the N. Y. Weekly Sun, of Dec. 22, 1886.

IN MEMORY OF THOMAS SCOTT.

Our father is gone, the story is told
Of his goodness when young, his patience when old,
He joined in our circle for many long years
He rejoiced in our gladness and wept with our tears.

Our father is gone; we know he is dead,
For vacant his chair and empty his bed,
Kind angels, we trust, have borne him away
To a throne and a crown in heavenly day.

Our father is gone; he will greet us no more
With tokens of love as always before;
In sickness and sorrow he stood by our side,
[illegible]

Our father is gone; we have laid him away
In the cold silent tomb till the glorious day
Then we to his arms, as in days of yore,
Will go to our greeting to leave him no more.

OBITUARY.

The funeral services of Mrs. George Price's will were held at their home in Tecumseh, Mich., Tuesday, March 22, 1887, at 2 P. M., where were gathered many more of the citizens of Tecumseh and friends from acquaintance with the deceased than could be accommodated room in the house. There were present also ministers from the resident pastors of Tecumseh, who assisted in the services, Rev. T. E. Potter, of the M. E. church and Rev. W. H. Bennett of the Presbyterian church, whose sympathies and kind attentions in calling upon the deceased during her affliction were appreciated by the bereaved family. Sister Price perhaps for a year or more before death found her health failing, through disease of a somewhat complicated character, when trouble of the heart set in almost eight weeks previous to her end, and during all those wearisome days and nights of suffering in which the patient could not lie down to rest, but reclined only in a reclining position through all remaining without a murmur saying "If this is the way I must suffer till the end comes, I am willing." When on Wednesday as death came on the following Monday morning, while the family were at dinner, Delia with her mother was asked to call the family, believing the hour had come in which to die, when this devoted wife and mother took leave of the members of her family in an affectionate goodby, and then requested that the pillows be taken from her back, that she might lie down to die. So peacefully resting until death chose all that was mortal of Sister Price on Monday morning as the spirit most calmly, "returned to God who gave it."

The deceased was born in Sheffield England, July 18th 1820 and died March 21st 1887. She came to Tecumseh about 40 years ago, when Tecumseh was small, comparatively a new place. She was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist church in England, and upon her arrival here united with the Methodist Episcopal church. She and her husband removed to Ridgeway in 1857 where they both became members of the Christian church of that place, which membership she retained until she joined the Church triumphant. Services conducted by the writer. Text, John 14:18: "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." JAMES WRIGHT.

Mrs. R. C. VanAntwerp spent Tuesday in Deerfield, visiting her son Loren and his wife.

Remember the Library Association Benefit at Albert Anderson's on Friday evening, May 20th.

The Kindergarten society will meet with Mrs. Theo. Crane next Tuesday. Mothers please bring children.

The ladies of the Baptist church will hold a social at the chapel parlors of said church on Thursday, May 19.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their meeting each week in room number 1 of the M. E. church at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Capt. Lawrence is giving the exterior of his residence a new coat of paint. The combination of colors is a very tasty one.

Several of the Tecumseh High School boys "skipped" school Tuesday and attend the running match between Watkison and at Adrian.

J. S. Strang started for Colorado last Tuesday. He intends to visit the mines owned by the Star Mt. Mining Co., and will be absent from home for some time.

P. B. Swick has taken a position in the harness department of the Kalamazoo Wagon Works, of Kalamazoo, and will move his family to that city in the course of a few weeks.

Next Sunday morning at 10:30 at the Universalist church the sermon will be on "Golden Linings." In the evening at 7:30 a discourse on "The Moral Forces of the world." Text, Matthew 13:17.

Rev. C. S. Lester, of St. Louis, Prof. Haynes, of Hillsdale, and Hon. J. K. Boise, of Hudson, who constitute the Board of Visitors of the Raisin Valley Seminary, paid that institution an official visit last Tuesday.

An entertainment for the benefit of the Library Association will be held at the residence of Albert Anderson on Friday evening of next week, May 20th. An elaborate musical program will be presented and a fine entertainment may be expected.

Next Sabbath will be the 5th Anniversary of the connection between the Presbyterian church of Tecumseh and its present pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt. He will deliver an appropriate discourse and takes this opportunity of inviting all his congregation to be present.

The change in the time of the band concert as advertised occasioned some disappointment last Saturday. The reason for the change was the fact that some of the signers to the bonus objected to the evening's program being substituted for the afternoon. Next Saturday the band will come out at four o'clock as usual, and will also appear for a short time after supper.

The Girl's Aid Society of St. Peter's church, will give a paper social next Tuesday evening, May 17th, at the residence of Wm. Hayden. Paper flowers are to be sold and during the evening an infantry drill will be presented in which eight little girls will go through a series of performances with their dolls. Ice cream and cake will be served. Admission 5 cents. All are cordially invited.

ELLA THORP, Sec.

Last Tuesday, during his morning perambulations, one of our most successful fishermen unearthed a horseshoe. Being of a superstitious temperament he resolved to go fishing, as his find was, an exceedingly good omen, so accordingly after school hours, he donned his fishing rig and repaired to the pond, where he met with a most unprecedented catch for him in the shape of a 3 lb. pickerel. We are glad of it, "Philip Mose," you have worked long for it and certainly deserve the reward.

The first order of Adjutant General Ainger has made its appearance. It relates to the encampment at Island park, August 11-15 inclusive. The order prescribes that new members shall not be eligible for camp duty unless mustered in 30 days before August 11, and that great care must be exercised to have these names and dates correct. It is expected that the staff of the commander-in-chief will be present, and that the troops will be inspected and reviewed by the governor on Monday, August 15. The military board is detailed as assistant inspectors generals. An officer of the United States army will be present during the encampment to observe and inspect.

The next issue of importance will be the strawberry.

The universal language called "Volapuk" is already in use by 10,000 people of various nationalities. Its grammar can be learned in an hour. A full account of this new tongue will be given by Richmond Walker in the June number of The American Magazine.

Col. James B. Thorn has received the appointment of postmaster at Hudson. Col. Thorn was a candidate when the late W. T. B. Schermerhorn was appointed, but the latter won the prize. The new appointee is well fitted for the place and will doubtless make an efficient officer.

Mrs. D. S. Salisbury departed from this place last Monday for Petoskey, Mich., where Mr. S. had been during some days previous. They will pass the summer there as usual and perhaps now make it their permanent home. Still, Morenci has always had strong attractions for these excellent people, and so we may hope not to lose them.—Morenci Observer.

Charles F. Consaul, of Medina, lately appointed a candidate for a naval cadetship, will report at the academy May 10th for the preliminary examination. This is very rigid, both physically and mentally. The class which young Consaul is a candidate to enter will be detailed on board the frigate "Constellation," which will leave Annapolis June 1 for a cruise of four months to Port Royal, S. C., thence along the coast north to New Bedford, Mass.

The highway commissioner elect of the town of Dover failed to qualify. He is a democrat, the town board is equally divided politically, and over the appointment of his successor differences of opinion have arisen, and in the dispute the legality of clerk H. L. Baker holding the office has been called in question, and a portion of the board has declared the office of clerk vacant, and then elected H. F. Yarick to the office. It is a very pretty quarrel as it stands, and the parties propose to stand by their supposed rights until the courts knock them out.

Saturday morning as the north bound freight on the L. S. & M. S. R. R. was switching, some cars loaded with lumber on the side track in S. W. Temple's yard, a draw bar broke and the cars loaded with lumber started down the track towards Shawnee St. There were two brakes on but the cars had gained such headway that it was impossible to stop them, and one car ran almost its whole length off the track, only its forward trucks remaining on the track, taking, as it went, the west stoop on "Billy" Smalledge's house, and finally came to a stop after twisting the roofing over the the scales by S. W. Temple's old office, out of position. Monday morning the engine and three or four cars coupled to it and pulled it onto the track.

The Tecumseh Athletic Association had a May party Monday evening, one of the features of which was a dance around a May-pole. It would have been a good idea to have greased the pole and given the athletes a chance to climb it.—Hudson Post.

When Hillsdale ladies removed their hats at an entertainment to allow those behind them to see clearly, all the gentlemen applauded, but it transpired later that the hats were last year's style, and now the same gentlemen remark, "Vanity, thy name is woman."

The Hudson Post says:

A Tecumseh man went to Kansas some time ago, and now writes that his property in that state has advanced $25,000 during the past year. If we remember rightly he was an auctioneer, and his statement should be regarded in accordance with that fact.

Perhaps the Tecumseh auctioneers are not of the Hudson kind.

The Detroit Evening Journal has passed into the hands of W. H. Brearley, who has for a long time been connected with the Evening News. Mr. Brearley is a first class newspaper man, possessing both business and editorial ability, and will doubtless much improve the property. He can make the Journal one of the best newspapers in Michigan, and we have faith to believe that he will.

It has been decided to hold the regatta of the Northwestern rowing association at Reed's lake, near Grand Rapids, July 19 and 20. Citizens will subscribe about $1,500 to pay for badges and meet other expenses. The grounds about the club house and the private resorts of the street railway company have been greatly improved, and the place is more pleasant this year than ever.

What will remove grease spots from clothing in the best manner, is a frequent inquiry. There is probably nothing better than equal parts of strong ammonia water, ether, and alcohol. Pass a piece of blotting paper under the grease spot, moisten a sponge first with water to render it "greedy," then with the mixture, and rub with it the spot. In a moment it is dissolved, saponified, and absorbed by the sponge and blotter.

Some people who were particularly thirsty broke into the vault connected with Fischer's brewery, filled two kegs with beer from a vat, carried it across the street, and drank all they could hold the other night. This wasn't all. When they vacated the vault they left the beer from the vat running and the enraged proprietor found about $200 worth of the beverage wasted in the morning and stale beer several inches deep in his cellar.—Adrian Times.

A visitant to our village, this week, was J. H. VanAkin, of Coldwater, a cousin of our Harrison VanAkin, with whom he came to Hudson, in 1835. At that time only two log houses on the east side of the river were to be found where now appears the important collection of factories, stores and homes that comprise our beautiful village. It was a number of miles to any white man's home on the east, at that time, and on the west nothing but an unbroken forest from Hudson to Jonesville.—Hudson Gazette.

Harry Rauch is spreading himself now adays. One day last week he put up a nice new sign for the P. O., and in a couple of days thereafter another went up for his drug and grocery business. The signs are superb; the red and white letters form a fine contrast and show that the designer knows how to make a sign attractive. But that is not all Harry knows. He knows how to run a post office, keep a drug store, give good weight in a grocery and attend the baby. It makes him dust around though—especially the latter part of it.—Britton Eagle.

SUDDEN DEATH OF JAMES H. DODGE.

ADDISON, May 11, 1887.

James H. Dodge, formerly with [illegible] of this place, died at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He came to Addison in company with his wife Monday evening and not feeling quite well called for the Physical Dr. H. S. Power, who prescribed the necessary medicine. Although not leaving his room Mr. Dodge was quite comfortable up to the fatal moment. He ate a hearty dinner and arose to dress himself, but the task was not to be accomplished, and falling forward his wife hastily summoned assistance, but to no avail. He had passed the valley of the shadows, and all that willing hands could do was to prepare his former tenement of clay for its long rest.

For many years Mr. Dodge was chief clerk in the Comstock House at Hudson, and during the past three years has held the same position in the Lilley House at Tecumseh. He was a pleasant conversationalist and made many friends at both places. Although no immediate danger was evident by his symptoms, after arriving in town he seemed to be forewarned of the inevitable, and remarked more than once that his time had come.

Funeral services will occur at the Methodist church, Friday at 10:30 a. m., and the remains interred in the village cemetery.

The grief stricken wife remains here for the present with the friends of her late husband, and is the recipient of justly merited sympathy.

A DIFFICULT JOB.

"It is very hard work to please everybody," said one of the leading members of the band, the other day. "We have tried our best to please all, but some will not be pleased. One will say 'If you don't play in the afternoon Saturdays, I will not pay a cent towards the concerts.' Another, 'If you don't play in the evening count us off.' Next Saturday we propose to play both in the afternoon and evening, and let the people make up their minds which will be the most favorable time for giving concerts. It is to be hoped that our band will not meet with dissatisfaction simply on account of the time for playing not suiting everybody. The people is what we want, and we must accommodate ourselves to their convenience. In other words, if the class of people we desire to bring in town can come better in the evening than in the afternoon, no matter how much we would rather have the concerts in the afternoon, we should adapt ourselves to the circumstances of the case. Last Saturday evening a great many people came to town for the expressed intention of hearing the band give one of their excellent concerts; but they were disappointed on account of the band playing in the afternoon, and not in the evening as advertised, which change was made on account of the assertions made by some that they would not pay for an evening concert. Remember this week there will be an open air concert on the corner of Railroad and Chicago Sts., both afternoon and evening.

A happy social event occurred at Springville on Wednesday, May 4th, the attraction being the marriage of Mr. Herbert S. Waring, of Tecumseh, to Miss Winnie Rogers, daughter of R. L. Rogers, of Springville. Nearly eighty guests were present from Cambridge and other towns: Toledo, Adrian, Tecumseh, Manchester and Brooklyn, all being represented. The knot was tied by Rev. A. B. Storms, of Franklin, after which a sumptuous wedding feast was served. The bridal pair were the recipients of many costly presents. They came to Tecumseh that night and began keeping house in their own home on Logan street. We extend our best wishes and congratulations, and bespeak for them a successful voyage through life.

Hi. Henry's Pavilion Minstrels gave one of their notable performances at the Opera House on Thurday night, to a very large and fashionable audience. The entire performance, from the street parade until the grande finale, was of a very high character and showed conclusively that each member of the company was a "Star" in his own peculiar line. The honor of the audience from the commencement until the finish of the program, was the best test of the high appreciation of the many excellent renditions. To say that the audience was well pleased with the entire show is voicing the sentiment of all. Mr. Hi. Henry is deserving the patronage of the public for carrying, as he does, such an array of minstrel talent. We recommend his troupe to our neighboring cities as being first class throughout.—Ft. SCENES IN THE STREETS OF THE "CITY OF THE KINGS."

Houses of the Peruvian Capital—Lima's Poorer Classes—Iron Barred Windows Everywhere—Tropical Plants of the Exposition—Brilliant [illegible]

Passing over one of the Rimac's tributaries we enter and pass through the outskirts of Lima, and stop beneath the covered stairs where alighting I find myself among some of the singular and interesting sights of the humbler city in South America. The houses that line the streets on either side, fairly look as if with their scanty furniture and stood upon wheels, that their guests could be off. There is no space around the houses reserved for the yard, though many have small square courts within, more or less shaded by vines—but we pass the grass plots, flowerbeds and gravel walks, which enhance the appearance of our American homes so much. Gardens, however, appear here and there along the streets, invariably, if not public, the property of the upper classes. Behind the ever present adobe wall which adds much to their natural beauty.

Yet mud is a very important factor in Limeno architecture, deprived of it, the city would be but an unsightly mass of ruins. Over one half of the houses are built of adobe—sun dried brick—plastered within and without with mud, and roofed mainly with red tiles. A couple of coats of whitewash, in lieu of paint, complete the dwelling. The poorer classes, who form the greater portion of the population, live in houses of bamboo, over which a lattwork of cane is woven, plastered on all sides with mud, and roofed with bamboo or straw. I only possesses but two stories high houses—a tour mill and the pen [illegible]. A few of the fine antique residences of the aristocracy are, however, fronted with [illegible] and decorated with [illegible] and those of the poorer [illegible] are in a few instances, [illegible] composed [illegible]. But Lima's architecture, her [illegible] palaces, her cathedrals, her [illegible] are almost [illegible] of mud—[illegible] everywhere a city [illegible] of these [illegible] the good stone, [illegible] the paucity of earth [illegible] latter reason, the [illegible] are but one [illegible]. All [illegible] place to be [illegible] that the lower [illegible] of all [illegible] public and private in Lima are [illegible]. I pre[illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] agent here so often, with their affiliated roseries and bloody street fights.

Another not small feature is the extreme cleanness of the streets and alleys. [illegible] to be seen anywhere. The Lima board of health, which [illegible] its business, has [illegible] its dogs, with, of which [illegible] a hard time in fighting these [illegible] that are almost dirty [illegible] as Americans as [illegible]. [illegible] the day they can be [illegible] the housetops. Their [illegible] glistening in the streets and lanes, [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] is a street [illegible].

Viewing at a distance the entrance of the opera house, I [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] gate [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

It is a remarkable fact that in London a jump should have been made in almost a single bound from the old fashioned Saxon inn, with its dark, ill-ventilated, [illegible] and unfortunately [illegible] railways and [illegible] to such a hotel as the Metropole. [illegible] richly furnished saloons and [illegible] that beauties and advantages that [illegible] advanced modern architecture [illegible]. No one can step into this [illegible] without an expression of wonder and delight. [illegible] to say nothing of its [illegible] of the [illegible] must be given [illegible] American traveler. Naturally [illegible] to the owner of American [illegible] in London and a duplicate of its [illegible] is often made in [illegible] of American [illegible] in Europe. [illegible] popularity with [illegible] It is also the favorite [illegible] with people. The superb [illegible] the best of the kind [illegible] It was only a few years ago [illegible] Prince of Wales pressed there [illegible] and cream of the [illegible]

[illegible] Metropole is the prince's favorite [illegible] for the reason that its beauty of [illegible] and interior decorations and [illegible] generally are incomparably [illegible] those of any other hotel in [illegible].—New York World.

Work as a Medicine.

[illegible] have to go to do—how easily [illegible] disposition.

You have an engagement you have an [illegible] to write a dress to make, a cold [illegible] a harvest to gather, a purse to [illegible] a [illegible] of [illegible] whose call is peremptory [illegible] must be obeyed—what a sufferer [illegible] and muscles an engagement is. [illegible] less principle is to avoid to [illegible] a pain or a suggestion [illegible] and cries.

Work is the best medicine.

[illegible] is its right hand man. Occupation is what market goods and gives us we retain them life we may be [illegible] and well pure from us, [illegible] given that we are weary of [illegible] Work, to share it—[illegible] Herald.

The Shoppers and the Salesladies.

The State street war is a social war and when we look out its causes and analyze its [illegible] we find that it may be [illegible] rationally. Every [illegible] superior to somebody else and [illegible] an opportunity to show it. The opportunity comes to a man in divers ways. He can lord it over his employes, or his subordinates, he may patronize his [illegible] the cigar dealer or the newsboy. But few such opportunities come to [illegible] Similar it is go it too strong with [illegible] servants for fear they'll leave [illegible] a good many women don't [illegible] servants and among them may be [illegible] many of those who fiercely lead the [illegible] dunning in the dry goods [illegible]

[illegible] State street that every woman [illegible] opportunity to feel and enjoy and give forward evidence of a sense of superiority to somebody else. The average shopper, no matter what her station or [illegible] stances, thinks herself several [illegible] above the saleswoman. She shows that she thinks so, too, and there [illegible] the trouble. The clerks, feeling [illegible] at least the equal of those [illegible] they are serving, resent either [illegible] or peremptory ordering about. [illegible] pride, too, and it rises up and [illegible] intelligent. The shopper, [illegible] to mistake the consciousness of a [illegible] which in fact does not exist, [illegible] isn't quite sure of herself, [illegible] over suspicious and quick to [illegible] slight inattention and impudence. The clerk, allowing herself to fall into the habit of resenting the airs of her [illegible], becomes chronically waspish and quick tempered, and it is to discriminate between women who do want to impose on her and those who do not. This, I think, is why we have a war on State street.—Miss Mullin in Chicago Herald.

She Knew the Answers.

A professor in a certain musical college recently told me of a pupil who attended his lectures—a young woman from some remote place like Seattle or Los Angeles, who attracted his attention by her extreme devotion to her work, her regularity—in fact, by all that goes to make a pupil solid with the faculty. Moreover, she was unassuming as the day, with large and statuesque beauty, as of a strong, full nature, serene, calm and undisturbed. But alas! when examination time and papers were handed in hers was found to be simply impossible. It was evident that her mind had done fine work, there were no blanks. In fact, such a paper was never seen before; even the spelling was indifferent, while grammar and music were equally injured and outraged in every line. Tears could not move my stern friend, and his report was—"Not passed." [illegible] inclined to have felt those were [illegible] way it was absolutely [illegible] that the pupil should graduate while her [illegible] might be a quiet affair. [illegible] she applied for a re-[illegible] and the questions were then something like this: 1. Is not the symphony the highest form of purely musical expression? 2. Was not Berlioz a remarkable [illegible] of instrumental effects? 3. Is not Bach called the father of modern music? "And to my astonishment and gratification," said the professor [illegible] every one of these puzzling questions are answered with great perspicacity. Yes, and passed triumphantly—average mark in my class, 100 per cent."—Harper's Weekly.

A Perfect March.

[illegible] a few days ago, [illegible] said to a young lady of [illegible] in her teens, on seeing that she had a [illegible] scientific look in her [illegible]

"Why, you select very deep literature for your reading. I had no idea you were [illegible]."

She answered:

"Oh, it is a deep book. I did not know that till I got it at the library, so took it as the [illegible] compared so beautifully with my hat. Did you ever see a more perfect match?"—New York Sun.

A Rogue's Photograph.

When I am called upon to take the "mug" of a noted criminal who has fallen into the clutches of the police authorities, and the subject objects to the performance, I usually get a detective to engage him in conversation, and then turn my camera upon him, and have him before he knows it. My instrument is always in the detectives' room and hence I have little trouble in that respect.—Police Photographer in Globe-Democrat.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Several farmers about here are thro planting.

Mrs. Barrett, who is suffering with heart disease, is not improving very fast. She is being treated by Mrs. Brown, a faith doctor, at present.

Dr. Nelson, Chas. Grinton and Thomas Temple opened the season at the lakes by a visit to Wampler's lake last week.

Henry Pocklington has a meat market nearly completed. It is situated at the foot of the hill on Chicago St. He expects to open his market soon.

David Harrison is improving the appearance of his residence on North street with a fresh coat of paint.

Ed. Harrison and Will Andrews went to Petersburg Saturday on business.

Ezra Ellis of Petersburg, was in the village Saturday.

Marcie Kelley spent last week at Holloway with relatives.

Henry Barns had all of his buildings burned, but his house, even to the chicken coops and fence. We have not learned the origin of the fire.

The time for our dramatic club to go to Macon, to give the Irish Doctor, has been changed, and the Drama will be given next Wednesday evening May 25th.

The Macon Cornet Band stopped on their way to Britton, Saturday evening and gave our citizens some fine music. They have promised to make us a visit some time in the future.

Never mind David, we will not give it away yet, but tumble to your racket. The new top buggy and repainting of the double carriage means something. Well, we won't give it away.

Anna Smith left for Grand Ledge last week Thursday, to spend the summer with her sister, Mrs. H. Brown.

Dr. Nelson is building an addition to his barn. Ed. Pilbeam is doing the work.

Dan'l Lowe, wife and daughter, Etta, of Bellevue, Barry Co., are visiting relatives in the vicinity.

The meat market formerly known as the Smith & Harrison market, on North street, will be run hereafter by David Harrison & Son, they having bought Smith's interest.

Samuel Fletcher started for the home of his boyhood, near Montpelier, Vt., Monday where he will spend several weeks.

May Smith is visiting friends in Macon this week.

The children and grand-children of grandma Osgood, gathered at her home Tuesday to celebrate her 80th bithday, and enjoy a very pleasant time. J. S. Osgood and family of St. John, were present.

The Tecumseh base ball team that played our boys Saturday, got the wind knocked out of them in rather an unexpected manner. Saturday, when our boys left them in the dark, the score stood 7 to 29 in favor of our boys. We are not as much of a set of country's as we look, they found out at the seventh innings and were willing to quit.

Next Friday afternoon the Deerfield club plays our boys here, if nothing happens, and Saturday they expect to go to Milan to play the Milan club.

There was a very large attendance on Friday evening to hear the Raisin Glee Club. The exercises passed off very nicely. The whistling solos by W. F. Barnum, were fine and brought forth applause after applause from the audience. It was surely a grand success in every respect. The receipts amounting to nearly $35.00, leaving the society a handsome balance for the treasury after meeting all the expenses.

MACON MUSIC.

Chas. Burleson has given his house a new coat of paint.

Mrs. John Morgan of Saline is quite sick at her daughters, Mrs. Crittenden's.

Mr. Clark of Mt. Pleasant has bought out the Niblack Bros., and will be glad to have all call and examine his goods.

Hertie Howell was the guest of Gracie Sage Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Cora Jackson Higdon returned to her home at Barryville, last week.

Will Niblack is now seen behind the counter in B. S. Scudder's store.

James Osgood and wife of St. John's visited friends this week.

Mrs. R. Crittenden accompanied her sister to the Upper Peninsula, where she will remain some time for her health.

John Jackson has gone to Vermontville, where he will work at the carpenter's trade.

The friends of "Uncle Horace Gray" are glad to see him in town again. He is getting to be very old but is as spry and jolly as ever.

There were no services at the M. E. church last Sunday, on account of quarterly meeting at Clinton.

Robert Hendershot has his new kitchen nearly completed.

Ella Niblack is visiting her parents in Ypsilanti this week.

Our Sunday school is well attended and seems to be in a prosperous condition.

Edd. Osgood and wife began house keeping this week.

Mrs. Marshall has been visiting her son in Chicago for the past three weeks.

The base ball club of Ridgeway will give an entertainment at the Corners, Friday evening.

Miss Belle Dilldine has been engaged to clerk for W. & S. W. Anderson. She came here from Pennsylvania three years ago, and has made many friends.

Isaiah Hendershot and wife attended the Quarterly meeting and the blue ribbon at Clinton last Sunday.

Rev. E. P. Pierce called on friends the fore part of the week.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS

Mrs. George Cannon and Lizzie Houghtby, of Ann Arbor, have been visiting friends in Bridgewater, the past week.

Mrs. Adam Ritz, of Eaton Rapids, is visiting H. P. Downs and wife.

Mr. George Lazell celebrated his 88th birthday with a tea party, last Friday afternoon. There were fourteen old people present.

Bert Roff, of Jackson, spent Sunday with his parents.

Mrs. Murray Woodward visited Adrian last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Fisk, of Bridgewater, Rev. J. H. Fairchild and wife and Mrs. Murray Orton, of Clinton, visited at Jeff. Fisk's, in Manchester, last week.

James Walker, while playing in the drama, "True to the Heart," Saturday evening got his eye badly hurt.

David Woodward presented R. D. Terriberry with a blackberry root, 22 feet 2 inches long, which Mr. T. set out.

There has been quite a change in Clinton of late. John Bush has bought B. Swifts interest in the grocery store: Oley Sinclair has bought Chas. Burrough's drug store; Chas. Burroughs and Frank Lancaster have bought out L. W. Kimball & Co.

Mrs. Leek, of this village, died very suddenly, last Thursday morning.

New Arrivals—At John Palmer's, a boy; at Al. VanGieson's, twins; at Jas. Hogan's, a girl.

Several citizens drove over to Tecumseh, and enjoyed the band concert, last Saturday. Where are the red coats? Cannot we have a band. The material is here—why not?

Mrs. Will T. Eccles, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, and is stopping with her parents, Moses Bartlett and wife, is on the gain, much to the gratification of her many friends in this village.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Quarterly meeting at the M. E. church last Saturday and Sunday.

Chas. E. Jessup lost a valuable cow last week.

Deputy Sheriff Smith of Adrian was in town last Friday looking after legal matters.

Going spearing is growing slightly out of fashion of late, but we are not afraid because we never did go anyhow.

Peter Long presented his bond last Monday to the town board for a saloon at Onsted. The sureties being good and sufficient ones and testifying to full amount of the bond, $6,000 were accepted.

Mr. John Kerr has a farm on which there is never any trouble to secure a ball ground and that is where the boys will play next Saturday. By the way, the boys wish to extend thanks to Mr. Kerr for his hospitality.

A beautiful shower
Would be a glorious thing.
It would make the corn grow
And fill up the spring.
So singeth the Hayseeds.

W. F. Beyer, Garretsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have, with what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessent cough when I invested my dollar in a bottle of your Papillon Catarrh Cure as a last resort. To-day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured." Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1,00.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 13th, 1887.

For the past few days Washington has been alive with hotel proprietors, medical men and all soldiers of the Army of the Cumberland. Each class mentioned has been holding a convention here. The surgeons attended strictly to business, but the Bonifaces who represented all the leading cities and the leading hotels in the United States, while much on pleasure bent, were not possessed of frugal minds apparently. They were banqueted by the local hotel proprietors in a manner befitting professional epicures, and were taken to Mount Vernon, also to see the President, to see the sights of the Capital and to the theatres by the public mine hosts of this city, and it required a good little sum of money to pay the carriage hire alone for two hundred visitors.

The chief even of the reunion of the Army of the Cumberland was the unveiling of the bronze statue of Garfield, erected by his old comrades in arms. The ceremonies took place on Thursday. The day was one of May's most perfect specimens, the crowd in attendance very large, and every detail of the programe successfully carried out. The three surviving of the five commanders who succeeded one another at the head of the Army of the Cumberland were present—Gens. Sherman, Buell and Rosecranz, and rode in a carriage together in the parade with Gen. Sheridan; the President of the society of the Army of the Cumberland.

The pyrorama, which is to be one of the attractions arranged by the managing committee for Drill week, is being erected on the Drill ground. It requires a frontage of about nine hundred feet, and it will be shown only of nights. It will represent the naval battle in Hampton Roads which ended with the memorable contest between the Monitor and the Merrimac. Unlike a panorama the iron-clads will be real vessels, made according to the originals, and will be seen moving about, the perspective being such that they appear to be of full size.

The illusion is such that the spectator will appear to be standing on the shore of Hampton Roads. He sees the water stretching out before him, a lighthouse with a revolving light is introduced for picturesque effect, and in the distance is Fortress Monroe and a number of vessels of the federal fleet anchored near by. The drama opens by the appearance of the Cumberland, which comes in under full sail, and drops anchor.

The Merrimac then appears and the work of destruction begins, ending with the battle between the Merrimac and Monitor in which the former is burned. The vessels are worked by screws and several men seem to get badly burned in the scrimmage. The guns are made of thin iron plates but they have collars at the muzzles which make them look thick and solid. Apparently red-hot shell and shot are fired, which, when they strike the side of a vessel, explode and make a brilliant show. During each exhibition 3,500 such bombs are fired, other vessels are burned and the thrilling scenes in Hampton Roads are vividly portrayed.

One of the sins of the last Congress, due either to cheese-paring or to the blunders of the rush of a closing session, was the failure to make provision for lighting the Washington Monument and running the elevator. As a result only people who are bold and strong enough to grope to the top with candles can enjoy the wonderful view from its summit. Thieves protected by the darkness have chipped marred the ornamental stones within and now owing to this vandalism and the failure of Congress to provide the means of protection, the monument will be closed to visitors entirely. The watch force is inadequate to prevent depredations by relic seekers and others who deface the memorial stones simply through depravity of nature. The marble has been chipped in many places, while the silver ornamentation on the Nevada stone has been mutilated, and the bronze letters on the Swiss tablet have many of them actually been forced off and carried away as mementoes. During the National Drill it is intended to open the shaft to visitors, provided the Drill Committee will furnish a watch force sufficient for its protection.

There is no danger to human life more to be dreaded than that which arises from vitiated blood. Dyspepsia rheumatism, headache, and general debility, all result from it, and are cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Take it this month. Six bottles, $5.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

THE BOY MOSES. EXOD. II, 1-10.

NOTES.—"In the land of Egypt." The memorial service was then provided for in advance of the occurrence which it should commemorate.—"This month."—Abib, in April, afterwards call Nisan.——"A lamb."—Or a kid. See vs. 5, which says it may be taken from the sheep. "According to the number of the souls."—Later the Jews reckoned ten as a fair number for a lamb.——"A male of the first year."—Perhaps, rather, a yearling.—"The fourteenth day."—The moon will now be just full.—"At even."—About sunset——"On the two side posts." There it had been put as a sign to the angel that the inhabitants were Jews.—"Unleavened bread." The Jews regarded the leaven as a sign of corruption or decay. The unleavened bread was in large flat cakes of flour and water, cooked like large griddle-cakes on the side of the oven. Our crackers are unleavened—"With bitter herbs."—For relish, and as a sign of the bitterness of Egyptian bondage.——"Not raw."—So as not to eat the blood.——"Sodden."—Baked.——"The inwards."—So far as eatable, as the heart, liver, etc.—"Burn with fire."—As too holy to be devoured or given to the dogs. It was not merely a meal, but also a sacrifice. This was indicated by the sprinkling of the blood, and it was then eaten like the peace offerings.——"Your loins girded."—At home and at ease the girdle would be loose, or thrown off; but in traveling the girdle would be tight.——"In haste."—As if all ready to start.——"Against all the gods."—The chief gods of the Egyptians were represented under animal forms, as the sacred bull. The sacred cattle would lose their first born and so judgment would be executed against the gods.——"I am the Lord"—The national God of Israel, and more powerful than the gods of Egypt.——"An ordinance forever."—And so it has been. Still, the Jews keep the Passover very much according to the rules here laid down.

INSTRUCTION.—The Passover was Hebrews' Independence Day. It was the date of the birth of the nation, and a religious Thanksgiving Day, all in one.

Each family took its own lamb and slew it in sacrifice. The family is the unit of society, and those at the head of the family are the true priests. The Hebrews asked no priests to slay this chief and most typical sacrifice. No minister can be priest over the family. Every Christian is a priest to God, offering pure sacrifice, and all we are brethren. In the new dispensation it is unchristian to give special priestly functions to the minister of the congregation.

Two families could join in this service, just as two families now can occupy together a seat in a church. Yet each individual for himself must eat of the passover, and each for himself must receive Christ.

The sacrifice must always be the best, and without blemish. Even so now our very best service and sacrifice must be laid on the altar of Christian devotion. One must not give the dregs of time, and the leavings of luxury. It will not do to give dollars for pleasure and pennies for religion. One should put his religion first.

The lamb was to be kept four days before killing. This implies deliberate preparation. So Paul said that the early Christians should plan and lay aside till the first day of the week what they could give in charity. In our charity we should be intelligent and studious, and not wait until the collection is announced before we put our hands in our pockets to see what we happen to have there.

The passover lamb was a type of Christ. It prefigured him. In the New Testament Christ is called "our passover." He is the "Lamb of God." Chiefly does the figure rest in his blood shed for us, to save our sons, just as the sprinkled blood of the lamb indicated that the families behind the door-posts were protected from death. The evangelist draws the parallel that not a bone of Christ was broken, as in the lamb, and it were easy to draw other parallels; but the chief thought is that he is our Saviour.

The first thought of the passover being that of sacrifice and protection, the second is of communion at the family meal. No one is to be shut out who belongs to the family. The children are to partake of it and to be taught the reason of it. The stranger might have part in it. All were to be brethren together, parents and children, masters and servants.

Here is some peculiar temperance doctrine clipped from the Philadelphia Times.

Music and Beer will mix when they are devoted to innocent social enjoyment but music and beer won't mix with social disorder or crime, nor will beer safely mix with politics. The saloon should be as neutral in politics as it is in religion.

The only legitimate purpose of taxation is revenue, and when government taxes beyond its legitimate expenses it is robbing the people. A treasury surplus is a sure indication of oppressive taxation, and when the surplus gets beyond the ability of the extravagance of Congress to squander so that all sorts of wild cat schemes of loaning it are advised, it is high time to call a halt in taxation.

An exchange says: "There is an indication that before our distinguished guests, the Michigan Legislature adjourns, a bill regulating the size of apple barrels will be considered and possibly passed. What is really needed is some provision to regulate the size of apples that are always found in the barrel after penetrating the outer layer." Let the astute law makers insist on big apples in big barrels.

The Lansing Republican says the liquor interest of this State has it in its power to postpone prohibition indefinitely by obeying the present laws, and by strictly following such laws as a just and discriminating Legislature may during this week provide.

This is good advice, but will the liquor men heed it? We doubt it, as they are not in the habit of doing business that way.

If the employes of Cooper, Hewitt & Co. accept Mr. Hewitt's proposition to take the Trenton iron mills, rent free, and run them themselves on the co-operative plan, allowing him merely six per cent. on the capital he would advance to them, they may not be much richer at the ends of a year, but they will be much better prepared to discuss the relations of capital and labor. The company lost $50,000 last year, but the hands were paid.

The celerity with which a second marriage follows a divorce in many cases calls out considerable comment. A Maine Judge is credited with the following story. He was holding court at Machis when a man brought him a letter from a woman who had a divorce case pending, asking when her case would come on. The judge, thinking the man appeared anxious, also, said to him, jokingly, "I suppose you are going to marry her ain't you, when she gets her divorce?" "Yes," replied the man, candidly, that's the calculation."

HOW TO BE WELL.

VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS FROM THE PEN OF A LITERARY ATHLETE.

Julian Hawthorne's Opinions Concerning the Care of the Body—Treatment of the Stomach—Keeping the Skin Clean Out Door Air—Breathing.

You can improve your physical health and strength several hundred per cent without ever touching a club or a dumb bell, or pulling a weight. In fact, gymnasiums often endanger health, because of the confined air, and quality, because those who attend them do not know what sort of work is best suited to them and are apt to overplo the work they undertake, thereby distorting themselves and sapping their vitality, an ounce of which is worth a ton of "muscle" in the long run. "Too much" muscle will shorten your life; but vitality is life itself.

The stomach, the skin and the lungs are the three essential things in a human being. So long as they are in perfect order the finest professional gymnast can have little to teach you. To keep them in good condition, no gymnasium or gymnastic apparatus is required; still less any pepsin pills or sarsaparilla. You can do it all yourself, without altering your business or domestic habits, or putting yourself to any inconvenience. Quite the contrary. But it is extraordinary, the ingenuity some people show, when the choice is offered them between two things or courses, one healthy, the other unhealthy, but both equally available or easy—the diabolical certainty I say, with which they fix upon that which is unhealthy. Whatever the metaphysical morals of the bulk of man and womankind may be, their physical morality often seems not far removed from total depravity.

THE NOBLE STOMACH.

Take the stomach first. How many of our average citizens can lay their hands upon the noble organ and swear that a week (I might well say a day) passes in which they do not overload it with pie, pickles and candy? And how many gallons of strong—even green—tea and hot coffee per annum do they drench themselves with? As to mastication, regularity of meals, respect for the digestive processes, and so forth, I say nothing. After we have ceased to stuff ourselves with trash that has no more nourishment in it than sawdust, and is actively injurious into the bargain, we may begin to consider these more elevated subjects. We hear of crusades against alcohol; but I have no sympathy with a pie and candy eating and tea and coffee drinking man or woman, who preaches temperance or abstinence; let them first take the beam out of their own eye. A small quantity of alcohol administered at the right time, may do good; pie and candy and green tea never can. Abstain from such stuff entirely, never drink anything hotter than blood heat. Let your only condiments be salt and mustard, in moderation; eat butter sparingly, and cheese not at all; for breakfast and supper have bread and milk, oatmeal and eggs; for dinner, fresh meat and vegetables, between half a pint of soup and a couple of spoonfuls of light pudding.

AS TO DRINK.

As to drink, if you are thirsty, you can drink water; if the water is bad, take mineral water, with an occasional glass of pure ale or claret. Every five or ten minutes stop and ask yourself whether you have not had enough, and if you think you can get along with what you have eaten, do not take another mouthful. Never try to "tempt" your appetite; on the contrary, ask yourself whether you could, if necessary, make your meal on pure bread and water, and if the answer is in the negative, eat that meal and see how you feel at the next—but never eat between meals. If you are only wholesome things, you could live and thrive on half the present bulk of your food. Starvation is the best cure for dyspepsia; pick me ups only keep it alive. After you have lived on reasonable food for a month or two, you will no longer be troubled with squeamish appetite. If anyway practicable, you ought to have at least half an hour in the open air before sitting down to table, and at any rate wash your face and arms and chest in cool water. But I must leave the stomach here, with a hundred things still to be said about it.

CARE OF THE SKIN.

Now for the skin. Ninety-nine people out of 100 never think about their skin, though the health of all their internal organs depends upon its condition. It is no use washing your face and hands and leaving the rest of your body unpolished. It is little better to stand in front of a basin and spatter yourself from head to foot with water. You must cleanse every part of your skin thoroughly once a day. I am no advocate of discomfort in bathing—cold water in a cold room, and all such nonsense. Have the room warm and the water only a few degrees colder. Stay in the bath five minutes, keeping yourself either under water or pouring wet all the time. But it is after you leave the tub that the really important part of the bath begins. Dry yourself thoroughly with two towels, then take a stiff flesh brush and try with all your might to rub your skin off. A cocoanut fiber brush is the best, and forget at your back, it is a good plan to have a cocoanut fiber mat hung against the wall to rub yourself against. Keep up this friction for at least ten minutes. You could not invest the same amount of time more usefully. There is no such remedy for a feverish habit as this, nothing like it to relieve the internal organs from undue heat and congestion of blood and to free the lungs from oppression. Moreover it actually increases the size of the muscles and makes them firmer by causing the blood to circulate more vigorously in them. As to its effect upon the elasticity and beauty of the skin itself, that will be obvious at a glance.

THE FLESH BRUSH.

It is the brush, not the toilet bottle, that furnishes the only true bloom of youth. But the morning bath and rub down alone are not sufficient. If, during the day, you get into a perspiration, do not allow the moisture to dry on your skin. Never come in from a walk or a horseback ride or a row and sit down as you are—go to your room, take off everything and use the brush. It may seem inconvenient at first, but when it is done you will rejoice and soon it will become a matter of course to you. If your underclothing is damp it is, of course, best to change it, but if the skin has been brushed red you may venture to resume the same clothes with comparative impunity. This friction after exercise is of great importance; so much so that it may be affirmed that three fourths of the benefit of any exercise is lost without it. If you foresee that it will be impossible, after your exercise, to take a rub down, then it will often be better to choose the rub down instead of the exercise.

A SUNDAY BATH.

Once a week—say on Sunday, when you have more time—you should take a bath of a more elaborate kind. Fill the tub in and stay there until you feel almost uncomfortably warm. Then stand up and take a big sponge or a pitcher full of cold water, and deluge yourself again and again from head to foot. This is delicious, there are few things that give so keen a sense of physical wholesomeness and vigor. Dry and rub down as usual, and you will imagine yourself ten years younger. The stimulus to the circulation is enormous. It is one of the best preventives against catching cold. It is an excellent substitute for the Turkish or hot air bath, and takes only a quarter of the time. If you feel a headache coming on, it will often cure it to go to bed, be sure to have the hot water very hot, and apply the cold without stint.

FRESH OUT DOOR AIR.

As regards the things, the more fresh out door air you can get into them the happier and more comfortable you will be. But it is not enough to go out in the open air, you must learn how to breathe when you get there. Most people let year after year go by without once drawing a full breath. The consequence is that the foul air remains at the bottom of their lungs, like bilge water in a ship, and it contaminates the whole system. If you will breathe properly, you may get more benefit from half an hour in your back yard than another person will from a twelve hours' dawdle at the seaside. It is a very simple matter; breathe slowly, and breathe in as much air as you can possibly get into your lungs. When they will hold no more, then emit your breath as slowly and as completely as you took it in. Suppose you are walking at your usual pace along the street, draw in your breath while you are taking seven steps; emit it while you are taking the next seven, and so on. It will make you feel queer at first, but keep at it! After practicing this every time you go out for a week or two, you will be able to breathe in while you are taking eight or ten steps; and later on, even more. Then note the effects.

THE DELICIOUS EFFECTS.

After walking for a quarter of an hour, at a leisurely pace, on a winter's day, you will find yourself warm enough to do without an overcoat. In half an hour you will be in a glow down to the tips of your fingers. In an hour you will feel as if your whole body had been vigorously exercised. And so it has. Take the measurement of your chest after a year of such practice and you will find it has increased in girth a matter of three inches. And your eyes will be brighter, your skin fresher, your stomach stronger, your muscles firmer—because you will have thoroughly aerated and oxygenized your blood. And you will have acquired the habit not only of breathing slowly and deeply while you are out walking or exercising, but of breathing in that manner all the time. And if you are called upon suddenly to escape over a plowed field from a mad bull you will find yourself able to do so without losing your breath—which might, in such a case, be tantamount to losing your life as well. I need scarcely say that all the breathing must be done through the nose, with the mouth shut. That comes hard at first, but it is worth while taking a great deal of pains about.

Observe these rules for a year and you will be twice the man or woman that you are now; and then you may begin to think about gymnastics.—Julian Hawthorne in Home Knowledge.

The Latest in Cameras.

It is the latest form of the detective camera—that which counterfeits a neat little hand sachet in appearance—that is the usual favorite just now, with women as with men. The machine can be had scarcely larger than the usual handkerchief receptacle, the size of the plate it carries being much less of an object than it used to be since the recent perfection of the enlargement processes by permanent bromide prints. For tourists, and in all cases where the baggage is an object, the smaller the plate the better, and the best pictures can afterward be enlarged at home. The detective is focused and sprung on the instant, and is so quick in its action that I have seen a clear picture of the bed of a mountain brook—a much more difficult feat than photographing an object which is itself moving—caught from the window of a train at full speed.—Eliza Putnam Heaton in N. Y. Mail and Express.

The Art of Acting.

The actor ought never to let his part "run away" with him. It is false and ridiculous to think that it is a proof of the highest art for the actor to forget that he is before the public. If you identify yourself with your part to the point of asking yourself as you look at the audience, "What are all these people doing here?"—if you have no more consciousness where you are and what you are doing—you have ceased to be an actor; you are a madman. And a dangerous madman too. Conceive Hamlet leaping clashing the balustrade and seizing the orchestra by the throats, loudly demanding the restoration of his casket! Art is, I repeat, not identification, but representation.—Harper's Magazine.

A Physician's Plan.

Medical and other professional men often break down from their inability to keep a regular time for meals. An eminent doctor says: "Being often out for many hours and becoming too exhausted to digest a full meal when at length able to get it, I conceived a plan which answered admirably well, and which other doctors have gladly adopted. I provided myself with a small bottle of lime water, which I added to a glass of milk when passing a dairy shop, or I put a small flask of the mixture in my pocket. A water biscuit with this will keep a man harmless for a long fast, and will enable him to digest a meal when he can obtain it."—Good Housekeeping.

Game Killed on the Rail.

A veteran engineer of the Erie railroad, in speaking of his experiences said:

"You would be surprised to see the number of small animals and birds killed on railroads. It is surprising to see game which hunters find most difficult to hit meet death under the wheels of the slow times slow-going coal and freight trains. Woodchucks, skunks, snakes, nearly all kinds of squirrels, raccoons, and even the fleet footed rabbits and foxes are frequently run over.

"Telegraph wires are also death traps to winged game. Quail, partridges, wood cocks and smaller birds that are game are often killed when flying against the striking wires."—New York Sun.

Chased by Pirates.

After a midnight lunch on mince pie a South End citizen complained of having horrid dreams, in which he was chased by pirates. "Mince pirates, probably," calmly responded his wife.—Boston Transcript.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truth beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of fronts of enjoyment. We can desire no better if we enjoy perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five percent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick head-ache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

Mendon has placed its saloon bonds at $5,000, and has five places where the liquid can be procured.

AYER'S Sugar-Coated Cathartic PILLS.

If the Liver becomes torpid, if the bowels are constipated, or if the stomach fails to perform its functions properly, use Ayer's Pills. They are invaluable.

For some years I was a victim to Liver Complaint, in consequence of which I suffered from General Debility and Indigestion. A few boxes of Ayer's Pills restored me to perfect health.—W. T. Brightwey, Henderson, W. Va.

For years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than anything else to my bowels. These Pills are mild in action, and do their work thoroughly. I have used them, with good effect, in cases of Rheumatism and Dyspepsia.—G. F. Miller, Attleborough, Mass.

Ayer's Pills cured me of Stomach and Liver troubles, from which I had suffered for years. I consider them the best pills made, and would not be without them.—Morris Gates, Downsville, N. Y.

I was attacked with Bilious Fever, which was followed by Jaundice, and was so dangerously ill that my friends despaired of my recovery. I continued taking Ayer's Pills, and soon regained my customary strength and vigor.—John C. Pattison, Lowell, Nebraska.

Last spring I suffered greatly from a troublesome humor on my side. In spite of every effort to cure this eruption, it increased until the flesh became entirely raw. I was troubled, at the same time, with Indigestion, and distressing pains in

The Bowels.

By the advice of a friend I began taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time I was free from pain, my food digested properly, the sores on my body commenced healing, and, in less than one month, I was cured.—Samuel D. Waite, Atlanta, Ga.

I have long used Ayer's Pills, in my family, and believe them to be the best pills made.—S. C. Darden, Darden, Miss.

My wife and little girl were taken with Dysentery a few days ago, and I at once began giving them small doses of Ayer's Pills, giving I would only a dose of the disease became any worse. In a short time the bloody discharges stopped, all pain went away, and health was restored.—Theodore Leahy, Richmond, Va.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Combines, in a proportion peculiar to itself, the active medicinal properties of the best blood-purifying and strengthening remedies of the vegetable kingdom. It will positively cure—when in the power of medicine—Spring Debility, Headache, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, and all humors caused by a low state of the blood.

"I suffered three years with blood poison. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and think I am cured." MRS. M. J. DAVIS, Brockport, N. Y.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." L. BARRINGTON, 56 Park Street, New York City.

Is so vastly superior to any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier, that one is led to say: "Its health-giving effects on the blood and entire human organism are much more positive than those of a quarter of a century ago, as the power of to-day is in advance of the slow and laborious drudgery of years ago."

"While suffering from a severe attack in March, 1883, a friend of mine, Ill., recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla. I tried the remedy, and was soon cured." J. A. SHEPARD, traveling salesman for Devoe & Co., Fulton Street, N. Y.

Purifies the Blood

"I tried a dozen articles to cleanse my blood, but never found anything that did me any good till I began using Hood's Sarsaparilla." W. H. FARR, Rochester, N. Y.

"My wife was troubled with dizziness and constipation, and her blood has been in a bad order—in fact she has been all run down. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing her a world of good." [illegible] WIX, druggist, Blanchester, Ohio.

"I was for five years a sufferer from boils, all run down, and was obliged to give up work. A few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla entirely cured." R. M. KAY, Pittsburgh.

"I was severely afflicted with boils and for over a year had a running sore on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and [illegible] cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP

OF WILD CHERRY, TAR, GLYCERINE, ETC.

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION

And is the best remedy for the cure of all affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, such as Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Croup, Pain or Oppression of the Chest, Hoarseness, Spitting of Blood, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

WE have the gratifying fact to know that it can be cured with GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP. Obnoxious matter is nothing more than tissue imperfectly organized. Now if we can secure the organization of this food material so that through the process of electric affinity it will take place in the system, we can cure the disease. This is just what this syrup does. It arrests the progress of the disease by preventing the further supply of tuberculous matter, for while it is under its influence all nourishment is organized and assimilated. It thus controls Coughs, Spitting of Blood and all other symptoms of Consumption. Consumption is one of the most loathsome and fatal diseases, and makes the life of the poor consumptive a hell on earth. Until recently that disease has been considered an affection beyond the reach of medicine; but a new era in the management of pulmonary diseases seems to be dawning upon the scientific medical world, and, since many distinguished physicians have acknowledged that consumption can be cured, few there are who attempt to controvert their opinion. To those singled out as victims to that fatal malady, we offer a remedy sure in its effects to bring back health to their poor wasted frames and joy to the hearts of their friends.

Consumptives, because all other things fail, believe not that MEXICAN SYRUP will. Not a sufferer need perish if he or she will take GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP in time. A cough is the other symptom of disease. It stands as sentinel, warning of the approach of a vital organ; we commence at once at the first indication of a cough. TRY IT, you will be convinced. Do you want to be saved from a consumptive's grave? Then make one more effort. The remedy is in the reach of everybody; it only costs fifty cents a bottle. Is your life not worth the trial? Do, make one more trial. Is not your life indeed worth one more trial? Test the truth of our words by only one single bottle; and never give way to despair till you are certain there is no help for you. We plead with you to save yourselves from a premature grave. We positively guarantee a continuous improvement when the medicine is faithfully and persistently used.

The first morning after using it my flesh (I ha... only on the end of my nose) was a pink color. Next day it was a kind of white, and I could place my hands on the sores without it being painful. In about two weeks I could stand straight, but not walk, I was so weak, but my sores were nearly well. Then I commenced the use of Cuticura Resolvent, and in three days I was worse than ever. I was one mass of pimples from the top of my head to the soles of my feet; to say they were painful would not do justice to the case. In from two to four days they burst and left a small scale, which dropped off and left the spot pure and the skin white, and as near as I can judge I was cured in about six to eight weeks, and up to this date, i.e. from January, 1879 to January, 1883, I have not been sick in any way, or have had the least signs of the disease reappearing on me. I have an excellent appetite, have the very best of health. My limbs are straight, supple and strong. I have been exposed to all sorts of weather without the least signs of the disease yet. The only difference I find in myself is that my skin is thicker, softer and not so liable to get chapped as is other persons.

No doubt many persons will not believe this almost improbable story, many will think it grossly exaggerated. I don't blame them a bit if they do, but to satisfy themselves they can call or write to me and find out if what I have written above is true or not. There are many persons who can testify to the wonderful cures I have received by your Cuticura Remedies.

Gentlemen let me again thank you for my cure.

JESS.
By H. RIDER HAGGARD,
Author of "King Solomon's Mines" "She," Etc.

and took no notice of the vinegar. Then, feeling that he had done all that in him lay, he went to see about the ostriches, first of all, [illegible] come out, which she did not. Indeed, he saw nothing more of her till supper time. Bessie told him that she said she was busy packing; but, as one can only take twenty pounds' weight of luggage in a post cart, this did not quite convince him that it was so in fact.

At supper she was, it seemed, even more quiet than she had been at dinner. After it was over, he asked her to sing, but she declined, saying that she had given up singing for the present, and persisting in her statement in spite of the chorus of remonstrance it aroused. The birds only sing while they are mating, and it is, by the way, a curious [illegible] that the saddest of all nature, that [illegible] trouble had overtaken her, and that she had lost her love which had suddenly awoke, in her heart—full grown and [illegible] power as Athena sprang from the head of Jove—had no further inclination to use her divine gift of song. It probably was nothing more than a coincidence, but it was a curious one.

The arrangement was that on the morrow Jess was to be driven in the Cape cart to [illegible] called Wakkerstroom, and there catch the post cart, which was timed to leave the town at mid-day, though when it would leave was quite another matter. Post carts are not particular to a day or so in the Transvaal.

Old Silas Croft was going to drive her with Bessie, who had some shopping to do in Wakkerstroom, as ladies sometimes have; but at the last moment the old man got a premonitory twinge of the rheumatism, to which he was a martyr, and could not go, so, of course, John volunteered, and, though Jess raised some difficulties, Bessie furthered the idea, and to the end his offer was accepted.

Accordingly at 8:30 on a beautiful morning up came the tented cart, with its two massive wheels, stout stinkwood dissel boom, and four spirited young horses, to the head of which the Hottentot Jantje, assisted by the Zulu Moati, clad in the sweet simplicity of a moccoja, a few feathers in his wool, and a horn snuff box stuck through the fleshy part of the ear, hung gravely on. In they got—John first, then Bessie next to him, then Jess. Next Jantje scrambled up, belaped, and after some preliminary backing and plunging, and showing a disposition to twine themselves affectionately round the orange trees, off went the horses at a hand gallop, and away swung the cart after them, in a fashion that would have frightened anybody not accustomed to that mode of progression pretty well out of his wits. As it was, John had as much as he could do to keep the four horses together and to prevent them from bolting, and this alone, to say nothing of the rattling and jolting of the vehicle over the uneven track was sufficient to put a stop to any attempt at conversation.

Wakkerstroom was about eighteen miles from Moolfontein, a distance that they covered well within the two hours. Here the horses were unspanned at the hotel, and John went into the house whence the post cart was to start and looked Jess' seat, and then joined the ladies at the "Kantoor," or store where they were shopping. After the shopping was done they went back to the inn together and had some dinner; by which time the Hottentot driver of the cart began to tune up lustily, but unmelodiously, on a bugle to inform intending passengers that it was time to start. Bessie was out of the room at the moment, and, with the exception of a peculiarly dirty looking coolie waiter, there was nobody about.

"How long are you going to be away, Miss Jess?" asked John.

"Two months, more or less, Capt Niel."

"I am very sorry that you are going," he said, earnestly. "It will be very dull at the farm without you."

"There will be Bessie for you to talk to," she answered, turning her face to the window and affecting to watch the unspanning of the post cart in the yard on which it looked.

"Capt Niel," she said, suddenly.

"Yes?"

"Mind you look after Bessie while I am away. Listen! I am going to tell you something. You know Frank Muller?"

"Yes, I know him, and a very disagreeable fellow he is."

"Well, he threatened Bessie the other day, and he is a man who is quite capable of carrying out a threat. I can't tell you anything more about it, but I want you to promise me to protect Bessie if any occasion for it should arise. I do not know that it will, but it might. Will you promise?"

"Of course I will; I would do a great deal more than that if you asked me to, Jess," he answered, tenderly, for in so that she was go[illegible] away he felt curiously drawn toward her and was anxious to show it.

"Never mind me," she said, with an impatient little movement. "Bessie's sweet enough and lovely enough to be looked after for her own sake, I should think."

"If you do not say any more in earnest Bessie herself, saying that the driver was waiting, and they went out to see her sister off.

"Don't forget your promise," Jess whispered to him, bending down as he helped her into the cart, so low that her lips almost touched him and her breath rested for a second on his cheek like the ghost of a kiss.

In another moment the sisters had embraced each other, tenderly enough, the driver had sounded once more on his awful bugle, and away went the cart at full gallop, leaving each, if Jess, two other passengers and her majesty's mails. John and Bessie stood for a moment watching it and cheering, as it went spanking and tangoing down the straggling street toward the wide plains beyond, and then turned to enter the inn again and prepare for their homeward drive. As they did so, an old Boer named Hans Coetzee with whom John was already slightly acquainted, came up, and, extending a prodigious big and thick hand, bid them "Goeden dag." Hans Coetzee was a very fat middle specimen of the better sort of Boer, and really came more or less up to the ideal picture that is so often drawn of that "simple pastoral people." He was a very large, stout man, with a fine open face and a pair of kindly eyes. John, looking at him, guessed that he could not weigh less than seventeen stone, and he was well within the mark at that.

"How are you, captein?" he said in English, for he could talk English well, "and how do you like the Transvaal?—must not call it South African Republic now, you know, for that's treason," and his eyes twinkled merrily.

"I like it very much, meinheer," said John.

"Ah yes, it's a beautiful veldt, especially about here—no horse sickness, no 'blue tongue,' and a good strong grass for the cattle. And you must find yourself very snug at Oom Uncle Croft's there, it's the nicest place in the district, with the ostriches and all. Not that I hold with ostriches in this veldt; they are well enough in the Old Colony, but they won't breed here—at least, not as they should do. I tried them once and I know, oh, yes, I know."

"Yes, it is a very fine country meinheer. I have been all over the world almost, and I never saw a finer."

"You don't say so, now!" Almighty, what a thing it is to have traveled! Not that I should like to travel myself. I think that the Lord meant us to stop in the place he has made for us. But it is a fine country, and (dropping his voice) I think it is a finer country than it used to be."

"You mean that the veldt has got 'tame,'"

"Nay, nay. I mean that the land is English now," he answered, mysteriously, "and though I dare not say so among my volk, I hope that it will keep English. When I was Republican, I was Republican, and it was good in some ways, the republic. There was so much to play in, and we knew how to manage the black volk; but now I am English, I am English. I know the English government means gold money and safety, and if there isn't a rand assembly now, well, what does it matter? Almighty, how they used to talk there!—clack, clack, clack! Just like an old black koran (species of [illegible]) where did they get the wagon of the republic—Hollanders and Hollanders of his, and the rest of them! Why, into the dust—into a slight with peaty bapks, and there it would have stopped till now, or till the flood came down and swept it away, if old Shepstone—ah, what a tongue that man has, and how fond he is of the kinderchies (little children) had not come and pulled it out again. But look here, captein, the volk round here don't think like that. It's the 'verdomde British gouvernement' they call the 'verdomde British gouvernement' there, and 'bymakaars' (meetings) here and 'bymakaars' there. Silly volk, they all run one after the other like sheep. But there it is, captein, and I tell you there will be fighting before long, and then our people will shoot those poor rooibaatjes (red jackets) of yours like buck and take the land back. Poor things! I could weep when I think of it."

John smiled at this melancholy prognostication, and was about to explain what a poor show all the Boers in the Transvaal would make in front of a few British regiments when he was astonished by a sudden change in his friend's manner. Dropping his enormous paw on to his shoulder, Coetzee broke into a burst of somewhat forced merriment, the cause of which was, though John did not guess it at the moment, that he had just perceived Frank Muller, who was in Wakkerstroom with a wagon load of corn to grind at the mill, standing within five yards, and apparently intensely interested in flipping at the flies with a cowrie made of the tail of a vilderbeeste, but in reality listening to Coetzee's talk with all his ears.

"Ha, ha! 'nef'" (nephew), said old Coetzee to the astonished John, "no wonder you like Moolfontein—there are other mooi (pretty) things there besides the water. How often do you opsit (sit up at night) with Uncle Croft's pretty girl, eh! I'm not quite as blind as an ant bear yet. I saw her blush when you spoke to her just now. I saw her. Well, well, it is a pretty game for a young man, isn't it, 'nef' Frank?" (this was addressed to Muller). "I'll be bound the captein here burns a long candle with pretty Bessie every night—eh, Frank! I hope you ain't jealous, 'nef'?" My vrouw told me some time ago that you were sweet in that direction yourself," and he stopped at last, out of breath, and looked anxiously toward Muller for an answer, while John, who had been somewhat overwhelmed at this flow of bucolic chaff, gave a sigh of relief. As for Muller he behaved in a curious manner. Instead of laughing, as the jolly old Boer had intended that he should, he had, although Coetzee could not see it, been turning blacker and blacker; and now that the flow of language ceased he, with a savage ejaculation which John could not catch, but which he appeared to throw at his (John's) head, turned on his heel and went off toward the court yard of the inn.

"Almighty!" said old Hans, wiping his face with a red cotton pocket handkerchief; "I have put my foot into a big hole. That stink cat Muller heard all that I was saying to you, and I tell you he will save it up and save it up, and one day he will bring it all out to the volk and call me a traitor to the land and ruin me. I know him. He knows how to balance a long stick on his little finger so that the ends keep even. Oh, yes, he can ride two horses at once, and blow hot and blow cold. He is a devil of a man, a devil of a man! And what did he mean by swearing at you like that? Is it about the missie girl? I wonder? Almighty! who can say! Ah! that reminds me—though I'm sure I don't know why it should—the Kaffies tell me that there is a big herd of buck—vilderbeeste and bleshok—on my outlying place about an hour and a half ten miles from Moolfontein. Can you hold a rifle, captein? You look like a bit of a hunter."

"Oh, yes, meinheer," said John, delighted at the prospect of some shooting.

"Ah, I thought so. All you English are sportsmen, though you don't know how to kill buck. Well, now, you take Om Croft's light Scotch cart and two good horses, and come over to my place—not to morrow, for my wife's cousin is coming to see us, and an old cat she is, but rich; she had a [illegible] in gold in the wagon box under her bed—nor the next day, for it is the Lord's day, and one can't shoot creatures on the Lord's day—but Monday, yes, Monday. You be there by 8 o'clock, and you shall see how to kill vilderbeeste. Almighty! now what can that jackal, Frank Muller, have meant! Ah! he is the devil of a man," and, shaking his head ponderously, the jolly old Boer departed, and presently John saw him riding upon a fat little shooting pony that cannot have weighed much more than himself, and that we entered away with him on his fifteen mile journey as though he were but a feather weight.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, listless, and indescribably miserable, both physically and mentally; experience a sense of fullness or bloating after eating, or of "gone-ness" or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nausea, or sick stomach, exhaustion, irritability of temper, low spirits, alternating with chills, sometimes sharp, biting, transient pains here and there, one feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time. If not cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and healing their diseases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has gained great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred diseases.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

CURES ALL HUMORS,

from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, "White Swellings," Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands. Send ten cents in stamps for a large Treatise, with colored plates, on Skin Diseases, or the same address for a Treatise on Scrofulous Affections.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse it by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vigorous strength and bodily health will be established.

CONSUMPTION,

which is Scrofula of the Lungs, is arrested and cured by this remedy, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease. From its marvelous power over this terrible fatal disease when first offering this now world-famed remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "CONSUMPTION CURE," but abandoned that name as too restrictive for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for Consumption, but for all Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Chronic Nasal Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

[illegible]

REV. DR. FAIRFIELD'S LETTER

Hillsdale, Sept. 5th, 1887.

DEAR SIR: You have done me the honor to ask me to express by writing my views on the question of the proposed amendment to the Republican party of Michigan in regard to the liquor business.

And ask this of one who has, as you know, stood identified with that party through all the years and months and days of its entire history, and who has no opinions to conceal. I answer your request with perfect frankness. [illegible] as I see fit for the good of the cause we both love so well.

My opinion is that the Republican party of this state should plant itself [illegible] emphatically and unconditionally upon the ground of prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquor for its use, and that they cannot do it too soon.

Because it is right. The only question is between prohibition and regulation. As to the latter folly and [illegible] attempt to regulate what God's law and experience have long ago declared evil, over and over some years ago undertook to regulate gambling saloons. For a time it seemed to bring in a revenue to the state. But the experiment was a failure. It didn't work well. The great heart of the people revolted at the policy and now gambling is prohibited and [illegible] enforced.

There is no business which can plead in behalf of its legitimacy the [illegible] of the liquor business. It has not left [illegible] a single redeeming feature [illegible] in its contamination. The use of intoxicating drinks to [illegible] health is not only unnecessary, [illegible] pernicious. By the laws of this state it is now required that every [illegible] in our public schools should be taught the [illegible] of no respectable medical authorities that teach otherwise. The drink habit [illegible] to disease, [illegible] to diminish the duration of human life.

The business occasions from three-fourths to three-fourths of the pauperism of the state. Thirty per cent of insanity and idiocy grows out of it. At least three-fourths of the criminal dockets caused by it. And for all this the people are heavily taxed from year to year.

These are facts that nobody can deny. That such a business, which is [illegible], that continually should be protected by law is an anachronism in this Year of Our Lord, 1887.

It has no rights that anybody is bound to respect. Gambling dens are prohibited. Houses of prostitution are under the ban of legal condemnation. Selling the vile literature and the pictures is made a crime. Decent citizens would revolt at the thought of deriving a revenue from any one of these vile sources. Even lotteries are no longer regulated, but utterly prohibited.

And yet, as a waster of property, as a destroyer of life and health, as a corrupter of the public morals, as an incentive to violence, as a prolific cause of crime, the liquor business towers far above them all.

It is simply absurd to talk of dealing with such a business otherwise than by absolute prohibition. The statutes of it are used to protect criminals against such a foe.

And more and more is the open saloon a menace to our free institutions. Government of the people, by the people and for the people is in imminent danger of perishing from the earth. What a travesty on popular government was your late election in Detroit. And scarcely less so in many places. The Republican party has stood for liberty and law. The saloon strikes a deadly blow at both. To [illegible] the traffic everywhere among the whole dive. We [illegible] well to heed it. Righteousness [illegible] exalteth a nation, and righteousness demands the utter suppression of the whole licensed traffic.

It is wise as well as right. Indeed the right thing is always the wise thing. But in a peculiar sense is this the only true policy for the Republican party. It is entirely in harmony with its eventful history. It is not in conflict with any other of the good ends which it proposes to achieve. There is no inspiration for a grand party like that of a high moral purpose. Nothing else so awakens a response in the hearts of the people. There has been no such enthusiasm in the political meetings for the last ten years, as those held this spring in favor of the prohibitory amendment. The Republican party has been the party sworn to stand by the right. The great majority of its members are in favor of prohibition. We have already lost more than 20,000 of our old time Republicans who voted last year with the party. We shall lose 20,000 more unless we take our stand squarely for the suppression of the saloon. We have never had more than a small [illegible] of the [illegible] ported that only 5 out of 100 of saloonkeepers in New York and Brooklyn are Republicans. About the same proportion in the state generally. And by submitting the question we have lost even the few of this class who have hitherto voted with us. The bridges are burned behind us. If only remains to fight it out on the advance line, or die. Colonel, in my judgment we have won our last victory in Michigan [illegible]

By fraud and intimidation in the first and elsewhere we have lost the amendment, but even candid and intelligent men know today that the majority of the qualified voters of the state favored it. But for the storm on election day it would have been carried by a majority of 20,000 even despite the frauds.

The Democratic platforms—national and state—are against prohibition. The "saloon in politics" belongs to the Democratic party and not to us. A small minority of them voted for the amendment. Of the Republicans who voted two thirds voted "yes."

Had but a score of the Republican leaders followed the good example of yourself and Gen. Cutcheon and taken the stump for the amendment it would have prevailed, despite the storm and the frauds. It was a great mistake that they did not. But I believe the present legislature shall do its duty and the Republican state central committee and the next Republican state convention, it is yet in our power to save ourselves and the cause. But we must live as redeeming the time, for the days are evil.

This saloon question is at the front, and no voice of command will send it to the rear. We cannot go back where we were even three months ago. Nearly seven[illegible] voters have put themselves on record, declaring their independence of the domination of the saloon power, and 10,000 more already wish they had. Many eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord. For

"HE has sounded forth the trumpet
That shall never call retreat."

His truth is marching on, and we must march with it, or be trampled beneath the feet of the victor!

DIED.

BOYD.—At his home, in Deerfield, Mich., on Wednesday, May 11th, 1887, Robert Boyd.

Mr. Boyd was born in Donegal, near Clandewater, County Antrim, Ireland, on the 20th of Oct. 1808. When he was [illegible] he came with his father to America, settling in Brooklyn, Onondaga Co., New York. In 1831 he came to Michigan and on Feb. 2nd, 1835, he was married to Miss Sarah Rickard, of Raisin. His home was in Raisin until 1876, when he gave up the care of his farm and came to Tecumseh, where his remaining years were spent. Mr. Boyd was a person of gentle and retiring nature and the character of his religion was in accord with his natural temperament. It was placed and equable, yet it was strong and decided. Soon after coming to Raisin he united with the Presbyterian church. His life was consistent with his professions, and he inspired all who knew him, with his sincerity and his Christian faith. To know him was to feel that the benediction of the [illegible] "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," was his. A few uninspired books he read; but after all his one book was the Bible. He was remarkably familiar with its contents and his life was shaped in accordance with its precepts. In trembling hand was recorded at its beginning the date of his last reading of the volume in course, Oct. 20th, 1886, and the mark at which he left off was in Ezra. His evening readings were in the New Testament, and he left off in Acts. He frequently asked in his sickness, to have the Word Psalm read to him, and would repeat it in low voice along with the reader. He was liberal in his benefactions and charitable in his judgments of others. His place in the sanctuary was always filled, when he was able to be present, and his form was seen and his voice was heard with equal regularity in the weekly prayer meeting. Two years ago his wife, a noble hearted Christian, was called suddenly away. Now they both have left us and are entered into rest.

TOMATOES.

As it is nearly time to plant this excellent vegetable a description of some of the varieties which have proved to be the best may not be out of place. The same kinds will differ from different seedsmen but the same general characteristics will prevail. Canada Victor is the earliest of all. I have had them blossom in May but in some seasons the second ripening is apt to be rough, rendering them unfit for the market or the table. The rot does not seem to affect them. Acme is a smooth, round, purple variety and is a fine tomato for table use, not quite as early as the Canada Victor. It has been some afflicted by the rot for two years. Perfection is a smooth spherical red variety, vine grows stocky and symetrical, it is also somewhat affected by the rot. Favorite is one of the largest of the smooth, red varieties, is but slightly affected by the rot, the stem end is inclined to be green when ripe. Paragon is a variety grown quite extensively by the canning factories and is smooth and large. Has been somewhat affected by the rot of late years. Beauty is all its name indicates—is a smooth, red variety. Mr. A. W. Livingston the originator of the above five varieties, is undoubtedly the tomato man in the United States; he says the new variety has proved the best of all.

Trophy. This is an old variety, and was the best for many years; it grows to a large size, is apt to be green around the stem and also apt to be rough. It is not much affected by the rot. Mikado was grown last year for the first time and is nearly the same shape and size as the Trophy. It is purple and has few seeds; not much affected by the rot.

Tomatoes can be grown as easily as corn with the exception of picking. I have raised at the rate of 600 bushels to the acre, but 400 bushels is considered a good crop. The manure should be well rotted and applied broadcast. As to dressing, wood ashes are also good. They should be planted about four feet each way, or 2700 plants to the acre.

ABNER WILSON.

Walking advertisements for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are the thousands it has cured.

Come to the burial chamber, Death!
Come to the mother, when she feels
For the first time her first-born's breath—

And thou art terrible!

The untimely death which annually carries off thousands of human beings in the prime of youth, is indeed terrible. The first approach of consumption is insidious, and the sufferer himself is the most unconscious of its approach. One of the most alarming symptoms of this dread disease is, in fact, the ineradicable hope, which lurks in the heart of the victim, preventing him from taking timely steps to arrest the malady. That it can be arrested in its earlier stages is beyond question, as there are hundreds of well authenticated cases where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has effected a complete cure.

THE PACIFIC WASHER

Having purchased the sole right of the Pacific Washing Machine for Lenawee Co., we are now prepared to furnish the machine and warrant them for seven years. Notwithstanding 100 residents of this county have seen the machine thoroughly tested and pronounce it the best and only perfect machine they ever saw. It does away with the curse and drudgery of wash day.

ESTATE OF ELIZABETH HOWELL.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 10th day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Elizabeth Howell, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Sabina Fuller, a creditor of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to her or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 23rd day of June next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Welcome Sherman, started last Saturday for Wilburn, Kan., where they expect to make their future home.

John R. Hinley finished and delivered an elegant double carriage last week to Joe Keeney, of Franklin. It is one of the finest rigs ever turned out of his shop.

Mrs. Wm. Smith has been confined to the house for some time, by a severe attack of illness. She is still very seriously sick, but it is hoped not beyond recovery.

President Wood, of Hudson, has issued a proclamation forbidding chickens from ranging at large. But suppose some of the old roosters object the edict, what then?

The following young men from Tecumseh went to Addison last Friday to officiate as pall bearers at James H. Briggs' funeral: C. F. Patterson, B. Waringhouse, Thomas Adamson, M. Silvers, Frank Wallinger and L. Brown.

Tecumseh is trying to enthuse a little on the subject of boring for gas. As a boot and shoe factory, is raising some trouble about the hour of band concerts, and has no lump to entertain any more professional dancers.—Adrian Times.

"Brownville" was left in total darkness last week—except on Friday evening—when the neighbors placed a farm candle on the post and there was light. We hope if it is necessary to experiment with lights, it will not accommodate the remote north end of the village.

MOWERS AND BINDERS.

The celebrated Walter A. Wood harvesting machines have many important improvements this year which make them superior to all competitors. Their new enclosed gear mower is a model of compactness and strength. The gearing is effectually enclosed, keeping out dust and leaving nothing uncovered to catch the lines or expose the driver to danger. This gearing has never been approached in any other mowing machine. The draught of this mower is different from that of any other machine. The whiffletree hook under the pole but behind the pole. They hook to the end of the underdraught rod and the rear end of this rod hitches to the floating frame and where the finger bar is secured to the frame. The draught is straight and simple from the cutting line to the horses. Not a pound is lifted or pulled by the pole.

The bundle carrier attachment to the Wood binder is one of very great utility. It pays the best profit on the cost of almost any implement used on the farm. It saves more than one man's time in carrying bundles to shock and also much over ripe grain is shaken out by dragging the sheaves together to shock them. It throws backward against the machine and dry's wing when dumping. The driver's foot dumps and raises it in by an easy movement. The bundle carrier is used on no other machine.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Hi Henry's minstrel troupe at the Opera House to night.

The Central Hotel at Adrian is now running free busses to all trains.

Loyal Beardsley and wife, of Brooklyn, are visiting friends in Tecumseh this week.

A winter rye of the seventy fifty variety is at hand and is a very creditable number.

The indications are now favorable for a large yield of small fruits this season.

The Jonesville cemetery has been enlarged to meet the requirements of a dead town.

Mrs. Sam B. Metzler and Mrs. Anna Lake have been visiting at Capt. A. D. Lawrence's this week.

George VanTyne, of this village, has obtained a pension. Good for George. Just what he deserves.

Remember the Library Association Benefit to-morrow evening, at the residence of Albert Anderson.

The Kindergarten Society will meet next Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. A. Wright at 2:30 o'clock.

Hi Henry's minstrel troupe is one of the best combinations of that character that has ever visited Tecumseh.

A. W. Mills has been painting over and re-papering his office, and now has one of the neatest office rooms in town.

The young man who wants a livery rig on Sunday now-a-days, will do well to engage it a few days ahead or he may get left.

The quarterly meeting at the M. E. Church last Saturday and Sunday was largely attended and much interest was manifested.

Lavern Wheeler is giving his stereopticon lecture, entitled "A Trip through Europe," at Ionia and other towns in that vicinity.

Committee No. 7, Mrs. O. B. DeWolf, chairman, will hold a social at the chapel parlors of the Baptist church this evening, May 19.

Mr. and Mrs. Harkness will sever their connection with the Raisin Valley Seminary at the close of the present school year, having accepted similar positions at Earlham College.

Will Anderson has a copy of the Cleveland, Tenn., Herald, which shows how that booming southern town is growing. It claims that East Tennessee is the garden spot of the world.

F. H. Steger starts in a few days for a trip to his fatherland. He will go through Germany on his tricycle and will not return until fall. He will doubtless have a pleasant journey.

A good base ball club, a Fair Association, or a natural gas well would boom the town this summer handsomely. Which one shall it be, or all three? Do the business men of Tecumseh tumble?

The Southern Mich. trotting circuit will open the season at Quincy, on the first of June. The races will be held at Quincy, June 1, 2 and 3; at Hillsdale June 8, 9 and 10; at Adrian June 15, 16 and 17.

Fred Deuel has got his new steamboat about finished and expect to launch it on the Globe Pond next Friday to-morrow. He will give a trial on Saturday, and take it to Sand Lake about the first of June.

A few friends of the Rev. J. M. Getchell clubbed together and raised a purse of $35.00 with which they purchased a Quincy Road Cart that has been presented to him. It is a neat and easy riding vehicle and just what he needs for long drives.

A Diary or Pocket Companion for everybody; a useful Note and Account Book containing a Centennial Calendar and also valuable hints for the health and comfort of all. Don't fail to get it. Send a 2-cent stamp to J. H. Zeilin & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

A new time card went into effect on the Jackson Branch last Sunday. The changes are but slight. The passenger trains all pass this station a few minutes earlier than before except the afternoon train going south which goes fifteen minutes later. The exact figures are given in our revised time card.

Believing all men to be honest, the clerks at R. A. Beach's shoe store left three pairs of shoes hanging out after shutting up. A person who needed footgear took the shoes, and Mr. Beach has since kept quiet about the matter, thinking they would be returned. If they are brought back all will be well; if not there will be trouble for the pilferer.—Hudson Post.

A change of time went into effect on the Wabash road last Sunday. By this change, the old Adrian now Butler accommodation leaves Detroit at 4 P. M., and passengers for Tecumseh can reach home at 6:25 P. M. via the M. & O., waiting only 9 minutes at Britton. Going to Detroit they can leave Tecumseh at 9:47 A. M. and arrive in Detroit at 11:45, waiting only 4 minutes at Britton.

Satterthwaite Bros. & Boyd are repainting the interior of their store.

Rev. W. P. Westell of Clinton was in town this morning and favored the Herald with a call.

The Tecumseh base ball club, got badly rattled at Ridgeway. Last Saturday. What is the matter any way.

Dr. R. B. House, was at Lansing Tuesday and Wednesday, attending the session of the State Homoeopathic Medical Society.

The young folks spoke at Mrs. Hayden's last Tuesday evening proved to be a very enjoyable occasion, and there was a goodly gathering in attendance.

E. C. Smith, formerly of Toledo, now of Chicago, paid Tecumseh a flying visit Saturday. Mr. Smith is now acting as the Western agent of the Erie Despatch.

Col. B. F. Wheeler, of the 1st Reg. M. S. T. is to be congratulated upon his appointment of Dr. C. M. Woodward as regimental surgeon. He is peculiarly fitted for that post.

The Lenawee County Sunday School Convention, held a session yesterday at the Baptist Church in Adrain. Several Sunday School workers from Tecumseh, were present at the meeting.

The W. C. T. U. Convention of the 21 Congressional District will be held at Hillsdale from the 24th to the 27th of May, also the State Convention will be held at Port Huron, from the 31st of May til the 3d of June inclusive.

The Tecumseh City band go to Adrian this afternoon with seventeen pieces to play for the Knight's Templar at the Masonic Decoration services. They drive over by private conveyance and will return early in the evening.

The double band concert last Saturday drew a large crowd. The band came out at four o'clock in the afternoon and again at seven and gave a program of over an hours length each time. We understand that they will adopt a similar plan next Saturday.

The Whitney hub, spoke and bending factory, at Hudson, was sold at a commissioner's foreclosure sale, last Monday, the purchaser being Chas F. DeGolyer, of Chicago, and the consideration $2,750. Mrs. W. A. Whitney, of this village, was one of the complainants in the foreclosure suit.

The High School graduating class of the present term consists of eight members. Helena Adams, Ellen Fisher, Ernest Goff, Arthur Hall, Asenath Hosmer, Edna McCline, Ida Rector, Chas. Taylor. The officers of the class are as follows:

President—Arthur Hall.
Vice Pres.—Helena Adams.
Secretary—Ida Rector.
Treasurer—Ellen Fisher.

On the 17th inst. the Holstein Friesian heifer Ruopina 4th, No. 6364 H. F. H. B. owned by A. P. Cockington, at the age of fourteen months and twenty seven days, dropped a heifer calf weighing sixty seven and a half pounds. What do those who through prejudice, own that the Holsteins do not mature early enough, say to that? Can they beat it?

The Township and Village Board of Review will meet at the council room next Monday and Tuesday, May 23 and 24. Persons wishing to examine their assessments will then have an opportunity to do so. The town Board consists of J. D. Small, A. D. Hall and Jehiel Davidson, and the village Board is composed of Jehiel Davidson, B. P. Anderson, Horace Weller and Thos. Kyle.

The lecture last evening at the Baptist Church, given by the Rev. Dr. J. D. Fulton was fairly attended and was a exposition of the aims and purposes of the Pauline Propaganda. It was a very able effort. Owning to a mistake in a telegram received by Mr. Adkins, on Saturday, the notice of the meeting was delayed until Tuesday morning which doubtless interfered seriously with the attendence. Those who attended however were well paid for their trouble.

We clip the following from the Toledo Blade of last Monday.

Isaac D. Smead & Co. were last week awarded contracts to furnish warming and ventilating apparatus for two school buildings in Detroit, one in Kalamazoo, Mich., two in St. Mary's O., two in Rochester, N. Y., and one in Danville, Pa. The fact that Mr. Smead furnished warming and ventilating apparatus for two school buildings in Kalamazoo in 1882 and one in 1884, and is now awarded the fourth, is evidence that the Smead system is giving satisfaction to those who purchase it.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House, May 23d., where he would like to talk on Hay Fever or Asthma to any one who would like to get his views and experiences, having never found one he has not cured in over six years. Consultation costs nothing. The time is soon coming when hay fever will be on. His experience in treating these troubles is wonderful as well as in other chronic difficulties. He simply "gets them well." Go and see him. Piles cured without knife, ligature or pain, and he knows the difference between a bursted blood vessel and inflammation.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

Morenci is having a building boom.

J. L. O'Mealey will orate at Addison on Decoration day.

The Slate Line cheese factory is turning out nine cheese a day.

[illegible] have been taken to organize a business men's association at Morenci.

A telephone line will soon be completed between Adrian and Sand Lake.

The Morenci Baptists will put extensive repairs upon their church this summer.

DeGolyer Post G. A. R. of Hudson will give a grand excursion to Detroit, early in June.

The teachers from the Manchester high school, visited the Tecumseh school last Friday.

The ladies of Hudson are on the war path. They propose to have the liquor law enforced or know the reason why.

The bad boys of Adrian bathe in the mill race in broad day light, in full view of people passing along the highway.

"Is this a free country?" disgustingly asked a stranger here last Thursday. He had tried all the saloon doors and found them securely locked.—Morenci Observer.

A majority of the members of the Congregational church and society at Hudson have voted against retaining Rev. Woodmansee as their pastor another year, and will again seek temporary supply for their pulpit. Mr. Woodmansee has served that church only a year, and The Gazette thinks that such an action does an earnest, good man great injustice.

The gas field of Indiana, so far as it has been developed, is confined to an area of sixty miles long from east to west and twenty wide from north to south. The strongest wells seem to be in the western half of this area. The northern line stretches from Kokomo, on the west, to Portland on the east, and the southern from Noblesville to Winchester. The greatest flow of gas is found in Noblesville and Anderson, with magnificent wells at the intervening points of Fairmount and Jonesboro. Within the area mentioned there are now thirty wells in operation.

"Uncle Sam Carpenter," of Lyons, sent the President one of his hickory canes and received the following reply:

EXECUTIVE Mansion,
Washington, April 21.

SAMUEL J. CARPENTER, Esq.—
MY DEAR SIR: I have just received to-day the cane which you kindly sent me, and which I understand has been made and finished for me by you after the burden of years and infirmities have prevented you from more active work. I assure you the gift is received with pleasure, not alone for its own value, but as a token of kindly feeling and consideration on the part of an old citizen and a veteran in the cause of Democracy.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

John Fuller, the Riverfield pension agent and general hustler, was visitor here Monday and interviewed by an Observer reporter anent natural gas matters, in which his town is now much interested. "Our company will soon be ready to contract for the immediate boring of three wells. We have leased over 4,000 acres of land, whereon to locate any and all possibly prospective holes. We are very sanguine of successful operations, as natural gas has already issued in not slight quantities from ordinary wells that have been dug at our village. Why don't you organize such a company here?" Morenci is right within the proper belt, geologically speaking, and would stand as good a chance of getting gas as other places.—Morenci Observer.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The board of inspection, appointed by the state Superintendent to inspect Raisin Valley Seminary, visited that institution on Tuesday, May 9th. Prof. Haynes, of Hillsdale college, arrived the afternoon before, and visited the industrial home. In the evening he lectured at the seminary upon the "Mineral Resources of Michigan." His interesting and instructive talk was appreciated by his audience. The speaker illustrated his lecture with specimens which he had himself secured from the mines.

Tuesday morning two members of the board were present, Rev. C. S. Lester, of the class of '79, and Prof. Haynes; before noon Hon. J. K. Boies arrived. Classes were visited the entire day, and the regular routine work of school inspected. After school closed in the afternoon, Mr. Boies gave a short address to the students, which was received with close attention by all. The committee then made out their report, which was forwarded at once to the state superintendent of public instruction.

In the evening a visit was made to the observatory. The committee expressed themselves highly pleased with the interest manifested by students and teachers, the methods of instruction, and the kind of work accomplished.—Adrian Times.

REV. W. H. BABBITT'S FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

The Pastor of the Presbyterian church delivered the 5th anniversary sermon of his connection with that Church, to a full house last Sunday morning, taking for his text, Psalm 80 14. "Return we beseech thee O God of Hosts: look down from heaven, and behold and visit this vine." He first gave the statistics of Church and Sabbath-school. The attending membership was 270. Additions during the year, 18. Amount of contributions to benevolent [illegible] congregational expenses, $1,270. Enrolled members of the Sabbath school, 200. Members of Sunday-school attending church service, 140. The congregation was commended for its liberality and the Pastor expressed his gratification that so many of the children, even of the little ones, were brought to the Sunday service, and that whole families were present and seated together. Allusion was made to the share which the church had taken in the recent temperance campaign, and the opinion expressed that the time was not far distant when what was sought in that campaign would be obtained. The ladies of the church were commended for their efforts in promoting the social feeling and the spirit of unity and harmony that prevailed. The restraining influence exerted by the church against wickedness and the aid it afforded many in development of a Christian character were declared to be ample justification for all the labor and expense involved in maintaining it. At the same time the regret was expressed that more conversions were not brought about by its agency. The ideal of the church, it was confessed had not been attained and the members were exhorted to a more faithful performance of duty toward those without. The sermon closed with a reference to those who within 12 months had passed away. Six members of the church, it was stated, had been removed by death and others who were associated with the congregation. These persons ranged in age, from the infant of days to the patriarch of more than four score years. Among them was the oldest pioneer of the place, Mr. Ezra F. Blood. This church was founded 60 years ago and has had a succession of 15 ministers. Its former place of worship is now the steam mill in the rear of the East Branch School.

LIBRARY BENEFIT.

The Library Association have arranged for another of their parlor entertainments which will be held tomorrow Friday evening at the residence of Albert Anderson. The exercises will be wholly of a musical character, and the program will be one of unusual excellence. Admission tickets are placed at fifteen cents each or two for twenty five cents. We shall expect to see Mr. Anderson's parlors crowded to-morrow evening.

C. A. Backmaran and wife, of Ann Arbor, were guests of S. P. Hosmer yesterday.

The Farmer's Club picnic will take place at Sand Lake June 16th.

Inspector General Newberry made his official inspection of Co. C last Tuesday evening. He found everything in fine order and expressed himself highly pleased with the condition of the property and the proficiency of the men. He promised the boys some new uniforms before long.

M. P. Brown was in Detroit Tuesday and yesterday attending the State Prohibition Convention.

There is a state law against killing any kind of game on Sunday and the farmers complain that the principal violators of it in this county are reckless young men and boys who in their failure to bring down game, shoot at targets on farm buildings, fences, and even pepper farm stock with fine shot.—Jackson Citizen.

Only one Clinton saloonist has procured his bonds and yet the work on the factory keeps right along, just the same.

We regret to learn that Rev. Chas. S. Dutton is about to leave Macon. Bro. Dutton has been doing excellent pastoral work during his residence there, and it will be difficult to fill his place. The good wishes of the HERALD will accompany him, wherever his lot may be cast.

DECORATION DAY.

To arrange for the proper observance of Decoration Day, Monday May 30, the regular committee appointed by Beers Post asks the co-operation of all persons who can assist either by furnishing flowers or helping to make wreaths &c. The following committees have been appointed:

"The most wonderful sight I ever saw was such a Milwaukee Binder with one horse on a team."

SOUTH LYONS, Mich.,
Thursday, July 15th, 1886.

At a field trial of self-binders in the farm of Geo. Gibson, in Plymouth township July 13th, 1886, between the Deering and Milwaukee Jr., was hotly contested by both machines. The Milwaukee agents gave the farmers a treat by putting on a patent trucks and running their machine with a four-year-old horse, and cut three inches wider than the Deering. The Milwaukee was represented by G. M. & W. J. Alford, of South Lyons, who sold their machine on the spot to Mr. Gibson.

The above was taken from the weekly Excelsior. Agents of other machines desiring to compete with the above machine will make themselves known to G. C. Pockington, agent, Tecumseh, Mich.

A CONFESSOR'S STORY.

[illegible] trembling voice betrayed [illegible] heart. "Be not afraid. [illegible] "Woe is me! [illegible] misery [illegible] innocence [illegible] shadowing abroad [illegible]

[illegible]

"Mrs. Farmer, I think it only right to tell you, who have always been so good to me, that Ful—I mean Mr. Fulcher Neville—has proposed to me, and I have told him that [illegible]

"You promised Gideon Grasper a year or so ago," I whispered.

"Mrs. Farmer, you are unkind—rude." I told Mr. Neville that if he held to his opinion in three months, I would become engaged to him—if I didn't change my mind," she added with a [illegible]

"Miss Kate, excuse me, I am an elderly woman—leastways, a married woman and a mother. Take my advice—don't lead him on too far. Do make up your mind. Remember Grasper, he is almost desperate."

"Let him be wholly desperate, then," she replied airily. "Am I not to amuse myself at all, Mr. Grasper, indeed?"

"He is a determined man, miss," I ventured.

"So am I a determined woman, Lucy—if I may call you so—I defy Gideon Grasper and all his works. I shall do as I please!"

After awhile we reached our destination, and to this day I am not certain whether the place was in the Tyrol or Switzerland. I say "was"—not is—for not a vestige of the village remains to tell the tale which I know to be so true. Zweibergthal was the place, and there are two mountains, one on each side of it, fine, rugged, snow clad, fir fringed mountains, much bigger than our country's hills, but not so green and rounded.

We found Miss Katie's relations living on a what they call a pension, though the family are well off, too, and what the "pension" is for I can't say. Mr and Miss Neville also came to the same boarding house, and I need hardly tell you that they were falling fast into love. It was as plain as possible. He was a pleasant, well spoken gentleman, and Miss Kate was as charming, and, I must say, as careless as ever.

One day she and I had ascended a little way up one of the Zweibergs—I can't tell their real names: something about a "stock." We had climbed up, alone, for a wonder, and while I was resting, Miss Katie went on a little farther. She had been gone some time when I heard a scream above me, and looking up saw her running down, pursued by a strange man, who, as he came nearer, I perceived was Gideon Grasper.

He was excited and angry. He yelled at her to halt, but she only ran the faster, passing me without stopping. Gideon saw me in his way, and halted as I held out my arm to check him. He was glaring like a wild beast, the [illegible] mad, I believe.

"She shall never be his—never!" he screamed. "If I have to move the mountains to fall on her she shall die!"

Then he turned away toward the snow, which lay thickly above us, glinting in the hot sun.

Hot, indeed! It was beautifully warm, and to think of so much heat near so much snow was wonderful. I said as much to the man at the "pension," who spoke some English.

"Yes," said he, "it is hot, a great deal too hot for the time of year. We don't like it."

"Why do," said I, and off I walked, thinking he was something odd in his manner.

I found Miss Katie all of a tremble, and [illegible] and thought, when, three days afterward, he asked us to a little picnic to a small hut on the side of the mountain, where there was a lovely view of a lake and a fine waterfall, she gladly assented, and did all she could to make up a pleasant party.

I was to go, and Mr and Miss Neville, Miss Katie's cousins, too, and two German guides. A guide and a porter were engaged to show the way and to help any one who wanted help, and to carry the baskets. It was a lovely, bright, warm morning, perfectly still, not a breath of air stirring, only the hum of insects or the sound of a cow bell could be heard, and, as we passed, the roar of a cataract from the [illegible] above.

The guide and porter walked in front [illegible] Mr Neville and Miss Katie, and I followed on him [illegible] Miss Katie, and I could see him [illegible] Grasper [illegible] Mr. Neville [illegible] Miss Katie [illegible] Grasper [illegible] Mr. Neville [illegible] Grasper [illegible] Mr. Neville [illegible] Grasper [illegible] Mr. Neville

Jackson, May 25, 1886.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen.—For ten years I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia and neuralgia. About twelve years ago my kidneys and liver became diseased, my system became badly deranged, my stomach became weak, and I was attacked with the worst form of dyspepsia, which lasted nutliquite recently. About the same time dyspepsia took firm hold of me neuralgia set in, sometimes attacking me in the temples, then in the back of my neck and shoulders, then in my stomach. The suffering and pain which I have endured last twelve years is more than I can describe. I have taken nearly every medicine I could learn of, hear of, have employed the most skillful physicians. Dr. Siebou, one of the learned and ablest doctors in our city, lives on Main street, doctored me for a long time, and can testify as to the severity of my disease. I never succeeded in getting a nypermanent relief until I had used Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. I have gained ten pounds of flesh in seven weeks. The sallowness which so disfigured my complexion has caused me years of sorrow has been entirely removed, and my general health is better thanit has been for fifteen years. The severityof the neuralgia pains had caused a contraction of the muscles, or nerves, on the right side of my face to such an extent as to partly close my right eye, which my syrup has entirely cured. My sight and eye are r stored to their natural state. I most cheerfully recommend it to any afflicted in like manner as for general debility.

Very respectfully,
Mrs. A. D. Noble,
Cor. Mechanic and Mason Streets.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

Constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, with the unparalleled demand with which it stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most careful are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attended with inflammation.

Never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin, invigorate the circulation of the blood, and thus establish a healthy condition of the human frame; expelling all morbid forms of disease. It penetrates every part of the human frame; reaches the bone, muscle, nerve and ligament in its healing influence. Hence it copes readily with deep-seated as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This ointment has been used by the people of the United States, and our confidence in it is such that, as we have no space for any of the numerous certificates of which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If one in a hundred would do this we should be entirely satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each package.

Sold by all druggists at 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Electric Lights in Japan.

There has been visiting the city for a [illegible] who has recently returned from the Asiatic empires, where he went to introduce the electric light, and he says that the readiness with which the Orientals adopt these improvements is quite astonishing. In Japan most of the principal cities are now lighted by [illegible] and many of the finest houses are illuminated in the same way. A large plant has recently been placed in the palace of the mikado at Tokio, a very large building, or rather a cluster of buildings connected by corridors and covering several acres. The Chinese do not take hold of these improvements so rapidly as the Japs, but are beginning to see their advantages. The Coreans are ready to adopt all modern ideas, particularly if they come from the United States. The palace of the king of Corea has a plant of 300 lights, and was first illuminated on the birthday of the king's mother-in-law on the 20th of February, with great ceremony. The palace is at Seoul, and consists of a series of long, low, wooden buildings, with a thatched roof. As no foreigner is allowed to look upon the features of the king or queen, the workmen took great risks when they were putting in the apparatus, for if they had even by accident seen the face of the king they would have been put to death, according to the custom of the country. They were carried into the palace and through the corridors in palanquins, and trumpeters were sent ahead of them so that the royal family might keep out of their way.—Chicago Herald.

Getting Mad Over Trifles.

It takes so little to make a man mad. Like a dog in a crowd, somebody treads inadvertently upon his toes and he yelps in great paroxysms. He cannot locate the aggressor, so he includes the crowd, as teachers do when they keep a whole class in after school because Tommy Traddles whispered. A man will endure great physical pain, horrible mental anxiety, bankruptcy, desertion and the brush of death's battle ax, but will howl like a lunatic and swear like a trooper over an unruly collar button, or an innocent old hen he is trying to chase through an open barn door. A woman will trot around all day with a twenty pound pug dog in her arms, sit through a Bernhardt matinee with a high hat in front of her, walk ten miles on a shopping expedition and preserve her amiability, but will whip her child cruelly because it has spilled her eau de cologne or lost her thimble. A man is placid of his muscle, and will stand up and be buffeted by a boxer and pummeled into a human poultice by an antagonist and call it sport, but if his baby boy runs against him and jogs his coffee cup, or a passer by on the street jostles him, he is mad enough to set Constantinople on fire.—Amber in Chicago Journal.

Plans for Siberian Convicts.

In a report prepared for the ministerial commission, which is now considering the project of gradually diverting the transportation of Russian convicts from Siberia to the island of Saghalien and certain districts in the Trans-Caucasian and Central Asia frontier provinces, the inspection of the Tiumen Atchinsk route to Siberia states during the decade of 1876-86 218,578 prisoners passed along that highway. Of this number no less than 2,867 died on the way and 101,266 were sent from Atchinsk to the most remote eastern settlements. The report furnishes no record of the presumably larger number who perished on the latter part of the journey. It is also silent as to the cause of the 2,867 deaths between Tiumen and Atchinsk. The fact cannot, however, be disguised that the horrible hardships and sufferings under which so large a number of these unfortunate exiles sink on the way are a standing blot on the penal legislation of Russia.—Cleveland Leader.

Extinct Craters in New Mexico.

The reported volcanic eruption in Arizona makes a recent conversation with ex-Senator Dorsey, of New Mexico, of timely interest. In talking about the mountain ranges the senator said: "There are evidences clear and distinct throughout New Mexico and Arizona of numerous volcanic eruptions in the past. On the plateaus the signs are not so distinct as they are in tracing the formation down the sides of the mountains. The plateaus have become fertile and the evidences of volcanic eruptions have been destroyed, but you can trace the lava as it flowed down the mountain sides, and at the bottom, where it cooled and has formed into rock, the signs are very clear. There are scores of these extinct craters within a few miles of my ranch, and they are dotted all over the mountains in this section."—New York Tribune.

The Low Voiced Barber.

There are talkative barbers, but they soon find their level in five cent shops, where the barber is always several cuts above his customers. The average barber I have found to be a cool, collected person, soft of hand and foot, low in voice and chary of speech. Of course he will talk if you will, but you have only to keep your mouth shut and close your eyes and he will shave you in deathly silence. Yet he is very entertaining, providing you don't tempt him on finance, politics or any other subject of which he knows nothing. Get him to talk about himself and he can talk readily and well.—Philadelphia Call.

Steam Heat in Railway Cars.

The Engineering News, in the course of an able article on the substitution of steam heat for stove heat in railway cars, shows that no more than 2 1-2 to 3 1-2 per cent. of the locomotive's supply of steam is required for heating the average train. It adds that this quantity can be obtained without reducing the load, increasing the heat surface, decreasing the speed, or decreasing the loss by radiation. It is only necessary to push the fires a little when the locomotive is on a level or down a grade and to use steam that can be spared while the train is resting at stations.—Chicago Times.

Students and the Sponge Bath.

If the student is in fair health and desires to remain so during the school course, would decidedly recommend him to take the sponge bath before retiring. If he is vigorous, cold is better than tepid water for this purpose. It will help to neutralize the effect of severe study on the brain, and induce healthful sleep. The scalp should be brushed well before retiring in the night and the face and hands well washed with soap and water.—Herald of Health.

Janitors' Families.

Janitors' families are quite a feature of Gotham's population. Living in sky flats they are enabled to enjoy quiet lives and a society of their own, which are privileges quite unknown to their more aristocratic neighbors. Nearly every building is inhabited by one of these families.—Chicago Times.

Citizens ❋ of ❋ Tecumseh!

MOCKETT, OF TOLEDO, SPEAKS:

CITIZENS OF TECUMSEH: There are, no doubt, many of you in need of Clothing, Furnishing Goods, and Hats and Caps. To you who have been in the habit of buying these goods at home, we wish to call your attention to the fact that you can save fully 25 per cent., perhaps more, by buying when you come to Toledo to see the game. We think we can show you goods and prices that will not be in your interest, as well as sure, to come to Toledo to buy your outfit. Many of you will probably say to yourselves this is only an advertisement. We admit it, but nevertheless it contains nothing but the simple truth. Would you ask us why we can sell so much lower than the dealer in your own town? We will tell you.

BECAUSE We buy in much larger quantities than small dealers can, and buying in large quantities we get the benefit of the very lowest quotations, this benefit we divide with our customers. A fair profit we make, but we do not think it right to make as much as those who buy only a single garment.

BECAUSE All our purchases being made for cash, we get the benefit of a cash discount of from seven to ten per cent. This discount we also share with our customers. This is an item country dealers cannot get because they do not do enough business to warrant it.

BECAUSE We visit the Eastern markets regularly every three or four months, and being right there on the spot many opportunities are offered to buy large lots at a sacrifice. These opportunities are never offered to country dealers, because they have no facilities in small towns to sell large stocks.

ANOTHER REASON Why we can benefit you if you trade with us is—you have a stock and variety from which to make your selections fully ten or twenty times as large as you can find at home. This certainly gives you a better chance of getting WELL PLEASED IF NOTHING MORE.

ANOTHER REASON Is, the stock we show you is newer and fresher, in a store like ours, than you can find at home. Our goods sell rapidly. We do a prosperous, thriving business, and a house like ours is receiving new goods every week, while in a small house they often carry stock for years. You run no chance of buying old shop worn goods when you buy from us.

SATISFY YOURSELVES of the advantage you receive by buying from us. Buy a round trip ticket and come and see us. We can save you money and do ourselves good at the same time. We ask you to take the trouble to examine our stock and learn our prices. WE KNOW IT IS TO YOUR INTEREST TO DO SO.

IN ORDER that every customer buying from us shall be thoroughly satisfied with his purchase we offer to do this: If after trying your goods and inspecting them at home, you have any cause to feel dissatisfied with your bargain, we will either exchange your goods or refund your money within 30 days after the purchase. We want to get your trade and feel satisfied if you try us once you will come again.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Deputy sheriff Trachout was in town last Monday.

We judge good cider is made, as one was relieved of $50 from a bureau drawer, one night last week. It is said the tineaters of the house were tugged, and that the doors were not locked.

W. V. Fisk and Mrs. H. Doty started for Idd. last Monday, to attend to some business matters of Mrs. H's.

Several parties near the village are shearing their sheep this week.

S. H. Linn, of Union City, was the guest of Nelson Gardner and family, the first of the week.

Quite a number of Clinton's people took in the races and other sights at Tecumseh, last Saturday.

Chas. Burroughs and Frank Lancaster seem quite at home in their new quarters.

We hear it mentioned that Len. Kimball is to occupy a position in the woolen mill. We hope such is the case, and that he may remain with us.

The refreshing showers of late, have gladdened the hearts of despondents and brightened the appearance of the crops.

Mrs. Sarah Morgan and Mrs. Emma Morgan, of Macon, visited Mrs. H. P. Downs and sister, Mrs. Adam Ritze, of Eaton Rapids, at Mrs. D's home one day last week.

M. B. House and family spent a few days with relatives at Vineyard Lake near Brooklyn, last week.

Mrs. Chas. Wing died very suddenly, last Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Emmit Allen, who was very low, a few weeks ago, is now about again.

J. C. Burroughs was called to Cogo, Tuesday, to attend the suit of the horse-thief that was captured on his bird, came very near escaping from the village lock up during his confinement here. By the aid of a slat from the bed he had succeeded in removing all the bars but one from it, when officer Burroughs returned and detected the intention.

George Morden went to Ackron, O., last Monday, to transfer the remains of Deacon Scofield to this Cemetery. He expected to return with them the last of the week. Patrick Murphy performs the duties of sexton during his absence.

Alice Wimple, of Tecumseh, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Norman Watson, last Sunday.

Mrs. Mark Russell and children spent the Sabbath at H. P. Downs'.

Grace M. Spafford, of Ann Arbor, spent a few days with her Clinton friends the first of the week.

Will. Millspaugh, Ed. Coffin and F. M. McClure were down to Tecumseh last Friday evening to attend the meeting of Roots Post G. A. R., the latter uniting therewith on that evening.

The tearing up of the bridge on Jackson street, preparatory to building the new stone bridge, has made quite a lively thoroughfare of Conant street.

Decoration day is to be observed, the exercises to take place in the afternoon. The fact that D. M. Bainbridge is chairman of the committee, and J. D. Shull is officer of the day, is sufficient guarantee for the success of the undertaking. We were unable to obtain the program, but would have been glad to have given it in full.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The showers make everything look fresh.

Wm. Riggs is improving the outward appearance of his house with a fresh coat of paint.

Decoration day next Monday, and the day will be observed here by the usual custom.

Mrs. Louis Miller went to Homer, Saturday, and spent the Sabbath with her son, Fred Miller and family, returning Monday.

Thomas Allison, Jr., who has been in Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana, and Pennsylvania for the past two years, returned Saturday looking hearty.

The cemetery fence is receiving a new coat of paint. Some of those owning lots have been improving them of late.

Mrs. Emeline Rankin visited her sister, Miss S. A. VanVleet, Saturday.

Israel Thornton of Perrysburg, O., is with the Pocklington Bros. again. They are doing some mason work for Lafe Gregory, at present.

Ella Hall arrived from Brooklyn, N. Y., Saturday evening, to spend several weeks with her mother and family.

Mrs. W. B. Aspinwall Tuesday for Ann Arbor, Mich.

The next meeting of the W. F. T. will be held with Mrs. Wm. Pilbeam, next Tuesday afternoon. A full attendance of the members is desired. Several of miscellaneous were drawn as surveyed by Commissioner Harris, to appraise the damages of laying out a road in the village of Britton Tuesday.

Elmer Hause is spending a few days with relatives in the vicinity and village, at present.

F. B. Wood of Tecumseh, was in the village Tuesday, on business.

Mrs. G. P. Waring and Belle Barlow went to Hillsdale Tuesday, as delegates to attend the second district convention of the W. C. T. U. that convenes there this week.

A. R. Arner, our sign artist, has been painting several signs for Britton parties. He has a splendid sign completed for H. Pocklington, meat market.

The game of ball between the Deerfield club and the club here last Friday was another walkaway. Our club held them down to three scores, until the catcher, Joe Wiggin's hands gave out, and then the Deerfield boys run in a few. The score stood 8 to 27 in favor of the Ridgeway club. They expect to play the return game Decoration day at Deerfield.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. Morgan, who has been very sick at her daughters, Mrs. W. H. Crittenden, is slowly improving.

Addie Crittenden spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents.

Ralph Mills who had his leg broken a few weeks ago, is doing as well as can be expected.

The young people of this place gave Lewis Collar a surprise last Saturday. A good time is reported.

S. L. Traverse went to Petersburg, Monday, to attend the funeral of his sister.

Perry Kroll of Flint, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Sarah Highhall.

FRANKLIN'S CYCLONE

FRANKLIN, May 22, 87.

A violent storm of wind, rain and hail passed over here last Saturday. Although the air had been excessively close and hot all day, and for several days, and it had been thundering all the afternoon, there was nothing in the appearance of the clouds to indicate that anything so very unusual was about to happen. About 4 o'clock P. M., a gentle rain began to fall, which in a few moments became one of the most terrific storms ever witnessed here: the wind rose to a fearful velocity, while the rain and hail came down in great deluges; it did not fall in drops but seemed as if great streams of water were poured down.

The territory actually damaged by the storm was a very limited one. At Tipton only a gentle refreshing shower of rain fell. It did not extend over one and a half miles north of the south pike, and perhaps about the same distance south of it.

G. W. Allen lost one of his big grey work horses struck dead in the pasture field by lightning. Martin Whelan lost a valuable cow, also killed by lightning. We understand that Hannibal Osborne's house was struck by the same subtle element. Several forest trees were also hit. We understand that about one fourth of B. Hurry's woods is leveled to the ground. Geo. Poucher, Mr. Luce, Wm. Fisher, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Baley also had a large number of trees swept down; some of them fell across the M. & O. R. R. track and on to the telegraph wires and poles. In the orchards trees are blown down, limbs are broken and the ground beneath strewn with fallen fruit, cherries, peaches, apples, etc. In some cases small fruit is entirely destroyed, even to the vines and canes. Flowers, gardens and even weeds and grass, especially clover were beaten, bruised and broken. Wheat appears to be very much injured, some pieces of course much more than others. It is estimated by some to be injured one-half; oats and peas were also pounded down flat and badly cut to pieces. In the corn fields the awful force and amount of the rainfall is clearly demonstrated in the washing out and gulleying of all rolling lands. Some of the corn is washed out and some deeply buried in places the deposit is more than six inches, and perhaps there are deeper ones than this. At Mrs. A. B. Wisner's the wind laid flat a corn-crib and tore a number of roof boards from the barn; also demolished Joseph Herbison's wood-shed. A good many young chicks were destroyed; the dryest chicken-coop seemed to afford no shelter, for the water was everywhere, seeming to penetrate every crack and crevice in doors or [illegible] and the stock were free to roam around and take care of themselves without let or hindrance. The whirling motion of the storm is clearly shown by the fact that fence rails were thrown in opposite directions at different points. We have observed that at different places they have been [illegible]

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN

Allen Wells and wife are moving in to the house formerly occupied by Elmer Wells.

Fred Bunting has been a little under the weather for a few days.

Mrs. Pawson entertained friends from Cambridge the first of the week.

Watson Hunt is expected home soon. By the way when your correspondent speaks of a friend's "tony suit" and the types transform it into a "long" one it suggests the disagreeable necessity of a writing master.

Mrs. Elia Pulver of St. Louis, Gratiot Co., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Rodman Taylor.

Saturday's rain was greatly needed but came with such violence as to damage crops to some extent. Wind and lightning got in their work also. One of Washington Allen's horses was struck and killed by lightning while Mrs. A. B. Wisner and Mart Whelan lost each a cow by the same agency and we hear of timber torn up by wind.

The Boy has done it. Watson Hunt got home from the west last night with his Iowa bride. Much joy. Watson.

ONSTED ODDS.

J. Hunt is building a barn for Thos. Curtis of Rome.

The names on the saloon bond this year are Peter Desermia and O. S. Burcham.

Frank Miller of Mount Morris N. Y. was here Saturday and Sunday.

Frank Skinner raised a new barn on Saturday last. David Corwin does the carpenter work.

Mrs. Eliza Howard and son of Tecumseh were visiting friends here Saturday.

Decoration will be observed here Monday, May 30th, at one o'clock P. M. S. P. Hosmer of Tecumseh is expected to be present and assist in the exercises.

One small fish was the reward of one man and three boys afternoon sport on Saturday last. We will not call names for we may go fishing ourself sometime.

John Onsted sold his four year old horse for two hundred dollars. He immediately went in pursuit of another and brought home a fine six year old.

We wonder what has become of the party who found a pair of gold-bowed glasses near the Onsted church last winter. The party waited six weeks, and then wrote an anonymous letter to Rev. John Morey requesting a notice in the TECUMSEH HERALD. Such a notice was inserted in the Onsted Odds, but as yet the finder of the Specs remains anonymous and the owner has never received his glasses. Should the finder notice this we would be pleased to open a correspondence with him or her as the case may be.

Cream and Cold Weather.

What a luxury is a bath in summer Surely, but a greater luxury is clear head in winter, just when almost everybody is sneezing and snuffing with a cold in the head. But when you are attacked use Ely's Cream Balm. It cures colds in the head, and what is better, it cures the worst cases of chronic catarrh and hay fever. Not a liquid, not a snuff. Pleasant to use. Quick relief. Radical cure.

Mat Root was home on a short visit last Sunday and Monday.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The Best Salve in the world for cuts, Bruises, Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains Corns and all Skin Eruptions, and postively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. FOR SALE BY C. A. Wright & Co.

The proceedings of the last meeting of the Northern Lenawee Farmers' Club are crowded out this week, but they will appear in our next issue.

HE HAD SALT RHEUM FOR 20 YEARS

A. Manvel, Ass't Supt. & P. Agt., C., R. I., & P. R. R. writes: "For Twenty years I have been afflicetd with Salt Rheum in a most serious form. During the winter season, my hands have been in such condition that I was unable to dress or undress myself without assistance, and I have not had gloves or bandages off my hands for about 'four months,' until I begun using Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure. I certainly think it has cured my hands." Large bottles $1,00.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

THE RED SEA.—EXODUS XIV. 19-31. Notes.—This lesson does not involve a discussion of the route of the exodus. For current discussion of Biblical Research of this week by President Bartlett and by Mr. Gillett and Dr. H. C. Trumbull, April 27th and 28th, in the New York Independent also The Sunday School Times on this lesson. Suffice it to say that the Children of Israel had probably moved to the Southern part of the Isthmus of Suez, and were by the western arm of the Red Sea. A fortified wall across the isthmus was in the way of their passage by land and the sea was before them. "Pillar of cloud."—The angel of God resided in the fire and cloud. The cloud was extensive; not like a small pillar, but like an extensive smoke or fog. —"East wind."—Or northeast. A tide may have acted with the wind in driving out the water. God uses natural agents in a miracle. —"A wall."—We are not to look upon this as a narrow passage, as it might be painted with a wall of water standing perpendicular on each side, but a very broad stretch of sea left dry by the receding water. On the south it would be a barrier, and on the north if the basin was deeper there, the water would be left, so that no soldiers could attack them from that quarter, so that the Egyptians could follow them, but not surround them. —"All Pharaoh's horses." All that were pursuing not all in Egypt. It is not here said that Pharaoh himself was drowned, though in a psalm it seems to be implied. "In this morning watch."—After two o'clock. It must have taken several hours for all the public to go over. "Took off their chariot wheels."—Not miraculously, perhaps, but by the sand or stones of the rough ground. "The Lord fighteth for them."—For the Lord read Jehovah. The Egyptians noted that the Hebrew God Jehovah is helping his people against our gods. The whole story is of a miracle, and everything was to Israel viewed merely natural. The thick cloud which shut off from the Egyptians the view of the Israelites was of a natural sort; so was the wind which drew the water away with the falling tide, and so was the return of the water to drown the Egyptians. But no one can doubt the miracle, as the events were planned for and happened so opportunely.

INSTRUCTION.—The soul in trouble can trust God to defend as well as lead. The pillar led when that was necessary, and followed when the enemy was in the rear. God gives his help where needed.

Moses had a mighty Father in God. He had led the people where they seemed caught in a trap. But he believed God, and obeyed God, sure that God could be trusted. To do right is safe, even if it looks as if it were suicidal. It is safe to do right if one does for it.

The powers of Nature are in God's hand. What Nature does God does. We have a right to regard all its favorable action as God's doing for us, and to look for providences.

Whether God is light or cloud to any one depends on his relation to God. The same manifestation in the pillar was light to the Hebrews, and was darkness to the Egyptians. So now he is mercy and forgiveness and goodness to the repentant, and he is judgment and punishment for the wicked.

Man's extremity may be God's opportunity. When the Hebrews were utterly hedged in, and without hope, the sea opened before them. In our troubles we may, with the utmost trust, look to God.

The days when men might think that God cared only for a particular nation have ended. He is God of the ends of the earth. He cares for us, but he cares equally for the most ignorant and humble. He is not a God of classes but of all. So religion is a democratic agency lifting all to the same level.

A power that overlooks God, as the Egyptians did when they pursued the Israelites, makes a great mistake. God's laws and agency are always the largest factor.

If one who sees the providence of God does not believe in him then he is foolish beyond measure. The Israelites believed in God and his servant Moses. God has done everything for us, and our people. Let us serve him and trust him.

Live always in the thought of God as a wall on either side of you, and a protecting pillar before and behind you. That is what God's laws are to one who obeys them. That is what God is to the soul that trusts him.

A DENTAL COLLEGE.

MALE FEEDED DENTISTS PRACTICING ON THEIR PATIENTS.

Scenes in the Operating Room—In the Operating Chair—Manufacture of Plates and Teeth—The Museum—Students from Everywhere.

[illegible] persons should suspect that behind those walls are concealed something like 300 human beings, the majority of them young men, engaged in mastering the technicalities of [illegible] with the preservation and extraction of molars, bicuspids, incisors, canines and all the other things in the [illegible] Is it not a dreadful thought? Two hundred and fifty men about to be turned loose upon the inhabitants of this city to establish 250 dental rooms, to smile blandly upon 250 patients who come timidly in, clinging on to their lives, to pop them into 250 chairs and say "Open your mouth—a little wider, please." Then silence for a moment. Then 250 shrieks to rend the air, followed presently by an equal number of long drawn sighs, expressive of immeasurable relief. It almost takes away one's breath to think of it.

Observing several persons entering with that uncertain gait and troubled expression of countenance which mark the dentist's prey, a reporter, backed up by an intrepid artist, ventured into this place the other day to see what was to be seen. Armed with an accident policy for one day, and with note books and pencils carefully concealed, they ascended a flight of stairs and entered a long, narrow room containing about a dozen chairs of a kind but too familiar to need description. They were occupied by twelve unfortunates, mostly females, in various stages of uneasiness. There wasn't cheerfulness enough, if blown over all their countenances put together to make up one single sickly defeated candidate the day after election smile. But there was enough cheerfulness on the faces of the operators, as well as on those of the other students who were visible, to rather more than overbalance the gloom that otherwise characterized the proceedings.

By pure good fortune the artist recognized a friend in a six foot student, who was watching a young man run a buzz saw between the teeth of a neatly dressed and rather attractive young lady. He consented to act the part of cicerone, and under his guidance and protection the swain made the tour of the premises, beginning with the extracting room. That is they began with it after a while, but not quite immediately, for on trying the door it proved to be locked, and various hollow groans and muffled cries from beyond conveyed but too plainly to the listeners the fact that some student was adding to his information as to the ratio between his dexter arm and some decayed premaxillary grinder. When the student had concluded his operations the door was opened. About a dozen students were gathered around the operating chair, and a young woman in a state of collapse was departing. The students seemed to be having a little discussion as to whose turn it was to have the next "crack," and waved various dreadful looking instruments of torture about them in an alarmingly careless manner.

Leaving this ensanguined field, the exploring party ventured next into the third story. Here was another large room, with more chairs and more unfortunates. All the chairs were full and the students were working away for dear life. The professors took at the patient's teeth before the student begins to operate and after he has completed his work. If it is satisfactory, he receives a mark in accordance with the excellence of his work. If it is not great, he has to take it out and do it over again. This, the reporter was informed, did not very often happen, but when it did it was apt to engender ill feeling between the operator and operatee. Adjoining this was a large room devoted to the manufacture of plates and sets of teeth. In one corner of the room was a furnace about as hot as a crematory in full blast. The student led the unhappy visitors directly to this and planted them within six inches of it, while he gave them all the details he could think of concerning the institution.

The professor afterward took the visitors in charge and showed them the museum, containing among other things casts of the heads of persons upon whom remarkable dental and surgical operations had been performed by the faculty of this institute. There was the case, for instance, of a young man whom they called "Tommy," who, through some amorous affection, had bit his entire nose and all his teeth. As shown by the cast, he must have been a hideous object to gaze upon. The middle finger of his mother was bound down upon his face while she operated and left there until a shapely shade. When union had taken place the finger was cut off at the first joint, and the man had a very tolerable looking nose at the expense of a finger.

The professor was interrogated as to the nationality of the students. He replied that they came from all parts of the world, and ranged in age from 17 upwards. There was among them even one man from Greece. He was a middle aged quiet looking Mohammedan, and the professor said was very conscientious and careful in his work. The operations carried on daily from 9 to 12. Every afternoon there are lectures from 2:30 until 5 o'clock. The course takes two years, and about three out of four, on an average, escape being "plucked" and sent back for another year. Each student works three days filling teeth, two days making plates and one day at extracting. This, with the lectures and subsequent copying of his notes and reading text books, fills out his week very thoroughly. The course embraces, besides instruction in dentistry a complete course of anatomy and the science of medicine. Except in the single branch of surgery, the course embraces everything that is taught in the College of Physicians and Surgeons. One would naturally suppose that the institute would be patronized almost exclusively by the poorer classes, but this, the professor stated, was not the case. Many persons who were abundantly able to pay the highest prices came here for the reason, he presumed, that they were sure of getting honest work.

All the students carry about with them little diagrams which look like a small stockade fort erected for protection against the Indians. But it is intended to represent all the teeth in the human head, first and second sets. Every patient receives one of these pictures, with the tooth or teeth to be operated on marked on it by the professor, and the student works with this as a guide. He cannot touch a tooth that is not marked on this chart.—New York World.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Deputy Sheriff Teachout was in town last Monday.

We understand Sylvanus Howell was relieved of $500 from a bureau drawer, one night last week. It is said the inmates of the house were drugged, and that the doors were not locked.

W. V. Fisk and Mrs. H. Doty started for Ind. last Monday, to attend to some business matters of Mrs. H's.

Several parties near the village are shearing their sheep this week.

S. H. Linn, of Union City, was the guest of Nelson Gardner and family, the first of the week.

Quite a number of Clinton's people took in the circus and other sights at Tecumseh, last Saturday.

Chas. Burroughs and Frank Lancaster seem quite at home in their new quarters.

We hear it mentioned that Len. Kimball is to occupy a position in the woolen mill. We hope such is the case, and that he may remain with us.

The refreshing showers of late, have gladdened the hearts of despondents and brightened the appearance of the crops.

Mrs. Sarah Morgan and Mrs. Emma Morgan, of Macon, visited Mrs. H. P. Downs and sister, Mrs. Adam Ritze, of Eaton Rapids, at Mr. D's home, one day last week.

M. B. House and family spent a few days with relatives at Vineyard Lake, near Brooklyn, last week.

Mrs. Chas. Wing died very suddenly, last Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Emmit Allen, who was very low, a few weeks ago, is now about again.

J. C. Burroughs was called to Ohio, Tuesday, to attend the suit of the horse-thief that was captured by him near Norvell, a few days ago. The bird came very near escaping from the village lock up during his confinement here. By the aid of a slat from the bed he had succeeded in removing all the bars but one from the door, when officer Burroughs returned and detected the intention.

George Marden went to Ackron, O., last Monday, to transfer the remains of Deacon Scofield to this Cemetery. He expected to return, with them, the last of the week. Patrick Murphy performs the duties of sexton during his absence.

Alice Wimple, of Tecumseh, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Norman Watson, last Sunday.

Mrs. Mark Russell and children, spent the Sabbath at H. P. Downs'.

Grace M. Spafford, of Ann Arbor, spent a few days with her Clinton friends the first of the week.

Will. Millspaugh, Ed. Coffin and F. M. McClure were down to Tecumseh last Friday evening to attend the meeting of Beers Post G. A. R., the latter uniting therewith on that evening.

The tearing up of the bridge on Jackson street, preparatory to building the new stone bridge, has made quite a lively thoroughfare of Coman street.

Decoration day is to be observed, the exercises to take place in the afternoon. The fact that D. M. Bainbridge is chairman of the committee, and J. D. Shull is officer of the day, is sufficient guarantee for the success of the undertaking. We were unable to obtain the program, but would have been glad to have given it in full.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The showers make everything look fresh.

Wm. Riggs is improving the outward appearance of his house with a fresh coat of paint.

Decoration day next Monday, and the day will be observed here by the usual custom.

Mrs. Louis Miller went to Homer, Saturday, and spent the Sabbath with her son, Fred Miller and family, returning Monday.

Thomas Allison, Jr., who has been in Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana, and Pennsylvania for the past two years, returned Saturday looking hearty.

The cemetery fence is receiving a new coat of paint. Some of those owning lots have been improving them of late.

Mrs. Emeline Rankin visited her sister, Miss S. A. VanVleet, Saturday.

Israel Thornton of Perrysburg, O., is with the Pocklington Bros. again. They are doing some mason work for Lafe Gregory, at present.

Ella Hall arrived from Brooklyn, N. Y., Saturday evening, to spend several weeks with her mother and family.

Mrs. W. H. Armor left Tuesday for Perry, where she will visit her mother.

The next meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at Mrs. Wm. Pilbeam's the last Tuesday afternoon. A full attendance of the members is desired.

Our grievous were drawn as jurymen by Commissioner Harris, to appraise the damages of laying out a road in the village of Britton Tuesday.

Elmer Hause is spending a few days with relatives in the vicinity and village, at present.

F. B. Wood of Tecumseh, was in the village Tuesday, on business.

Mrs. G. P. Waring and Belle Barlow went to Hillsdale Tuesday, as delegates to attend the second district convention of the W. C. T. U. that convenes there this week.

A. B. Armor, our sign artist, has been painting several signs for Britton parties. He has a splendid sign completed for H. Pocklington, meat market.

The game of ball between the Deerfield club and the club here last Friday was another walkaway. Our club held them down to three scores, until the catcher, Joe Wiggin's hands gave out, and then the Deerfield boys run in a few. The score stood 8 to 27 in favor of the Ridgeway club. They expect to play the return game Decoration day at Deerfield.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. Morgan, who has been very sick, at her daughters, Mrs. W. H. Crittenden, is slowly improving.

Addie Crittenden spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents.

Rolph Mills, who had his leg broken a few weeks ago, is doing as well as can be expected.

The young people of this place gave Lewis Coller a surprise last Saturday. A good time is reported.

S. L. Traverse went to Petersburg, Monday, to attend the funeral of his sister.

Perry Kroll of Flint, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Sarah Lighthall.

FRANKLIN'S CYCLONE.

FRANKLIN, May 23, '87.

A violent storm of wind, rain and hail passed over here last Saturday. Although the air had been excessively close and hot all day, and for several days, and it had been thundering all the afternoon, there was nothing in the appearance of the clouds to indicate that anything so very unusual was about to happen. About 4 o'clock P. M., a gentle rain began to fall, which in a few moments became one of the most terrific storms ever witnessed here; the wind rose to a fearful velocity, while the rain and hail came down in great deluges: it did not fall in drops but seemed as if great streams of water were poured down.

The territory actually damaged by the storm was a very limited one. At Tipton only a gentle refreshing shower of rain fell. It did not extend over one and a half miles north of the south pike, and perhaps about the same distance south of it.

G. W. Allen lost one of his big grey work horses struck dead in the pasture field by lightning. Martin Whelan lost a valuable cow, also killed by lightning. We understand that Hannibal Osborne's house was struck by the same subtle element. Several forest trees were also hit. We understand that about one fourth of B. Hurry's woods is leveled to the ground. Geo. Poucher, Mr. Luce, Wm. Fisher, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Baley also had a large number of trees swept down; some of them fell across the M. & O. R. R. track and on to the telegraph wires and poles. In the orchards trees are blown down, limbs are broken and the ground beneath strewn with fallen fruit, cherries, peaches, apples, etc. In some cases small fruit is entirely destroyed, even to the vines and canes. Flowers, gardens and even weeds and grass, especially clover were beaten, bruised and broken. Wheat appears to be very much injured, some pieces of course much more than others. It is estimated by some to be injured one-half; oats and peas were also pounded down flat and badly cut to pieces. In the corn fields the awful force and amount of the rainfall is clearly demonstrated in the washing out and gulleying of all rolling lands. Some of the corn is washed out and some deeply buried; in places the deposit is more than six inches, and perhaps there are deeper ones than this. At Mrs. A. B. Wisner's the wind laid flat a corn-crib and tore a number of roof boards from the barn; also demolished Joseph Herbison's wood-shed. A good many young chicks were destroyed; the dryest chicken-coop seemed to afford no shelter, for the water was everywhere, seeming to penetrate every crack and crevice in house or ground, and hay stack were tree tops to Mich.

The force of the storm is clearly proven by the fact that fence rails were thrown in opposite directions at that at different places they have been thrown north, south, east and west.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN

Allen Wells and wife are moving into the house formerly occupied by Elmer Wells.

Fred Bunting has been a little under the weather for a few days.

Mrs. Pawson entertained friends from Cambridge the first of the week.

Watson Hunt is expected home soon. By the way when your correspondent speaks of a friend's "tony suit" and the types transform it into a "long" one it suggests the disagreeable necessity of a writing master.

Mrs. Ella Pulver of St. Louis, Gratriot Co., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Rodman Taylor.

Saturday's rain was greatly needed but came with such violence as to damage crops to some extent. Wind and lightning got in their work also. One of Washington Allen's horses was struck and killed by lightning while Mrs. A. B. Wisner and Mart Whelan lost each a cow by the same agency and we hear of timber torn up by wind.

The Boy has done it. Watson Hunt got home from the west last night with his Iowa bride. Much joy, Watson.

ONSTED ODDS.

J. Hand is building a barn for Thos. Curtis of Rome.

The names on the saloon bond, this year, are Peter Desernia and O. S. Burcham.

Frank Miller of Mount Morris N. Y. was here Saturday and Sunday.

Frank Skinner raised a new barn on Saturday last. David Corwin does the carpenter work.

Mrs. Eliza Howard and son of Tecumseh were visiting friends here Saturday.

Decoration will be observed here Monday, May 30th, at one o'clock P. M. S. P. Hosmer of Tecumseh is expected to be present and assist in the exercises.

One small fish was the reward of one man and three boys afternoon sport on Saturday last. We will not call names for we may go fishing ourself sometime.

John Onsted sold his four year old horse for two hundred dollars. He immediately went in pursuit of another and brought home a fine six year old.

We wonder what has become of the party who found a pair of gold-bowed glasses near the Onsted church last winter. The party waited six weeks, and then wrote an anonymous letter to Rev. John Morey requesting a notice in the TECUMSEH HERALD. Said, a notice was inserted in the Onsted Odds, but as yet the finder of the Specs remains anonymous and the owner has never received his glasses. Should the finder notice this we would be pleased to open a correspondence with him or her as the case may be.

Cream and Cold Weather.

What a luxury is a bath in summer Surely, but a greater luxury is clear head in winter; just when almost everybody is sneezing and snuffing with a cold in the head. But when you are attacked use Ely's Cream Balm. It cures colds in the head, and what is better, it cures the worst cases of chronic crtarrh and hay fever. Not a liquid, not a snuff. Pleasant to use. Quick relief. Radical cure.

Mat Root was home on a short visit last Sunday and Monday.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The Best Salve in the world for cuts, Bruises, Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains Corns, and all skin Eruptions, and postively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box FOR SALE BY C. A. Wright & Co.

The proceedings of the last meeting of the Northern Lenawee Farmers' Club are crowded out this week, but they will appear in our next issue.

HE HAD SALT RHEUM FOR 20 YEARS

A. Manvel, Ass't Supt. & P. Agt., C., R. I., & P. R. R. writes: "For Twenty years I have been afflicted with Salt Rheum in a most serious form. During the winter season, my hands have been in such condition that I was unable to dress or undress myself without assistance, and I have not had gloves or bandages off my hands for about 'four months,' until I begun using Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure. I certainly think it has cured my hands." Large bottles $1,00.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

THE RED SEA.—EXOD. XIV. 19-31. NOTES. This lesson does not require a discussion of the route of the exodus. For current discussion of points in dispute see an article on Biblical Research of this week by President Bartlett, and by Mr. Gillette and Dr. H. C. Trumbull, April 14th and 28th, in the New York Independent, also The Sunday School Times on this lesson. Suffice it to say that the Children of Israel had probably moved to the Southern part of the Isthmus of Suez, and were by the western arm of the Red Sea. A fortified wall across the isthmus was in the way of their passage by land, and the sea was before them. "Pillar of cloud."—The angel of God resided in the fire and cloud. The cloud was extensive; not like a small pillar, but like an extensive smoke or fog. "East wind."—Or northeast. A tide may have acted with the wind in driving out the water. God uses natural agents in a miracle. "A wall."—We are not to look upon this as a narrow passage, as it might be painted with a wall of water standing perpendicular on each side, but a very broad stretch of sea left dry by the receding water. On the south it would be a barrier, and on the north if the basin was deeper there, the water would be left, so that no soldiers could attack them from that quarter, so that the Egyptians could follow them, but not surround them. "All Pharaoh's horses."—All that were pursuing; not all in Egypt. It is not here said that Pharaoh himself was drowned, though in a psalm it seems to be implied. "In the morning watch."—After two o'clock. It must have taken several hours for all the public to go over. "Took off their chariot wheels."—Not miraculously, perhaps, but by the sand or stones of the rough ground. "The Lord fighteth for them."—For "the Lord" read Jehovah. The Egyptians meant that the Hebrew God Jehovah is helping his people against our gods. The whole story is of a miracle, and yet everything was to human view, merely natural. The thick cloud which shut off from the Egyptians the view of the Israelites was of a natural sort; so was the wind which blew the water away with the falling tide; and so was the return of the water to drown the Egyptians. But no one can doubt the miracle, as the events were planned for and happened so opportunely.

INSTRUCTION.—The soul in trouble can trust God to defend as well as to lead. The pillar led when that was necessary, and followed when the enemy was in the rear. God gives his help where needed.

Moses had mighty Father in God. He had led the people where they seemed caught in a trap. But he believed God, and obeyed God, sure that God could be trusted. To do right is safe, even if it looks as if it were suicidal. It is safe to do right if one dies for it.

The powers of Nature are in God's hand. What Nature does, God does. We have a right to regard all its favorable action as God's doing for us, and to look for providences.

Whether God is light or cloud to any one depends on his relation to God. The same manifestation in the pillar was light to the Hebrews and was darkness to the Egyptians. So now he is mercy and forgiveness and goodness to the repentant, and he is judgment and punishment to the wicked.

Man's extremity may be God's opportunity. When the Hebrews were utterly hemmed in, and without hope, the sea opened before them. In our troubles we may, with the utmost trust, look to God.

The days when men might think that God cared only for a particular nation have ended. He is God of the ends of the earth. He cares for us but he cares equally for the most ignorant and humble. He is not a God of classes but of all. So religion is a democratic agency lifting all to the same level.

A power that overlooks God, as the Egyptians did when they pursued the Israelites, makes a great mistake. God's laws and agency are always the largest factor.

If one who sees the providence of God does not believe in him then he is foolish beyond measure. The Israelites believed in God and his servant Moses. God has done everything for us and our people. Let us serve him and trust him.

Live always in the thought of God as a wall on either side of you, and a protecting pillar before and behind you. That is what God's laws are to one who obeys them. That is what God is to the soul that trusts him.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1889.

Is the Detroit club hanging after the flags. It looks that way now.

The Detroit club is getting to be absolutely "sassy." They cleaned out the Washington "blues" week by a score of 14 to 3.

Amid the fires in the upper peninsula and battling of the Detroit ball club, the people are anxious to know what has become of the Coldwater investigation.

While Ex-Senator Jones was wasting his time courting Miss Palm in Detroit a young women of Florida will beat him to the race and married a real live congressman in Mr. Jones' own state.

Any statement of the Treasury business of late for all the issues of the three different points and has now got to the end of his rope. The necessity for lowering the surplus is every day becoming more imperative.

What were the Homeopathic Convention winding up this afternoon, and the Congregational Ministerial and the Congregational Ministerial Convention beginning this evening, it is a little difficult to keep pills and purgatory from getting mixed. But it is all right; the minister always begins as soon as the doctor gives it up.—Lansing Republican.

The Prohibition Council held last week at Detroit after listening to considerable speaking and reading of letters, made a permanent organization, and adopted a platform, which declared that the organization shall be called the Citizens' Union, and its object prohibition through constitutional amendment, supporting only candidates for the Legislature pledged thereto.

A young man in Lincoln, Placer co., California, is optically constructed on the owl plan. He can see nothing in the day time, but in the dark he can see the owl, see quickly, and very distinctly. He can see in the darkest places without any trouble. He should be brought to Michigan and given a place at the Coldwater state school.—Adrian Press.

Miss Mary Harding, the young girl with whom John Howard Payne fell deeply in love while he was at Rome, Ga., to witness the signing of a treaty with the Cherokees, and who refused to marry him solely because of her father's objections, was buried at Athens, in that state, on Sunday. The original copy of "Home, Sweet Home," which she had offered to sell a dozen or more times, was placed in the coffin with her.

The death of Ex-Senator Charles E. Stuart of Kalamazoo removes one of the historic figures of Michigan. He was for many years the leading lawyer in the western part of the state, and was the last Democratic Senator from Michigan, going out in March 1855. He was, in his prime, the most brilliant orator and advocate in Michigan and a man of fine personal presence.

"Poor pin-head Dakin" says the Muskegon News, "was promptly and disparaging investigated by his virtuous compeers and ousted from his seat but the coldwater school—which happens to be a republican institution and consequently deemed something more sacred than a labor member of the legislature—is allowed to rest under the grave charge of flagrant mismanagement, official corruption and wanton immorality and a republican majority does not raise so much as its little finger to remove this stain upon a great public institution and purge it of its uncleanliness.

The following from the Lansing Republican sounds rather queerly for an anti-prohibition paper. But perhaps the Republican has been converted since the election.

"If any saloon-keeper has not paid up his liquor taxes, his place ought to be summarily closed up; and if it is not, a good many voters will remember, next election, whoever is to blame for letting it be kept open. Public opinion does not believe in granting special favors to this class, such as are not granted to any other taxpayers, and public opinion is getting pretty earnest on this subject."

Two great enemies—Hood's Sarsaparilla and impure blood. The latter is utterly defeated by the peculiar medicine.

RARE AND BEAUTIFUL.

CHAT WITH A RECENTLY RETURNED TRAVELER.

Gathering the Weird and Eccentric Developments of the Floral Kingdom. Life Among Savages—Beginning of a Place for Orchids.

It was my good fortune to meet in Mr. [illegible] one of the most noted discoverers and dealers in these weird and eccentric developments of the floral kingdom, Mr. Frederic Man, who has just returned from his annual trip to South America in quest of orchids, botanical specimens, [illegible] and the growing plants for the New York and Brooklyn markets as well as for those of London, Paris and Berlin. Fifty thousand plants of this importation are in Mr. Bergman's rooms. Some half dozen men were busily opening the cranks in which the plants were stowed, while others had already set and there in the greenhouses, on the benches, and cultivated by the hours. Some original birds brought by the men were in orchids, seemed to have found a fitting home in such surroundings. Mr. Man talking of his methods of work I found the letter in this direction than to report some portions of it, in answer to the queries propounded by his curious visitors on the occasion, and as nearly as possible in his own language.

"You see," said he, "I have been roaming South America for some ten or twelve years on a purpose to obtain orchids from the forests of Brazil, the United States of Columbia and Venezuela. I have my own servants, guides, etc., who are ready to meet me on arrival. We travel from [illegible] interior, perhaps [illegible] operations. Of course I take an [illegible] but learned pretty few mixture of languages spoken in the country."

"Is it so?"

"Are you afraid of snakes?"

"Yes, my guides and myself are well armed. The foes we have most to fear are the reptiles and insects."

"And how do you defend yourself against them?"

"We travel by foot and on mule-back when we can, and [illegible] through almost impenetrable forests. But at night we have one rule for shelter and protection. Three fires are made and our hut placed in the triangular space between them. There are many tigers in the Brazilian forests, and as for snakes—well, I could spend hours telling you of them. I brought home the skin of one thirty feet long. Here on my thumb is the scar of a reptile."

"Don't tell us more of the snakes," said Mr. Man's audience.

"No, no, it is of the orchids you want to know. Well, orchids are parasites. They grow on rocks and trees and are fed by the moisture in the atmosphere, although there are orchids that grow in the earth. They are found in all countries, and the rarest and most beautiful are the parasites. The natives of South America are very fond of them, cultivate them around their dwellings and call them fleur de santos, the flower of health. Sometimes a gigantic flower is seen on the top of a forest tree, which is only obtainable by cutting down the tree; sometimes they are found near the summits of mountains 10,000 or 12,000 feet high, as some species grow where it is cold and near the snows, and others where the heat is constant and almost overpowering."

"How do you transport these gathings? [illegible]"

"At times the natives carry them, but usually we gather back to some sea port, and to freight it is much costly, as the wooden crates in which they are packed must be so arranged as to give the plants air."

BEGINNING OF A CRAZE.

"Are many orchids so sold on this country?" asked [illegible]

"Only very lately has the beginning of a craze for them in the United States, but as yet not at all in comparison to that which exists in England, France and Germany. It is being [illegible] fashionable flower here as well as there for evening [illegible], for wedding parties, for brides' bouquets, etc."

"Are these flowers very expensive?"

"Decidedly. A small home out of three may be sent $50. Its fashioned [illegible] wealthy people will give almost any price for a new orchid."

"How long have they been known there?"

"About 130 years, perhaps a little more, when some adventurous Indian sent some specimens home that sea captains brought them from South America, the South Sea Islands, Mexico, Porto Rico and elsewhere. The English people liked them and gradually they have grown into great favor till the mania for them resembles the craze that once existed in Europe for the black tulips. Agents are sent everywhere that orchids are indigenous for new varieties. I have myself discovered seventeen new varieties. Baron Sinoder, who resides near London, has the finest collection in the world, the Duke of Marlborough has many very rare ones and so has Baron Rothschild. It was in Boston that orchids first found favor in this country. Mr. Jay Gould has a special collection in his greenhouses near Irvington on the Hudson. Mr. Cornell, of Albany, has the most extensive collection this side of the ocean and Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt is beginning to purchase them for his place in Newport."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Mark Twain's Scholarly Attainments.

People who know Samuel L. Clemens only as Mark Twain, the humorist have no idea of the scholarly attainments of the man. Reading his book of travel one gets only the impression of a newspaper man. A brilliant and witty one, it is true, but with the shallow flippancy, the irreverence that is the characteristic of many journalists who hold few things sacred and would sacrifice most things to point a funny paragraph.

Dora Wheeler, who has painted the portraits of most of the literary men and women of to-day, painted Twain's not long ago, and said of him that she had never had among all her literary sitters one more thoughtful, learned and scholarly. He would pass like a flash from the maddest and most irreverent waggery to a grave discussion of abstruse thought, and his favorite poet was—mirabile dictu—Robert Browning. If one can picture anything apparently more at the antipodes of thought than Twain's trenchant, obvious, aggressive humor and the subtle, introspective, involved processes of Browning's mind, they may be able to comprehend how far one is from knowing a man solely by his published works.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Boys have a period of mischief as much as they have measles or chicken pox.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Hot and Cold Weather Cigars.

"Have a hot or cold weather cigar?" asked the dealer. Being curious I asked

"Probably you don't know that some men change the brand of the cigars which they smoke all winter for a different one as the spring or summer advances. No? Well, I'm glad I've told a newspaper man something new. I could mention a dozen [illegible] cigars in hot weather and strong ones in cold. Some men think that a strong weed has a depleting effect in the dog days, and I guess they regulate their cigarettes and more popular in summer than in winter. Never a smoke doesn't [illegible] smoke a cigarette when the thermometer [illegible] Perhaps, and more especially in Havanas, smokers are fastidious. They want their cigars just so, and unless a dealer is particular he stands a good chance of losing touch on them. Most of this trade is done by the box, although I get quite a transient trade."—Detroit Free Press.

How Modern Hymns Are Written.

Know that man. It's William H. Doane and he makes $20,000 a year writing hymns or rather that's the royalty he gets. He is engaged with Fay & Co., but in his leisure moments he hunts around and finds a touching bit of poetry and he weeds it into a hymn. Oh, it's a paying business, beats any kind of writing I ever heard of but it's not everybody that can catch on to that sort of a style. It's harder than writing variety songs or even Ledger stories or detective varns of blood and thunder romances. You see, a man must have some of the divine afflatus mixed with a good deal of jelly in order to be a success as an hymnologist.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Plug Hat Boycotted.

The San Francisco Examiner calls upon all adult male citizens to boycott the plug hat and to indulge in the use of hair oil. "Mind ye," it says, "as we sometimes laugh in our sleeves at the vanity of using hair oil, yet the experience of the African Nubians, who consume all the grease they can get on their woolly heads, would seem to favor the practice in preference to water, which most generally contains more or less matter that is injurious to the hair. There is no baldness among the Nubians, whose hair is greased stiff all the time, beside living in the scorching sun."

One Use for Salt Brine.

Salt brine is used in Sheffield, England, for hardening steel, says an exchange. The mixture improves with age and use, and to such an extent that its value is largely increased. In some cases these tanks are fifty years old, and have a value in proportion to their age. It appears that the constant dipping of the hot metal into the same solution alters in some way its character.—Boston Budget.

In Zanzibar's Recherche Circles.

In the most recherche circles of Zanzibar the ladies wear gold dollars on rings inserted in their noses, and the more gold dollars a woman wears the more exclusive she considers herself. A woman who can string twenty five or thirty gold dollars on her nose ring is acknowledged to be an aristocrat from away back, and can snub her less favored sisters with impunity.—New York Tribune.

A colored man who is 105 years old, and who once blacked Washington's shoes, was discovered the other day in Nashville, Tenn.

An End to Bone Scraping

Edward Shepard, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well."

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box at

In Chronic diseases, medicines should be restoring, and not debilitating, in their action. The wonderful strengthening and curative effects, realized from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, sustain the reputation of this remedy as the most popular blood purifier.

Branch County will pay $4,250 for additional ground upon which to erect its new court house.

All Men are not Rab.

Neither are all prepared remedies unreliable. This is proven by the results following the use of Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic for dyspepsia, rheumatism, scrofula, jaundice, torpid liver, and general weakness.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick head-ache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

The First Sign

of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the nervous system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family, for Scrofula, and know it, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., D. D. S., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians, and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. Today my health is completely restored.—Mary Hartley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 384 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of Chronic Nasal Catarrh which they cannot cure.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH. Dullness, headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery and acrid, at others thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with symptoms resembling hay fever, the voice is changed and has a nasal tone, the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. Only a few of the above named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. The proprietors offer no remedy for catarrh unless it be such as will cure the most aggravated form of the disease, which has baffled the skill of the entire medical profession, and has become the chronic nuisance of all civilized nations. No disease is so universally prevalent, more dangerous and dangerous, or less understood by physicians. By its mild, soothing and healing properties Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the most severe cases of Catarrh, "Cold in the Head," Coryza, and Catarrhal Headache. Sold by druggists everywhere.

"Untold Agony from Catarrh."

Prof. W. Hayes, the famous [illegible] of Pierce, N. Y., writes: "For years I suffered untold agony from Catarrh. My head was stopped up, my throat was [illegible] and I was [illegible] Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I am now a well man. I believe it to be the only one entirely for catarrh now manufactured, and can say in my case it does its work quickly. Yours astounding results and a permanent cure."

Three Bottles Cure Catarrh.

Eli Robbins, Rupert, P. O., Columbia Co., Pa., says: "My daughter had catarrh when she was five years old, very badly. I saw Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy advertised, and procured a bottle for her, and soon saw that it helped her; a third bottle effected a permanent cure. She is now eighteen years old and sound and hearty."

GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP

OF WILD CHERRY, TAR, GLYCERINE, ETC.

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION

And is the best remedy for the cure of all affections of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, such as Coughs, Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Pain or Oppression of the Chest, Hoarseness, Spitting of Blood, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

We have no hesitating fact to know that it can be cured with GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP [illegible] what this Syrup does. If it does not cure, it will do no harm. If we can prove that in the system, we can cure the disease by preventing the further supply of tuberculous matter while the system is under its influence all nourishment is assimilated and consumption is arrested. It thus controls Coughs, Night Sweats and all other symptoms of Consumption. Consumption is one of the most hideous and terrible diseases, and makes the life of the poor victim a hell on earth. Until recently that terrible disease has been considered an affliction beyond the reach of medicine; but a new era in the management of pulmonary diseases seems to be dawning upon the scientific medical world, and, since many distinguished physicians have acknowledged that consumption can be cured by the new treatment, we offer a remedy which we believe to be in their opinion. To those stagged out as a victim to that fatal malady, we offer a remedy which we believe will bring back health to their poor wasted frames, and joy to the hearts of our friends. Consumptives, because all other things fail, believe not that MEXICAN SYRUP will [illegible] perish if he or she will take GOOCH'S MEXICAN SYRUP in time. A [illegible] of disease. It is not a concentrator, with the exception of the [illegible] of wild cherry, it contains no opiates, no [illegible] organic secretions, and at once on the first application of a cough. TRY IT, you will be convinced. Do you want to be cured from a consumptive's grave? Then make the most of your time. It is not a cure-all, it is not a patent medicine, it is not a quack nostrum, it is not a secret remedy, it is not a [illegible] it is not a [illegible] it is not a [illegible]

W. J. McDonald

...turning thanks to you for my miraculous recovery from salt rheum, I deem it advisable to give you a detailed account of my case. If there is, and always will be a prejudice against advertised remedies, you will have my permission to publish this testimonial, and all inquiries by letter or in person, I will cheerfully answer. I do this that people who go on year after year paying out large sums of money to physicians and receive no cure, or perhaps, in their belief, or end in filling a premature grave, who nearly my case, may be induced to make use of the wonderful Cuticura Remedies.

At the age of three months a rash made its appearance on my face. A physician was called, who said teething was the cause, he prescribed cooling medicine, but the sores spread to my ears and head. Another M.D. was called, who professed to know all about the case, called it "Tetter, or Running Scurf," and prescribed gunpowder, brimstone, and lard mixed into a salve, but the disease continued. They could not do anything with it. Another prescribed borax, water and flour poultices. None of them did any good at all, but made me worse. The disease continued unabated; it spread to my arms and legs, till I was laid up entirely, and the continual sitting on the floor on a pillow, which I had contracted, so that I lost all control of myself and was utterly helpless. My mother would have to lift me out and into bed. I could go around the house on my hands and feet, but could not get my clothes on at all, and had to wear a sort of dressing gown. My hair had all come down or fallen off, and my head, face and ears were one scab, and I had to have a towel on my head all the time in the summer to keep the flies off. My parents consulted a prominent physician and surgeon here in Chicago, (the other physicians before mentioned were of Dundas, Canada), he said he could do nothing for me, that the chances were that I would die of it, or that it would strike inwardly and kill me in time. He wanted to cut the sinews of my legs so that I could walk, but I would rather die than let him, for if I did get better I would have the use of them.

The disease continued in this manner until I was seventeen years old, and one day in January, 1879, in the Chicago Tribune, I read an account of your medicines. They described my case exactly that I thought, as a last resort I would try them a trial. When I first applied the Cuticura, I was all raw and bleeding from scratching myself, but when I applied it I went to sleep almost immediately, something I had not done for years, the effect was so soothing.

The first morning after using it my flesh (I had no skin only on the end of my nose) was a pink color. Next day it was kind of white, and I could place my hands on the sores without it being painful. In about two weeks I could stand straight, but not walk, I was so weak, but my sores were nearly well. Then I commenced the use of Cuticura Resolvent, and in three days I was worse than ever. I was one mass of pimples from the top of my head to the soles of my feet; to say they were painful would not do justice to the case. In from from two to four days they burst and left a small scale, which dropped off and left the spot pure and the skin white, and as near as I can judge I was cured in about six to eight weeks, and up to this date (i. e. from January, 1879 to January, 1887) I have not been sick in anyway, or have had the least signs of the disease reappearing on me. I have an excellent appetite, have the very best of health. My limbs are straight, supple and strong. I have been exposed to all sorts of weather without the least signs of the disease yet. The only difference I find in myself is that my skin is finer, softer and not so liable to get chapped as is other persons.

No doubt many persons will not believe this almost improbable story, many will think it grossly exaggerated. I don't blame them a bit if they do, but to satisfy themselves they can call or write to me and find out if what I have written above is true or not. There are many persons who can testify to the wonderful cures I have received by your Cuticura Remedies.

Gentlemen let me again thank you for my cure

CHAPTER IX.
JANTE'S STORY.

Shortly after the old liar had gone, John went into the yard of the head to see to the impounding of the Cape cart, when his attention was at once arrested by the sight of a row in active progress—at least from the crowd of Kaffirs and others, and the angry sounds and curses that proceeded from them it was evident that something was going wrong somewhere. In the corner of the yard, close by the stable door, surrounded by the aforesaid crowd, stood Frank Muller, a heavy sjambok in his raised hand above his head, as though in the act to strike. Before him, a very picture of drunken fury, his lips drawn up like a snarling dog's so that the two lines of his white teeth showed like polished ivory in the sunlight, his small eyes all shot with blood, and his face working convulsively, was the Hottentot Jantje. Nor was this all. Across his face was a blue wheal where the whip had taken, and in his hand a heavy white handled knife which he always carried.

"Hullo! what is all this?" said John, shouldering his way through the crowd.

"The swartsel (black creature) has stolen my horse's forage and given it to yours," shouted Muller, who was evidently almost off his head with rage, making an attempt to hit Jantje with the whip as he spoke. The latter avoided the blow by jumping behind John, with the result that the tip of the sjambock caught the Englishman on the leg.

"Be careful, sir, with that whip," said John to Muller, restraining his temper with difficulty. "Now, how do you know that the man stole your horse's forage, and what business have you to touch him? If there was anything wrong you should have reported it to me."

"He lies, baas, he lies!" yelled the Hottentot in tremulous, high pitched tones. "He lies; he has always been a liar, and worse than a liar. Yah! yah! I can tell things about him. The land is English now, and the Boers can't kill the black people as they like. That man—that Boer, Muller, he shot my father and my mother—my father first, then my mother; he gave her two bullets—she did not die the first time."

"You yellow devil! You black skinned, black hearted, lying son of Satan!" roared the great Boer, his very beard curling with fury. "Is that the way you talk to your masters? Out of the light, rooibaatje" (soldier)—this was to John—"and I will cut his tongue out of him. I'll show him how we deal with a yellow liar," and without further ado he made a rush for the Hottentot. As he came, John, whose blood was now thoroughly up, put out his open hand and holding forward pushed with all his strength on Muller's advancing chest. John was a very powerfully made man, though not a very large one, and the push sent Muller staggering back.

"What do you mean by that, rooibaatje?" shouted Muller, his face livid with fury. "Get out of my road or I will mark that pretty face of yours. I have some goods to pay you for as it is, Englishman, and I always pay my debts. Out of the path, curse you!" and he again rushed for the Hottentot.

This time John, who was now almost as angry as his assailant, did not wait for him to reach him, but springing forward, hooked his arm around Muller's throat, and before he could close with him with one tremendous jerk managed not only to stop his wild career, but to reverse the motion, and then, by interposing his foot with considerable neatness, to land him, powerful man as he was, on his back in a pool of drainage that had collected from the stable fu the hollow of the inn yard. Down he went with a splash and amid a shout of delight from the crowd, who always like to see an aggressor laid low, his head bumping with considerable force against the lintel of the door. For a moment he lay still, and John was afraid that the man was really hurt. Presently, however, he rose, and without attempting any further hostile demonstration or saying a single word, tramped off toward the house, leaving his enemy to compose his ruffled nerves as best he could. Now, John, like most gentlemen, hated a row with all his heart, though he had the Anglo Saxon tendency to go through with it unflinchingly when once it began. Indeed, the whole thing irritated him beyond bearing, for he knew that the story would, with additions, go the round of the country side, and, what is more, that he had made a powerful and implacable enemy.

"This is all your fault, you drunken little blackguard!" he said, turning savagely on the tottie, who, now that his excitement had left him, was snivelling and driveling in an intoxicated fashion, and calling him his preserver and his baas in maudlin accents.

"He hit me, baas, he hit me, and I did not take the forage. He is a bad man, Baas Muller."

"Be off with you and get the horses inspanned, you are half drunk," he growled, and, having seen the operation advancing to a conclusion, he went to the sitting room of the hotel, where Bessie was waiting in happy ignorance of the disturbance. It was not till they were well on their homeward way that he told her what had passed, whereat, remembering the scene she had herself gone through with Frank Muller, and the threats that he had then made use of, she looked very grave. Her old uncle, too, was much put out when he heard the story on their arrival home that evening.

"You have made an enemy, Capt. Niel," he said, "and a bad one. Not but what you were right to stand up for the Hottentot. I would have done as much myself had I been there and ten years younger, but Frank Muller is not the man to forget being put upon his back before a lot of Kaffirs and white folk too. Perhaps that Jantje is sober by now." This conversation took place upon the following morning, as they sat upon the veranda after breakfast. "I will go and call him, and we will hear what this story is about his father and his mother."

Presently he returned, followed by the ragged [illegible] that took off his hat and squatted down on the drive, looking very miserable and ashamed of himself, in the full glare of the African sun, to the effects of which he appeared to be totally impervious.

"Now, Jantje, listen to me," said the old man, "yesterday you gave drunk. Well, I'm not going to talk about that now, except to say that if I find or hear of your being drunk once more—you leave this place."

"Yes, Baas," said the Hottentot meekly. "I was drunk, though not very, I only had half a bottle of Cape Smoke."

"[illegible] you made a quarrel with Baas Muller, so that blows passed between Baas Muller and the baas here on your account, which was more than you are worth. Now when Baas Muller had struck you you said that he had shot your father and your mother. Was that a lie, or what did you mean by saying it?"

"It was no lie, baas," said the Hottentot, excitedly. "I have said it once, and I will say it again. Listen, baas, and I will tell you the story. When I was young, so high"—and he held his hand high enough to indicate a lottie of about 14 years of age—"we, that is, my father, my mother, my uncle, a very old man, older than the baas" (pointing to Silas Croft), "were bijwoners (authorized squatters) on a place belonging to old Jacob Muller, Baas Frank's father, down in Lydenburg yonder. It was a bush veldt farm, and old Jacob used to come down there with his cattle from the High veldt in the winter when there was no grass in the High veldt, and with him came the Englishwoman, his wife, and the young Baas Frank—the baas we saw yesterday.

"How long ago was all this?" asked Mr. Croft.

Jantje counted on his fingers for some seconds, and then held up his hand and opened it four times in succession. "So," he said, "twenty years last winter. Baas Frank was young then; he had only a little down upon his chin. One year, when Om Jacob went away, after the first rains, he left six oxen that were too poor (thin) to go with my father, and told him to look after them as though they were his children. But the oxen were bewitched. Three of them took the lungsick and died, a lion got one, a snake killed one, and one ate 'tulip' and died too. So when Om Jacob came back the next year all the oxen were gone. He was very angry with my father, and beat him with a yoke strap till he was all blood, and, though we showed him the bones of the oxen, he said that we had stolen them and sold them.

"Now, Om Jacob had a beautiful span of black oxen that he loved like children. Sixteen of them were there, and they would come up to the yoke when he called them and put down their heads of themselves. They were tame as dogs. These oxen were thin when they came down, but in two months they got fat and began to want to trek about as oxen do. At this time there was a Basutu, one of Sequati's people, resting in our hut, for he had hurt his foot with a thorn. When Om Jacob found that the Basutu was there he was very angry, for he said that all Basutus were thieves. So my father told the Basutu that the baas said that he must go away, and he went that night. Next morning the span of black oxen were gone too. The kraal gate was down and they had gone. We hunted all day, but we could not find them. Then Om Jacob got mad with rage, and the young Baas Frank told him that one of the Kaffir boys had said to him that he had heard my father sell them to the Basutu for sheep which he was to pay to us in the summer. It was a lie, but Baas Frank hated my father because of something about a woman—a Zulu girl. Next morning, when we were asleep, just at daybreak, Om Jacob Muller and Baas Frank and two Kaffirs came into the hut and pulled us out, the old man, my uncle, my father, my mother and myself, and tied us up to four mimosa trees, with buffalo reims. Then the Kaffirs went away, and Om Jacob asked my father where the cattle were, and my father told him that he did not know. Then he took off his hat and said a prayer to the Big Man in the sky, and when he had done Baas Frank came up with a gun, and stood quite close and shot my father dead, and he fell forward and hung quite over the reim, his head touching his feet. Then he loaded the gun again and shot the old man, my uncle, and he slipped down dead, and his hands slipped up and he sat against the reim. Next he shot my mother, but the buffet did not kill her, and cut the reim, and she ran away, and he ran after her and killed her. When that was done he came back to shoot me, but I was young then and did not know that it is better to be dead than to live like a dog, and I begged and prayed for mercy while he was loading [illegible]

"But the baas only laughed, and said he would teach Hottentots how to steal cattle, and Old Om Jacob prayed out loud to the Big Man and said he was very sorry for me, but it was the dear Lord's will. And then just as Baas Frank lifted the gun he dropped it again, for there, coming softly, softly over the brow of the hill, in and out between the bushes, were all the sixteen oxen. They had got out in the night and strayed away into some kloof for a change of pasture, and came back when they were full and tired of being alone. Om Jacob turned quite white and scratched his head, and then fell upon his knees and thanked the dear Lord for saving my life, and just then the English woman, Baas Frank's mother, came down from the wagon to see what the firing was at, and when she saw all the people dead and me weeping, tied to the tree, and learned what it was about, she went quite mad, for sometimes she had a kind heart when she was not drunk, and said that a curse would fall on them, and that they would all die in blood. And she took a knife and cut me loose, though Baas Frank wanted to kill me, so that I might tell no tales, and I ran away, traveling by night and hiding by day, for I was very much frightened, till I got to Natal, and there I stopped, working in Natal till the land became English, when Baas Croft hired me to drive his cart up from Maritzburg, and living by here I found Baas Frank, looking bigger but just the same except for his beard.

"There, baas, that is the truth, and all the truth, and that is why I hate Baas Frank, because he shot my father and mother, and why Baas Frank hates me, because he cannot forget that he did it and I saw him do it, for, as our people say, 'one always hates a man one has wounded with a spear.'" and having finished his narrative, the miserable looking little man picked up his greasy old felt hat, that had a leather strap fixed round the crown, in which were stuck a couple of frayed ostrich feathers, and jammed it down over his ears, and then fell to drawing circles on the soil with his long toes. His auditors only looked at one another. Such a ghastly tale seemed to be beyond comment. They never doubted its truth; the man's way of telling it carried conviction with it. And, indeed, two of them at any rate, had heard such stories before. Most people have who live in the wilder parts of South Africa, though they are not all to be taken for gospel.

"You say," remarked old Silas, at last, "that the woman said that a curse would fall on them and that they would die in blood? She was right. Twelve years ago Om Jacob and his wife were murdered by a party of Napoch's Kaffirs, down on the edge of that very Lydenburg veldt. There was a great noise about it at the time, I remember, but nothing came of it. Baas Frank was not there. He was away at school, and so escaped and inherited all his father's farms and cattle and came to live here."

"So," said the Hottentot, without showing the slightest interest or surprise. "I knew it would be so, but I wish I had been there to see it. I saw that there was a devil in the [illegible] When there is a devil in people they always speak the truth, because they can't help it. Look, baas, I draw a circle in the sand with my foot, and I say some words so, and at last the ends touch. There, that is the circle of Om Jacob and his wife the Englishwoman. The ends have touched and they are dead. An old witch doctor taught me how to draw the circle, and a great [illegible] that works to say. And now I draw another for Baas Frank. At first there is a stone sticking in the way. The ends will not touch. But now I work and work and work with my foot, and say the words, and see the stone going up and the ends touch now. So it is with Baas Frank. One day the stone will come in your path, and then he will die in blood. The devil in the English woman said so, and devils cannot lie or speak half the truth only. And, now, look, I rub my foot over the circles and they are gone, and there is only the path again. That means that when they have died in blood they will be quite forgotten and stamped out. Even their graves will be flat," and he wrinkled up his yellow face into a smile, or rather a grin, and then added in a matter offact way: "Does the baas wish the gray mare to have one bundle of green forage or two?"

CHAPTER X.
JOHN HAS AN ESCAPE.

On the following Monday John, taking Jantje to drive him, departed in a rough Scotch cart, to which were harnessed two of the best horses at Mooifontein, to shoot buck at Hans [illegible]

He reached the place at about 5:30 o'clock, and concluded, from the fact of the presence of several carts and horses, that he was not the only guest. Indeed, the first person that he saw as the cart pulled up was his late enemy, Frank Muller.

"Keke dooki, baas," said Jantje, "there is Baas Frank talking to a Basutu!"

John was, as may be imagined, not best pleased at this meeting. He had always disliked the man, and since Muller's conduct on the previous Friday, and Jantje's story of the dark deed of blood in which he had been the principal actor, he positively loathed the sight of him. He got out of the cart, and was going to walk round to the back of the house in order to avoid him, when Muller, to all appearance, suddenly became aware of his presence and advanced to meet him with the utmost cordiality.

"How do you do, captain?" he said, holding out his hand, which John just touched. "So you have come to shoot buck with Om Coetzee; going to show us Transvaalers how to do it, eh? There, captain, don't look as stiff as a rifle barrel. I know what you are thinking of; that little business at Wakkerstroom on Friday, is it not? Well, now, I tell you what it is, I was in the wrong, and I ain't afraid to say so as between man and man. I had had a glass, that was the fact, and did not quite know what I was about. We have got to live as neighbors here, so let us forget all about it and be brothers again. I never bear malice, not I. It is not the Lord's will that we should bear malice. Hit out from the shoulder, I say, and then forget all about it. If it hadn't been for that little monkey," he added, jerking his thumb in the direction of Jantje, who was holding the horses' heads, "it would never have happened, and it is not nice that two Christians should quarrel about such as he."

Home Evidence
No other preparation has won success at home equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In Lowell, Mass., where it is made, it is now, as it has been for years, the leading medicine for purifying the blood, and toning and strengthening the system. This "good name at home" is "a tower of strength abroad."

People of Lowell
It would require a volume to print all Lowell people have said in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Albert Estey, living at 25 East Pine Street, Lowell, for 15 years employed as boss carpenter by J. W. Bennett, president of the Erie Telephone Company, had a large running sore come on his leg, which troubled him a year, when he began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The sore soon grew less in size, and in a short time disappeared.

Jos. Dunphy, 214 Central Street, Lowell, had swellings and lumps on his face and neck which Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cured.

Mrs. C. W. Marriott, wife of the First Assistant Fire Engineer of Lowell, says that for 15 years she was troubled with stomach disorder and sick headache, which nothing relieved. The attacks came on every fortnight, when she was obliged to take her bed, and was unable to endure any noise. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after a time the attacks ceased entirely.

Many more might be given had we room. On the recommendation of people of Lowell, who know us, we ask you to try

A GENDARME'S STORY.

A JOURNEY.

I know not whither and my soul is sad. [illegible] straight dark path [illegible] Flame [illegible] Their [illegible]

[illegible] Lo! [illegible] heaven's paradise. [illegible] One straight, dark path [illegible] and those things [illegible] Nought [illegible]

[illegible]

In the autumn of [illegible] we found ourselves, at an elevation of 4,300 meters, in the Chalet of Tanneleuse. It was well that we were sheltered for a tempest [illegible] ing through the neighboring passes and hurling itself with fury upon the pines of the Swiss Jura. Gathering about the fire, like the rest of us, for warmth and comfort, the herdsmen smoked and listened while we talked.

Suddenly a violent knocking sounded upon the door, and, on the call to enter, given by the shepherd, who was master of the hut, a Varalois gendarme, wet and weary, a black cassock following at his heels, showed himself in the opening. Placing his cap and carbine in a corner with the rest of the trappings, he explained, to us that he, too, had been surprised by the storm and had lost his way in the pines. As the light of the burning logs fell upon the new arrival I started in astonishment, for never in my life before had I seen so strange a countenance. The nose was broken and bent awry, the teeth entirely missing from the front of the mouth, and the skin and flesh a "patchwork of seams" and cicatrices. Nevertheless, in spite of its disfigurements, the face was a kind one, the face of an old and brave soldier.

The conversation, checked for a moment by his coming, was renewed again, the painful duty of the mountain guards, the tragic story of contrabandists, forming the basis of our talk. Every one had something to relate, and when it came to the turn of the gendarme, cheered by frequent trips to his gourd and the grateful warmth of the fire, he gave us the following history:

"That which I am going to tell you," said he, "is the saddest episode of my life, for I was but 25 years of age, and, without flattering myself, a well set boy. Detailed to the post of Cure—the extreme station of the canton of Vaud, near the Fort des Rousses—in the winter of 18—, I endured some terrible sufferings, every day of my life exposed to the danger and hardships of that open frontier and the forests of Amont. Ah, those miserable smugglers, whose route I had to watch! Many a night have I passed in a hole in the rocks or in the branches of the pines in those trackless woods where one only meets with crows and poisonous reptiles!

"But to return to my story: One afternoon the corporal came to me and said: 'Abram, this evening the little Francois and his two dogs of brothers will load themselves at Des Rousses; they will be obliged to return through the hollows of Cronaz. I am going to post myself behind them, the lieutenant under the Vermillay, and you in the hollow itself. As you have a longer route than we, you must start at once and take Bijou with you. Come, hurry up, boy; this trip requires nerve.'

"Bijou, to whom the corporal referred, was the canisle of the post; there was nothing like him to scent the smugglers, and moreover, to tell the truth, he had once been a contraband himself, having served to pass jewelry and clock works, concealed under his hair, through the lines into France.

"I had found him after a brawl, wounded and bleeding; had cared for and cured him; and since then he had never left me. By 4 o'clock I was on the road. The ground was covered with snow, and at every step I sank to my knees in spite of my snow shoes. The carbine slung across my shoulders, the sword at my waist, my heavy capote and Alpenstock did not render me light of weight, I assure you. But I went on with a brave heart in spite of my difficulties, pleased with the thought of measuring my strength in open fight with this terrible Petit Francois, who daily defied our watchfulness, and on Sunday openly walked with his sacks of lace in broad daylight. He did it to make us envious, for the villain knew that we were not made of stone, and with an income of only thirty cents a day from the government I did not care to be looked upon with favor.

"When I think of him, that scamp with his pack so full of gold, and yet so rough to tempt even the virgin of Notre Dame d'Ardes, my blood boils, and—but listen, gentlemen, listen to the end.

"I had already been traveling for over two hours, when at last I approached the hollow of Cronaz, a narrow defile between the Noir Mont and Mont Sallaz, a mere goat's path, in fact, to the right of it a fearful precipice, to the left a jet bed wall—and what a height—not less than [illegible]

"[illegible] for yourselves the cold and the silence of those interminable forests, with their solitary pines whose trunks were [illegible] with snow, whose branches bent and cracked under the weight of snow—and yet I said silently to myself in the whole of my [illegible] I was [illegible] perhaps 100 feet into the defile that I stationed myself in the snow to smoke. The night was clear and [illegible] but I squatted with my posteriors, for I knew perfectly well that the smugglers would launch at Des Rousses until 8 o'clock at least, in order to arrive at Begnins about daybreak.

"By this time the cold began to affect me. I was growing very drowsy, when suddenly my attention was attracted by the strange behavior of Bijou. He had burrowed into a pile of snow heaped against the wall of the hollow, and instead of squatting himself quietly in his haunches as was his habit, was digging, scratching and snuffing about the excavation as if seeking to unearth a treasure.

"'I must see what he is about' I said to myself 'there's something suspicious over there.' And leaning my carbine against the rocks, I took off my sword and began to dig in the hole at which Bijou was still pawing. Ah, but it was funny, for suddenly something giving way beneath us, we fell and were hurled out of sight, a great pile of snow and ice resting upon our heads. When I was free again I found myself in a sort of cavern, the floor dry and covered with gravel and fine sand. Bijou, already on his feet, jumped about me barking and whining, displeased or uneasy at the position in which he found himself, it was difficult to tell which.

"By the light of my lantern, fortunately unbroken in the fall, I began to examine the surroundings; but, sacre Dieu! [illegible] me! Packages of wheat and flour, kegs of tobacco, wine from Berne, cigars from Vevey, and heaven knows what else. It was a complete store-house, in fact, and evidently a depot for [illegible] had taken away [illegible]

[illegible] stand there [illegible] property [illegible] state of mind. [illegible] given me [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] lost. A sling of lead or a knife in the ribs would soon end the business for me. [illegible] there was a [illegible] of gunpowder—I was called the quick [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Don't Get Caught

This spring with your blood full of impurities, your digestion impaired, your appetite poor, kidneys and liver torpid, and whole system liable to be prostrated by disease, you get your self into good condition, and ready for the changing and warmer weather, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It stands unequalled for purifying the blood, giving an appetite, and for a general spring medicine.

The State teachers' meeting will be held at Lansing July 6,7, and 8.

The Ladies' Favorite.

The newest fashion in ladies' hats will doubtless cause flutter of pleasurable excitement among the fair sex. Ladies are always susceptible to the changes of a fashion plate; and the more startling the departure, the more earnest the gossip over the new mode. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for the ills which afflict females. This panacea can be relied on in case of displacements and all functional derangements. It builds up the poor, haggard and dragged-out victim and gives her renewed hope and a fresh lease of life. It is the only medicine for women's peculiar weakness and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. Read printed guarantee on bottle wrapper.

AT THE SODA FOUNTAIN.

How "Constitution Bracers," "Phosphatines" and "Nervers" Are Made.

A sad eyed youth mechanically manipulated the faucets of a soda fountain on Broadway the other day and fizzed out for a reporter a mixed drink poetically called phosphate. It had a mixed taste and a lingering farewell to it that caused the reporter to pause and listen to the youth. "Yes," he said, leaning against the counter and making himself comfortable, "the business is growing complex. No mere chuckled headed champ can squirt soda water now. There are so many fancy drinks, mixtures, nerve ticklers, stomach bracers and without coolers, you can't expect an inexperienced boy to get behind the counter and serve customers without an apprenticeship. He would be rattled if a customer should come in hurriedly and ask for a phosphated mixed nerver. Where would he be? Then there is the plain phosphate and the deep lock slack, all easy drinks to concoct when you understand the wrinkle.

"Look at all these faucet valves on the face of this fountain. They not only let out all the mineral waters known, but the various sweet extracts of fruit the ladies are so fond of. But the fountain is too small to contain the other ingredients for fancy and substantial drinks. We keep a shelf under the counter with bottles ready for use and a heater to furnish warm drinks. Some years ago Vichy, Kissinger sarsaparilla and drinks of that kind were all the go, but now new fangled mixtures divide the honors. Men drink Vichy more than women. The latter do not care much for the mineral waters and nerve drinks; they want sweet extracts and soda. Women occasionally try a bouillon-sniffer, but they are few and far between. Some fellow who am t much on science, I think, has started the report that Vichy is devitalizing. It has had an effect on its sale.

"Men who patronize soda fountains regularly don't like straight drinks. They ask for a little lime juice, phosphate or ginger to kind of tone up the taste of the liquor. It appears to me they look happier when they hear the 'squirt, squirt, squirt,' from the bottle into their drinks. So you see no gawky, everyday man can step in and do what it takes us years to learn. I am going to try and get my boss to start a fountain higher uptown where nothing but 'nervers' are sold. What are 'nervers'? Why, I mean nerve drinks, 'constitution bracers' and 'phosphaters.' Hundreds of men every day say to me aside: 'Say, gimme suthing to brace me up, kinder.' That's the business I want to do, the 'brace up' business."—New York Mail and Express.

Decay of Romance.

"There is, after all, a deplorable lack of romance in this progressive age of ours," said a gentleman in one of our jewelry stores. "In days gone by the betrothal ring was considered as a sort of love token, and the maiden who received it wore it and doted upon it because of the spirit in which it was given. Now, however, the girls are very particular, and it is no unusual thing for them to come here with their engagements and have the settings changed, an alteration made in the inscription or some other little matter that don't just suit them corrected. And the wedding ring is no longer held so sacred as it used to be. Why, do you know it has not been long since a prospective bride came in alone and selected her own wedding ring, had it fitted to her finger, left the order for the engraving to go within the hand, and then had the cost charged to her father. Now that sort of thing is calculated to knock romance higher than a kite."—Williamsport Gazette.

A Very Dissipated Jap

They are telling in Boston of two or three Japanese students of rank who have been in the habit of dining each Sunday at the residence of one of the wealthiest citizens of the Hub. On a recent Sunday one was absent, and when the host asked why, one of the guests said solemnly, "Oh, he cannot come! He very, very dissipated!" The host thought it best not to make any further inquiry at the time, but after the meal ventured to tell the guests what he had heard. "You say Mr. Nin San is not well?" "No, he not well—he very dissipated." "He been drinking?" "Oh, no, no! He no drink." "Not gambling?" "No, no! He no gamble." "May I ask what he has been doing, then?" "Oh! he very dissipated. He eat sponges twice alice time—he all broke up now."—New York Sun.

Bickerings of Royalty.

Regrettably enough, the practical estrangement between the queen and the Princess of Wales is deepening. During the past few months they have seen less of each other than ever. Her royal highness never disregards her majesty's positive commands which there is a family gathering in some vault or other for pocket handkerchief drill, but she avoids joining the queen unnecessarily, and her majesty certainly never makes a pleasant, motherly call at Marlborough house. Were there no Princess of Wales it is possible that in her old age the queen might abdicate in favor of her eldest son, but her majesty will assuredly never consent to play queen dowager to the princess' queen.—London Letter.

What Vanderbilt Had Under His Arm.

At the time when the French papers were full of the stories of the late Mr. Vanderbilt's purchases of Meissoniers and the rest, the Crœsus was encountered one early morning in Paris with a bundle under his arm.

"How is this?" asked his friend. "Abroad so early! Ah, I see!" You have been to secure a trouvaille, some object of art, another marvel for your collection."

"Well, no," replied William H.; "I bought a pair of shoes yesterday which hurt me, and I am taking them to the shoemaker to have them put in order."—Chicago Herald.

Where Alexander Hamilton Rested.

A favorite Sunday walk used to be along the western shore of the Hudson to the spot where the duel between Hamilton and Burr was fought. This spot is now covered with railroad tracks, and although a monument was once erected there, it is no longer to be found. But the large, red stone against which Hamilton rested while his wound was being examined is preserved on the King estate, on the bluffs overlooking the river, and marks the entrance to a sort of observatory called "The Fort," as if in rivalry with "The Castle" of the Stevens family, a mile or two away.—New York World.

Citizens ✻ of ✻ Tecumseh!

MOCKETT, OF TOLEDO, SPEAKS:

CITIZENS OF TECUMSEH: There are, no doubt, many of you in need of Clothing, Furnishing Goods, and Hats and Caps. To you who have been in the habit of buying these goods at home, we wish to call your attention to the fact that you can save fully 25 per cent., perhaps more, by buying Your Clothing, Hats, Caps, etc., from us. If such is the case would it not be to your interest to spend a day to come to Toledo to buy your outfit? Many of you will probably say to yourselves this is only an advertisement. We admit it, but nevertheless it contains nothing but the simple truth. Would you ask us why we can sell so much lower than the dealer in your own town? We will tell you.

BECAUSE we buy in much larger quantities than small dealers can, and buying in large quantities we get the benefit of the very lowest quotations, this benefit we divide with our customers. A man buying one at of the car load, buys it lower per bushel than he who buys only a single bushel.

BECAUSE All our purchases being made for cash, we get the benefit of a cash discount of from seven to ten per cent. This enables us to sell our goods at a close margin over cost, but not enough to warrant it.

BECAUSE We visit the Eastern markets regularly every three or four months, and buying right there on the spot many opportunities are offered us to buy large lots at a sacrifice. These opportunities are never offered to country dealers, because they have no facilities in small towns to sell large stocks.

ANOTHER REASON Why we can benefit you if you trade with us is, you have a stock and variety from which to make your selections fully ten or twenty times as large as you can find at home. This certainly gives you a better chance of getting WELL PLEASED IF NOTHING MORE.

ANOTHER REASON is, the stock we show you is newer and fresher in a store like ours, than you can find at home. Our goods sell rapidly. We run a thriving, thriving business, and a house like ours is receiving new goods every week, while in a small house they often carry stock for years. You run no chance of buying old shop worn goods when you buy from us.

SATISFY YOURSELVES of the advantage you receive by buying from us. Have a round trip ticket and come and see us. We can save you money and do ourselves good at the same time. We ask you to take the trouble to examine our stock and learn our prices. WE KNOW IT IS TO YOUR INTEREST TO DO SO.

IN ORDER That every customer buying from us shall be thoroughly satisfied with his purchase we offer to do this: If after buying your goods and instead of taking them at home, you think you have cause to feel dissatisfied with your bargain, we will either exchange your goods or refund your money without any ways after the purchase. We want to get your trade and not satisfied if you try us once you will come again.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.
Cures all Humors, from a common ...tion to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the Stomach.
It gives healthy vigor in place of feeble sluggishness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description, as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, either in part or in all.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venereal Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions to cure, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is wrapped.

Price $1 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $5, containing 12 ounces, or 96 doses. Sent by express on receipt of price, or by druggists in the medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you. It will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

[illegible]

[illegible] President [illegible] will appoint a Democrat [illegible] apparently good authority [illegible] however that he is not inclined to make the appointment from his Cabinet circle, as was at first supposed he would, but that he will be apt to confer office in the circuit and appoint some eminent Southern lawyer.

The President has an entertaining variety of people from all his reception [illegible] sometimes. At a recent handshaking the first man received by Mr. Cleveland congratulated him upon the success of his administration. Then a [illegible] who looked like a member of some good society asked him to carry his best respects to your wife, and tell her how he every act comforts his souls. Next came a man with a small boy, whose hand he placed in that of the Chief Magistrate. He whispered something to the President, who stroked the boy's head in a kindly way. "He may never vote for you Mr. President, but his father did, and will again. It's good stock, said Mr. Cleveland, as the two passed on. A [illegible] girl had a little speech which she tried to make to the President but he could not catch its import, although he grasped her arm and bent his head low to listen. Another little girl brought her communication in a big envelop which she thrust into the President's hand. Many people give him their cards and many announce their relationship to some former friends, but the greatest speechmakers by far are the women. With that fine sense of the unfitness of things they can take advantage too of the situation to do serious and earnest lobbying for favors of some sort.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR HIM.

Mr. Asa B. Rowley, Druggist, was induced to try some of the Papillon Catarrh Cure by his customers, after several physicians predicted he would soon have consumption from an aggravated case of Catarrh. He says: "The result was unprecedented. I commenced to get well after the first application, and am now, after a few weeks, entirly cured." Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure will do all that is claimed for it. Large bottles $1.00.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Corn is doing finely since the rains.

We were asked a few days since when the dilapidated sheds in the burying-yard of the church-yards were to be removed and something more pretentious erected in their place.

It is said there is nothing but what was created or built for some use, and we believe it, since the Feed Mill was plastered over with the show bills of the Sell Brothers circus, which puts in an appearance at Adrian, June 14th.

Work on the Library lot was begun last week by digging out some of the apple trees that stood in the front of the lot.

Several from the village went to Pennington's corners Wednesday eve. to see the Irish Doctor played.

S. P. Smith is bound to keep up with the times, as he received a peanut roaster Saturday, and hereafter you can get your peanuts hot for a nickel a glass; also ice cream every day.

John C. Palmer while unharnessing a horse last week Thursday was knocked down and run over by the horse becoming frightened, and was hurt quite badly. He is doing finely at present.

Temple Brothers keep the wheat and oat business lively at their elevator. They received several hundred bushels of grain last week.

Persis Rimert of Macon visited May Smith from Friday until Sunday, returning home Sunday evening. Vernie Ames to do his duty if it takes until, well we won't give it away, if Sabin does'nt.

Mrs. Dan Lowe and daughter, Etta, spent Monday with old acquaintances in the village.

Ada Loree, who has been with her sister, Mrs. A. Lucking at Detroit for several weeks past, returned home Friday.

Mrs. Gove of North Adrian spent Sunday with her son, C. M. Gove.

Labe Babcock and wife, of Britton, were the guests of Jessie Potter and wife, Sunday.

Prof. Martin Palmer of Flat Rock, spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents and friends, returning to the Rock, Monday.

Mr. McRoberts of Macon was the guest of Nellie Freer, over Sunday.

Clara Temple and Jennie Osgood visited from Friday until Monday with their many friends in Tecumseh.

Prof. and Mrs. Huston spent the Sabbath with relatives at Petersburg, returning Monday.

Mrs. Sarah Rappleye, Prest. of the W. C. T. U. went to Port Huron to attend the W. C. T. U. State convention that is being held there this week.

The W. F. & M. S. will meet at the home of Mrs. S. H. Linn, next week Wednesday afternoon. Tea will be served at 6 P. M. A cordial invitation is extended by Mrs. Linn, as well as the society, for all to come and enjoy a pleasant time.

Owing to the rain Monday, our people did not join with Britton friends in the decorating services. The procession passed through the village at 4:30 P. M., headed by the Britton Cornet Band, and floral car and members of the G. A. R., drawn by three four-horse teams. The usual decorating services were conducted by the G. A. R. fraternity, it being too late in the afternoon for the program to be carried out.

Our base ball team went to Deerfield Monday, to play the return game, but owing to the bad weather, there was no game called. They report of having a very pleasant time however.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

The much needed rain came last Tuesday, but crops were considerably set back from previous dry weather. Wheat on clay and muck, a failure; on sand or gravel quite good; clover meadows light; timothy scarce and late. Spring seeding of oats and corn unusually extensive from failure of clover and wheat, the latter is in all stages, from fitting the ground to cultivating.

The new wing to Al. Hunter's house is completed. C. Dasher's new wind mill and repairing to house is receiving the finishing touches. The mason's are plastering Lafe Gregory's new addition to house. Frank Clarkson's house is well under way. B. F. DePuy's barn is nearly completed. Frank Pocklington is laying up arches in Easlick's tile kiln. There is a telegraph line from A. Easlick's to A. Sink's.

Moon & Bobean have planted 40 acres of corn on A. Harrington's farm. "Lide" Yates set 50 hens eggs and hatched 3 chicks. "How is that for low?"

Mrs. W. Greenfield visited friends and neighbors here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Karcher took the train at Ridgeway Saturday night for Adrian to visit their son Henry.

A traveling agent after passing the new store, and arriving at the saw mill and tile yard, stepped into the post-office and inquired, "Is this Ridgeway?" Fact.

Chas. Booth is having a run of bad luck, a short time since he lost a valuable horse from diphtheria, and last week met a runaway, smashing his buggy.

W. K. Sexton of Howell, Mich., favored us with a call last week Wednesday, on his flying trip through this section. He says the car load of tile received from A. Eastlick last winter, went off like hot cakes, after $6 per m. to the home price was added.

Lyman C. Davenport, aged 44 years, a farmer living on the county line near T. Lee's corners, formerly an occupant of the Lake Ridge house, dropped dead last Tuesday while running across a field to herd a cow, near Alf. Lewis'. The funeral was largely attended at the Universalist church in Mooreville, Rev. J. M. Getchell of Tecumseh, officiating.

We noticed that in the great cattle show at Madison Square Garden, the Holsteins take the lead. "Clotilde," an imported Holstein owned at Syracuse, N. Y., is the greatest milker in the world, producing 27,000 lbs. of milk from Aug. 1st, 1885 to Aug 1st, 1886, an average of 74 lbs per day. Another Holstein—"Eurotus," owned at Darlington, N. Y. produced 850 lbs. of butter in one year, the greatest ever known. The largest bull in the world is "Constantyn" a Holstein, owned at Attica, N. Y. So it would seem to be the next best thing for a farmer to do in connection with underdraining his farm, to stock it with Holsteins.

It would appear from a lawsuit now pending in Wayne Co., wherein atty's have sued for a $50,000 fee in settling up an estate, that the legislature should pass a law regulating "the long and short haul" in lawyer's fees.

The best temperance legislation we now think of would be, for the legislature to repeal the present tax law, and enact that all precincts voting against the amendment be allowed free whiskey and those voting for the amendment have prohibition.

There never was a better time since Adam's fall than the present for a good lively editor to start a newsy non-partisan newspaper in Adrian and Detroit based on the greatest good to the greatest number. People are disgusted with the editorial drivel of the the old party press in trying to keep party above principle.

MACON MUSIC.

Mr. Perry Kroll returned home Saturday.

The entertainment at the hall, Friday night, for the benefit of the band, was not very well attended.

Wash Ellis and son of Missouri are visiting friends this week.

Fred. Sabin spent Saturday and Sunday at his home in North Adams.

Mart Sickley is improving the looks of his house and barn by giving them a new coat of paint.

The ladies of the Reform church will hold their aid society at Wm. Osgood's on Wednesday of this week.

Persis Rimert spent Saturday and Sunday with Ridgeway friends.

ONSTED ODDS.

On Sunday morning May 29th, Mrs. M. Mills Taylor of North Rome, came hurriedly out of the cellar and says, Mills there is a snake in the cellar, for I heard a hissing noise. She immediately went for Andrew Johncox. Mrs. Taylor, with a broom, and Andrew with a club in each hand, proceeded cautiously to find the snake, but only found that a fruit can had busted. Luckily no one was bit or hurt, only a little scared. Look out for snakes.

THE NOGAR GAS WELL.

This morning a representative of the Reporter took a trip over to the Nogar well, and found a force of several men busily engaged loading the drilling machinery and apparatus upon cars for shipment to Coldwater, where Mr. Nims has taken a contract to sink a well. Meeting Mr. Nogar we were invited into his office, and enjoyed a pleasant visit with him. He stated that he had no particular "points" to give us at present regarding the well, except, for several reasons, he had decided to discontinue work on the well for the present at least, and leave it undeveloped, and to allow the drilling apparatus, with exception of the derrick, to be removed. He also stated that there was one point that was of value for the people of this region to know that the Trenton rock gives indications, and he also stated that in some localities, not a great distance away, that specimens of rock had not been found by drilling to great depths, as towards Detroit. He would like to see and thought there should be other wells sunk in this vicinity, and predicted success for such wells. He had faith that, in spite of fact in this vicinity [illegible] How so on, he was unable to say. No public interest had been shown toward his enterprise, the only interest displayed being a quiet general exhibition of a desire to sell out the property of each at a large sum, and to move on to some other locality, like a lot of emigrants. Until a change of such sentiment is made, no development of his well will be made as for himself, he was favorable to remaining here, and enjoying the profits of any good luck that may occur.—Dundee Reporter of the 27th.

AN IMPORTANT LITERARY EVENT.

The Detective and the Novelist.—A Byrnes Hawthorne Story.

Such a combination of authors as Messrs. Cassell & Company have just succeeded in making will prove an epoch in the literary world. They have got together a man with his brain teeming with stories of intrigue and adventure in which he has played an active part, and a famous novelist. The man of adventure lays his stories and his diaries before the man of letters, and we are given a book, which for thrilling incident and literary style, has seldom if ever, been equalled. This unique combination consists of Inspector Thomas Byrnes, Chief of the Detective Bureau of New York, and Julian Hawthorne, one of the most popular novelists of the day. Dumas, Dickens or Charles Reade would have given worlds for such material as Inspector Byrnes has furnished Mr. Hawthorne. There will be a series of books from the pens of these two gentlemen, the first called "A Tragic Mystery." Messrs. Cassell & Company announce for immediate publication. It is the story of one of the famous crimes committed in New York, only the external features of which have hitherto been known to the public. Mr. Hawthorne has constructed a tale of interest more sustained and absorbing than any example of "Detective literature either in this country or in Europe. Indeed, nothing similar to this work has ever before been produced anywhere; for although attired in the garb of fiction, it gives a picture of events which have actually occurred within the last decade, and which are now, for the first time portrayed with the consent and authority of Chief of Detectives himself. It describes a mysterious murder which startled New York several years ago, narrates the efforts made by the Police to discover the criminal, the circumstances by which for a long time they were baffled and misled, and the final dramatic and tragic conclusion. The style is rapid and direct, and point after point is made with telling power. Such a story cannot fail to achieve a national popularity, no similar opportunity of becoming acquainted with the secrets of criminal and detective transactions has until now been offered to readers. With two such "collaborators" as Inspector Byrnes and Mr. Julian Hawthorne, a sale reaching into hundreds of thousands may confidently be expected.

GIVE MANNA. EXOD. XVI. 1-12.

Notes.—"I will rain bread from heaven for you."—The manna seems to be described as something different if we interpret the language literally from what is now called manna, and which is gathered on a sort of thick glistening dew of a sweet, honey-like taste from the branches of the tamarisk bushes. This seems to be represented as falling directly from the sky, and yet may be merely a figurative way of saying it was from God; and certainly the miracle is not affected whether it came directly from the sky or from the bushes, for the quantity was enormously increased, and the supply failed on the Sabbath day. The word manna appears to be derived, according to the story, from a Hebrew word meaning "What?" as the Jews asked "What is it?" Still other derivations are given.—"That I may prove them."—Not so much by seeing if they would keep the Sabbath, as if they would cease murmuring when they were provided with food.—"On the sixth day."—The double supply on the sixth day was to prevent their working on the Sabbath. The command to observe the Sabbath was not given, but was given later at Sinai. Still the people probably observed the Sabbath before the Ten Commandments were proclaimed, just as they obeyed their parents. According to the critics, however, this passage (vs. 4-8) is a later passage than what comes before and after, and anticipates what was repeated after Sinai.—"Prepare that which they bring in."—By grinding or cooking.—"They gather."—It is not to be supposed that it lay on the ground like a deep snow; but it was scattered under the tamarisk bushes, perhaps, and required much labor to collect.—"Ye shall know that the Lord hath brought you up."—That it is Jehovah who has done this, and whose power is not exhausted. They were to know it by seeing his miraculous gifts.—"Ye shall see the glory."—Not any special manifestation in the cloud, but the miracle of manna.—"In the evening flesh."—The quails, which would come in immense numbers.—"And Moses said."—With verse 9 seems to begin a new form of the story, and it fits in at the end of verse 3.—"Aaron spoke."—Moses felt unable to talk, and Aaron was his spokesman.—"Come near before the Lord."—Before the place where Moses was, as the tabernacle was not yet made; but there were altars at Moses's headquarters.—"Aaron spake unto the whole congregation."—This cannot mean that all the two or three million heard him, but that he called the chief men, who told the people.—"The glory of the Lord appeared."—The cloud somehow moved, or smoked, or was brilliant.—"With bread."—Not bread as we use the word, but vegetable food of any sort.

INSTRUCTION.—The manna was a miracle, food from God. But all food is from God, and it is as great a task for God to make our food grow as to make manna. We should see God in ordinary food as well as in miracles.

Raining manna did not take responsibility from the people. They had to work hard, still taking care of flocks, finding them pasture, and even the manna required long hard work to pick it up. God makes us work for a living, and if any people did not work they were worth nothing.

All our conduct is a test of our character. We are all the time on trial, as long as we live.

The manna is a type of Christ. He himself makes it the type of himself. He says he is of the true bread that he came down from Heaven just as the manna did. He says he will give his disciples the hidden manna, hidden in the ark. That all means that we are to take Christ by faith, and to trust him for his goodness and for pardon.

The Sabbath existed long before Moses. It commemorates the end of the creation. The fourth commandment only repeats it.

The Sabbath is for rest. Under the old law it was to be kept with the most absolute strictness. Under the law of Christianity it is changed to another day, and becomes rather a day of privilege, but still to be observed for religious purposes.

Murmuring is a great sin. But murmuring is complaining, finding fault with one's condition, scolding about the weather, or with anything that depends on God's Providence. A large part of our fault finding really is against God who put us where we are. Our duty is to make the best of our circumstances, or to get into better if we can. A fretful nature is hateful to God and man.

JESS.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "King Solomon's Mines" "She," Etc.

Muller jerked out his long speech in a succession of sentences, something as a school boy repeats a hardly learned lesson, fidgeting his feet and letting his eyes travel about the ground as he did so; and it was evident to John, who stood quite still and listened to it in my silence, that it was by no means an extemporary one. It had too clearly been composed for the occasion.

"I do not wish to quarrel with anybody, Meinheer Muller," he answered at length. "I never do quarrel unless it is forced on me, and then," he added, grimly, "I do my best to make it unpleasant for my enemy. The other day you attacked first my servant and then myself. I am glad that you now see that this was an improper thing to do, and, so far as I am concerned, there is an end of the matter," and he turned to enter the house.

Muller accompanied him as far as where Jantje was standing at the horses' heads. Here he stopped, and, putting his hand in his pocket, took out a two shilling piece and threw it to the Hottentot, calling to him to catch it.

Jantje was holding the horses with one hand. In the other he held his stick—a long walking kerrie that he always carried, the same on which he had shown Bessie the notches. In order to catch the piece of money he dropped the stick, and Muller's quick eye catching sight of the notches beneath the knob, he stooped down, picked it up, and examined it.

"What do these mean, boy?" he asked, pointing to the line of big and little notches, some of which had evidently been cut years ago.

Jantje touched his hat, spat upon the "Skotelman," as the natives of that part of Africa call a two shilling piece, and pocketed it before he answered. The fact that the giver had murdered all his near relations did not make the gift less desirable in his eyes. Hottentot moral sense is not very elevated.

"No, baas," he said, with a curious grin, "that is how I reckon. If anybody beats Jantje, Jantje cuts a notch upon the stick, and every night before he goes to sleep he looks at it, and says: 'One day you will strike that man twice who struck you once, and so on, baas. Look what a line of them there are, baas. One day I will pay them all back again, Baas Frank."

In another minute old Hans Coetzee came, and announced that it was time to be moving.

Accordingly the whole party got into their carts or on to their shooting horses, as the case might be, and started. Frank Muller was, John noticed, mounted as usual on his fine black horse. After having for more than half an hour along an indefinite kind of wagon track, the leading cart, in which was old Hans Coetzee himself, a Malay driver and a colored Cape boy, turned to the left across the open veldt, and the others followed in turn. This went on for some time, till at last they reached the crest of a rise that commanded a large sweep of open country, and here Hans halted and held up his hand, whereon the others halted, too. On looking out over the vast plain before him, John discovered the reason. About half a mile beneath them was a great herd of blesbuck, feeding, 300 or more of them, and beyond them again another herd of some sixty or seventy much larger and wider looking antelope, with white tails, which John at once recognized as vilderbeeste. Nearer to them again, dotted about here and there on the plain, were a couple of dozen or so of graceful yellow springbuck.

Then a council of war was held, which resulted in the men on horseback, among whom was Frank Muller—being dispatched to circumvent the herds, and drive them toward the carts, that took up their stations at various points toward which the buck were likely to make.

Then came a pause of a quarter of an hour or so, till, suddenly, from the far side of the opposite slope, John saw a compact puffs of white smoke float up into the air, and once the roll of a volley echoed down to the ears, followed by a long, lingering, intermittent thunder—the whole herd of buck turned and thundered toward them, stretched in a long line across the wide veldt, the springbuck first, then the blesbuck, looking, owing to their peculiar way of holding their heads down as they gallop, for all the world like a mounted great beard of goats, linked and mixed up with them were the vilderbeeste, who twisted and turned, and jumped into the air as though they had some object in their heads and were next second going to clear them. It is very difficult, even to the extraordinary method of progression of this ungainly animal, to guess at its intentions. Now it is a galloping vilderbeeste, then it is not, now it is his head, now his tail, and now his heels that prevent the unlucky shot in the water's bewildered reason, and now they all seem to be moving up together. On came the great herd, making the ground shake beneath their footfall, and after them galloped the mounted Boers, every now and again jumping from their horses to fire a shot into the line of game, which generally resulted in some poor animal being left sprawling on the ground, whereon the sportsmen would remount and continue the chase.

Presently the buck were within range of some of the guns in the carts and a regular fusillade began. About twenty blesbuck turned and came past John, within forty yards of him. Springing to the ground, he fired both barrels of his "express" at them as they tore past—alas and alas! without touching them. The first bullet struck under their bellies, the second must have shaved their backs. Reloading rapidly, he fired again at about 200 yards' range, and this time one fell to his second barrel. But he knew that it was a chance shot; he had fired at the last buck, and he had killed one ten paces in front of him. The fact of the matter is that this sort of shooting is exceedingly difficult till one knows how to do it.

Jumping into the cart again, and leaving the dead blesbuck to look after itself for the present—not a very safe thing to do in a

John, or rather Jantje, put the horses into a gallop, and away they went at full tear. Every few minutes or so they would pull up whenever the game was within range, and John would spring from the cart and let drive, and then jump in and follow on again.

Jantje had fired twenty-seven cartridges and killed three blesbuck and wounded a vilderbeeste, which they proceeded to chase. But the vilderbeeste was struck in the rump, and a buck so wounded will go a long way, and at very fast pace, and some miles [illegible] got more [illegible] crossing the crest of a flat [illegible] what [illegible] dead. A strange sight, however, [illegible] that, although it was [illegible] most undoubtedly was not the one that had wounded it, for that was [illegible] hanging down, about [illegible] yards behind the other animal, which had no [illegible] to somebody else's rifle, or the [illegible] for their back [illegible] vilderbeeste lay within 100 yards of [illegible] and Jantje pointed out to John that he [illegible] animal, from the cover of which he could [illegible] a good shot at his own wounded bull.

Accordingly, Jantje having [illegible] with the cart and horses out of sight under the shelter of the rise, John crawled upon his hands and knees and proceeded to carry out his stalk. He got on all right till he got quite close to the dead cow, and was just congratulating himself on the prospect of an excellent shot at the wounded bull, when suddenly something struck the ground violently just beneath his stomach, throwing up a cloud of earth and dust. He stopped amazed, and as he did so heard the report of a rifle somewhat to his right. Scarcely had he realized this when there was a sudden commotion in his hair, and the soft black felt hat that he was wearing started from his head, apparently of its own accord, and, after twirling round twice or thrice in the air, fell gently to the earth, and as it did so the sound of a second report reached his ears. It was now evident that somebody was firing at him; so, jumping up from his crouching position, he tossed his arms into the air and sprang and shouted in a way that left no mistake as to his whereabouts. In another minute he saw a man on horseback, cantering easily toward him, in whom he had little difficulty in recognizing as Frank Muller. He went and picked up his hat; there was a bullet hole right through it. Then, full of wrath, he advanced to meet Frank Muller.

SOMEBODY WAS FIRING AT HIM.

"What the —— do you mean by firing at me?" he asked.

"Allemachter, Carle!" (Almighty, my dear fellow) was the cool answer, "I thought that you were a vilderbeeste calf. I galloped the cow and killed her, and she had a calf with her, and when I got the cartridges out of my rifle—for one stuck and took me some time—and the new ones in, I looked up, and there, as I thought, was the calf. So I gave my rifle one and let drive, first with one barrel and then with the other, and when I saw you jump up like that and shout, and that I had been firing at a man, I nearly fainted. Thank the Almighty I did not hit you."

John hesitatingly—"I suppose that I am bound to take it so, Meinheer Muller," he said. "But I have been told that you have the most wonderful sight of any man in these parts, which makes it [illegible] you should mistake a white man upon his hands and knees for a vilderbeeste calf."

"Does the captain think to insult a friend?" [illegible] John, looking straight into Muller's eyes, which fell before his own. "No! I know that your curious mistake very nearly cost me my life. Look here!" and he took a lock of his brown hair out of the crown of his pocket-torn hat and showed it to the other.

"Ay, it was very close. Let us thank God that you escaped."

"It could not well have been closer, I think, and for the sake of my people who go out shooting with you, you should not make such a mistake again. Good morning."

The hard-faced Dutchman, [illegible] on, sat still his horse, stroking his [illegible] and looking after John as he strode [illegible] Englishman's back [illegible] he [illegible] vilderbeeste had long ago vanished.

"I wonder," he said, [illegible] "if I turned his head round and rode [illegible] away, 'if the Ally' [illegible] right after all, if there is a God." Frank Muller was [illegible] ciently nigh and [illegible] a free thinker. "It almost looks like it." He went on, [illegible] out of sight, that the one bullet passed under his belly and the other just cleared his neck [illegible] of burning hair. I aimed carefully enough, too, and I could make the shot nineteen times out of twenty and not miss. Bah, a [illegible]! I snap my fingers at fate. Chance is the only god. Chance! I was [illegible] about [illegible] dead grass till death comes down like the veldt fire and burns them up. But there are men who ride chance as one rides a young colt, who turn its headlong rushing and rearing to their own ends—who let it fly hither and thither till it is weary, and then canter it along the road that leads to triumph. I, Frank Muller, am one of those men. I never fail in the end. I will kill that Englishman. Perhaps I will kill old Silas Croft and the Hottentot, too. Bah! they do not know what is coming. I know, I have helped to lay the mine, and unless they [illegible] to my will I shall be the one to fire it. I will kill them all and I will take Mooifontein, and then I will marry Bessie. She will fight against it, but that will make it all the sweeter. She loves that roobaatje; I know it, and I will kiss her over his dead body. Ah! there are the carts. I don't see the captain. Driven home, I suppose, on account of the shock to his nerves. Well, I I must talk to those fools. 'Lord, what fools they are with their talk about the 'land' and the 'verdomde Britische gouvernment.' They don't know what is good for them. Silly sheep, with Frank Muller for a shepherd! Ay, and they shall have Frank Muller for a president one day, and I will rule them, too. Bah! I hate the English, but I am glad that I am half English for all that, for that is where I get the brains! But these people—

"Baas," said Jantje to John, as they were driving home, and "Baas Frank shot at you."

"How do you know that?" asked John.

"I saw him. He was striking the wounded bull, and [illegible] at all. There [illegible]

[illegible] "Ay, Mr. Croft," he said, taking the old man's hand, "that I will to the test of my ability."

"Thank you, my boy, thank you. I don't like talking much about these things, but as I said, I am getting old, and the Almighty may require my account any day, and it is does I rely on you to look after these two girls. It is a wild country this, and one never knows what may happen in it from day to day, and they will want it. Sometimes I wish I were clear of the place. And now I'm going to bed. I am beginning to feel as though I had done my day's work in the world. I'm getting feeble, John, that is the fact of it."

After that he always called him John.

Of Jess they heard but little. She wrote every week, it is true, and gave an accurate account of all that was going on at Pretoria and of her daily doings, but she was one of those people whose letters tell one absolutely nothing of themselves and of what is passing in their minds. They might as well have prefaced "Our Pretoria Letter," as Bessie sarcastically, after reading three sheets in Jess' curious, upright handwriting, "Once you lose sight of Jess," she went on, "she might as well be dead for all you learn about her." Not that one learns very much when she is with one," she added reflectively.

"She is a peculiar woman," said John, thoughtfully. At first he had missed her very much, for peculiar as she undoubtedly was, she had touched a new string in him, and, ignorant of the extent of which he had not till then been himself aware. And when it came, it had answered pretty strongly for a long time, but it was slowly vibrating [illegible] again, and has a tinge of [illegible] takes his place in [illegible] the chords. But she stayed on another week or so, and it might have been more enduring.

In fact, though Jess had gone away, Bessie had not. On the contrary, she was always [illegible] and, in with that tender [illegible] a woman, however [illegible] can [illegible] prevent her from intruding on the man she loves. Her vanity [illegible] about the place like a [illegible] about a garden, for she was [illegible] and as pure and good as she was lovely. No, could John long remain in ignorance of her partiality for him. He was not a vain man—very much the reverse, indeed—but neither was he a fool. And it came to be said that, though Bessie never [illegible] the hands of marriage, neither did she [illegible] partiality [illegible] her [illegible]. Indeed, it was [illegible] if her [illegible] so. Not that she was actuated by the half-divine [illegible] passion, such as animated her sister, which is a very rare thing, and, take it all [illegible] as [illegible] and [illegible] to the ordinary conditions of this prosaic and work-a-day life as it is rare—but she was [illegible] and truly in love after the ordinary young womanly fashion, indeed, for passion, measured by the every day standard, would have proved to be a deep one. However this was, she was undoubtedly prepared to make John Neil a faithful and a loving wife if he chose to ask her to become so.

And as the weeks went on—though, of course, he knew nothing of all this—it became a very serious question to John whether he should not ask her. It is not good for man to live alone, especially in the Transvaal, and it was not possible for him to pass day by day at the side of so much beauty and so much grace without thinking that it would be well to draw the bond of union closer. Indeed, had John been a younger man or had less experience he would have succumbed to the temptation much sooner than he did. But he was neither very young nor very inexperienced. Ten years or more ago, in his green

THE LOSS AND THE GAIN

Memorial Address Delivered at Tecumseh on Decoration Day by Rev. J. M. Gotshell.

[illegible] speak in praise of the heroic and our country's dead is to me a labor of gratitude and love. Where events and memories are associated with this hour. More eloquent than any words of mine is your presence which assures that Decoration Day is not forgotten, and that the martyrs of liberty are living in your souls. To-day, what gathering all over the land, what pilgrimages to those places where sacred [illegible] and those dearly [illegible] tarry, to decorate to hallow remembrances, to shed their tears, and wing their prayers toward Heaven.

We are sometimes told that the events of some twenty-five years ago are now but matters of history. Largely that is true. But to us who come as members of the Grand Army of the Republic and old soldiers, to those who come as mourners yet for their loved ones who fell in the contest they are still sacred, and our promise and their love will ever keep their memory green, and we and they remember, honor and cherish them, so long as we dwell on this so-called footstool of God.

In that mighty struggle what formation of friendships! Such as the years have not lessened or weakened, yearly Decoration Day and Re-unions perpetuate and hallow. What ties were formed then, amid those scenes of hard-ship and adversity. Stronger and more enduring than those made under peaceful skies and in times of prosperity. To-day the old veterans in remembrance fight their battles over, and heart to heart and hand in hand in silence vow ever abiding fealty to each other.

The soldier pays none other than respect respect to the comrades that go[illegible]. Thus marches slowly with muffled drum and reversed arms to the consecrated graves. Consecrated to country, to country, and to God. There deposits flowers, fires his farewell volley and then marches away to the music of a quickstep that [illegible] paying and respect to the dead he knows the duties to the living must be met and done. So to-day we come, factory workshop store, office, farm and home, to mingle our memories, loves and tears, to sing our anthems or songs and speak our words of praise, and on the morrow resume our part again, to earn our daily bread, in the great on psalm of human enterprise, triumph and destiny. To-day we commune once more with memory's angels concerning those that tried men's souls and women's too, men who fell in defense of freedom; comrades, not dead, but who have called a day's march to the front in reaching the peaceful [illegible] of heaven. [illegible]

We decorate yonder graves in remembrance of our nation's heroes, who planted liberty's ensign and for them scatter our flowers. For they battled and fell for country, humanity and God. We claim them as our heritage of freedom and he who [illegible] it, is a shame to manhood. Liberty is a mockery to the most high. The memories them of this [illegible] priceless legacy and we pause to embody them in hymn and prayer in thought and feeling that our nation's psalm may become sublime and its peace like benediction from the Supreme.

What a band of witnesses encompass us! On the morrow many of that broke up the Grand Army on High and [illegible] the [illegible] of Mt. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] earth, where the battles were fought, [illegible] of disease or injury was [illegible] to suffer [illegible] fingers and die. They young who with [illegible] and shot and shell, courage and [illegible] young [illegible] from the grasp of [illegible] and parted treasure kiss the [illegible] and [illegible] delivery [illegible] to drag and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] I have seen [illegible] in the dust. Riddled by [illegible] thousand bullets, [illegible] hours and hour, shrunk with disease, [illegible] the dead. But [illegible] the victor [illegible] the rebellion and the great rebellion [illegible] be [illegible] regarding its struggle victory and glory.

Take the gigantic triumphs of our age in the realm of science, the lightning, the wheel of unimaginable speed, the [illegible] and roof of our factory [illegible] the miracle of furnaces, the heart of hammers, the noble toil that [illegible] the treasures from out the earth [illegible] with frontage the [illegible] of the husbandman. Do these create no feeling of admiration and wonder and of uplifting pride? Can we be unconcerned as to the strokes and sweeps of human energy in the domain of freedom. Is it not inspiring to contemplate the enterprise of man in this supreme century of ours. Does no [illegible] gladdening civilization and christendom can human ears be closed to the divine psalm of peace now echoed as never before back to heaven? Come there no emotions of ecstacy, of devotion and prayer, in touching the work of humanity's [illegible] the Kingdom of Jesus?

As the years come and go we are being moved farther and further away from all the physical traces of the war. Peaceful flowers blown in the rural pathway where once trod the [illegible] with such sad hearts and desolation. They mark the spot where some brave boy in blue sacrificed his life for his country. Where the ground absorbed his blood and he rested his head as his spirit returned unto God who gave it. To-day the perfume of blossoms fills the air, where one day thundered the cannon's roar and the dust of the earth and the blood of the patriots powder darkened the light of the sun.

Soon these veterans will come no more to Post meetings, Cemetery and Lowly [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] grave. Soon no guard of honor of the Grand Army on earth to accompany the casket in which a soldier is cradled for the grave. Other hands will be called upon to attend to all these offices of memory, decoration and love. Will these acts of remembrance the center and Decoration Day be forgotten? Never, so long as the historian can pen it in terms of glory, or the poet give it rhythmic in his immortal thought and verse. These sacred memories cannot perish, these old war relics be put aside, until human hearts are no longer here to love and remember their own. No longer throb with the impulse of country, patriotism and liberty. No longer quickened with aspiration and prayer, charmed with the hope song of mankind, its destiny and perpetuity.

Before the twilight of evening has come every soldier's grave, unless unknown, will have been marked with our country's flag, visited by comrades, and be remembered with flowers. Who shall say that the scene will be unnoticed of heaven, and make the upper corridors of God's house ring with praise? But let us not forget that far more abiding than what resembles stripes and stars or the flowers that soon perish, more deeply graven than any carved names or lines on monument or tomb stone are the name and memory of some one who is gone to souls that love. These will visit the so-termed resting place of their dead, bedew it with tears, and be sweet heaven with their offering of solicitude and prayer. Oh, what transfigured memories come as we gather here, of husband, father and son, of lover, neighbor and friend, who rallied when freedom called and to defend it, died! The personal loss and struggle! Who but Heaven can write? Who in human words express it? But are these to be the sole trustees of the nation's gratitude? Are these sacred names and memories all the nation has to perpetuate honor and cherish? Come there no gains, no responsibilities, demanding more than all the rest, a nation's consecration to the principles upon which liberty rests? Let heaven seal anew its vows in behalf of freedom and those vows and in eternal results and verity.

Out from our homes went some of the best young men to engage in the war. Parental hearts can tell something of the trial and the sacrifice. Many a mother, wife and the beloved smothered their sorrow and asked heaven in silent and sacred prayer to guard and protect their own. Had the thousands who fell, lived and wrought among us, who can tell where they would have stood in history? Their influence had effect in shaping the century. But are they unhonored? Did they not help to win one of the grandest triumphs of the world? Nay, not so, for by their noble deed and valor they shapened a destiny approved of God. But who has summed the gain? Enough has already come since the contest ended to make the nation record it in undying gratitude. Some souls will not realize it until heaven gives them back their own in that reunion in the New Jerusalem. Those who look back to the carnage of the war, and deeply feel as if some bolt had wounded their own hearts, may not come to feel any personal gain from this sorrow. It can never be made up to them in their personal lives. The gain only comes through the subtle and marvelous transmutation of the great law of sacrifice. The gain of the few must be found in the gain of the many. The fruits of the war belong to the entire nation. As the years go by, North and South share in the benefits. The blessing of a larger liberty, of a purer national union and a more righteous peace.

How swiftly time comes and goes! A quarter of a century gone since that day when first we rallied, and in our neighborhoods the flutter of freedom stirred rebellious outcrops and gave its cause an everlasting shame. To-day those who met us then as our foes great as in warm fellowship, and in their hearts thank God for that hour when our old banner in victory floated again over Southern land, sky, gulf and sea.

A little more than a year ago at Montgomery, Alabama, the corner stone of a monument was laid, dedicated to the memory of the Confederate dead. While on every side were pilgrimages and the names of Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Sydney Johnston and others from the capitals dome over towering all, there floated in the breeze the nation's banner. Before addressing the multitude, Jefferson Davis turned with eyes dimmed with tears and saluted the old ensign he once attempted to assail. As he stood there that day, on that hero's grave, where he had [illegible] there was no antagonism standing to him and that sea of faces. Now men and women stood there with him on that afternoon of April 26th. The young girl who in all her [illegible] the stars and bars overshadow is now the mother of two noble boys, pensioners for our glorious old union, and may yet be mustered in as the sons of veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic. On that day mentioned, April 26th last, an Ohio man hoisted above him the old banner of starry blue. The old flag is honored and loved. Sectional strife and bitterness is largely put away, and it must depart forever. This nation is too noble to harbor revenge, the North too magnanimous not to overlook and forgive. One [illegible] to the providence of God is [illegible] the supreme [illegible] the sovereignty of the Republic. Then let this Decoration Day stand as a reminder of the priceless gain that has come from such a priceless sacrifice, and more and more it hallows the day [illegible] and love of liberty and as the consecration day of a nation's gratitude.

[illegible] Michigan State Troops, again you march with us and together we honor the brave boys in blue who fell in defense of liberty. [illegible] the cost and of your [illegible] rains wip[illegible] and blood mingled out. He was [illegible] but we [illegible] honor. Human [illegible] but there was something [illegible] in his quiet, [illegible] and manly [illegible] Will in May will [illegible] to [illegible] Hence to the [illegible] to [illegible] You as one of your number, to his friends, to his mother and to God.

To-day together we hail in yonder cemetery, beside the mounds of those who have gone from your ranks and the Grand Army of the Republic. [illegible] never face the foe we faced from '61 and '62 to '65. We think they were in the wrong, but we cannot call them cowards. We conquered, but not until they had been overcome. The victory was at last ours, but we won it amid mighty contest, when those who opposed us had done their best. Some brave hearts wore the gray, but the boys triumphed who donned the blue. You are now the minute-men of Michigan and the nation, and I resolve concerning the position which you so well and proudly occupy. I know you will never make it less, or suffer it to be covered with dishonor. It is yours to sustain a soldier's record, already so nobly won. Stand by it in your manhood, loyalty and aspiration. Heaven help us all to be true to what is divine in freedom, country and daily life.

It is true that a new South has sprung up from the soil once made red with human blood. Its team of enterprise enlists the attention of the world. She welcomes the sons of toil and invites the artisan within her borders. With this sectionalism must disappear, and Mason and Dixon's line be obliterated forever. We come then at this hour with our presence and our flowers, with our hymns and prayers, with our thought and emotions come as neighbors and friends, as citizens and soldiers and comrades; as lovers of unity and freedom; as believers in the universal sway of truth and love; in the one living and true God, who rules [illegible] nations at His will. As among those who rejoice in the everlasting triumph of the King of Christ, and here assert that these memories shall be preserved, hallowed graves never be desecrated, and commemoration on Decoration Day never be forgotten. This our tribute to valor and a pledge of peace, while heaven responds a glad Amen.

NORTHERN LENAWEE FARMERS CLUB.

The May meeting was held at Alonzo Mills' on Saturday, May 7th. Owing to the farmers being so busy there was not as large a turnout as usual, although the ladies were well represented to discuss the fruit question. The literary part of the program was very short. Mrs. O. P. Remington opened the discussion by a paper which we should have been glad to had published, but Mrs. Remington did not wish to have it put in print, even after a unanimous vote to do so. Then the following communication from C. W. Wells of Minneapolis, Minn., was read:

To the Northern Lenawee Farmers Club. Kind friends. This is a Ladies subject and I have no doubt it will be well handled.—"The best method of canning fruit." I can judge better when the fruit is preserved, but would say have good fruit. Prepare it for table use before canning. Don't put the fruit up thinking it may spoil, and then you have saved the sugar, as you are apt to hurry and not do your work well, but rather prepare it for keeping with sugar to suit the taste, and use the best granulated, which is the cheapest. Use glass cans of the best make. Have the can warm when heated, the fruit hot, fill the can full, lay on the top tight and stand the can top down until the can is cool, seam, there is no leak, and if all right set away in a dark place, a dark fruit closet is the best and would also say the top should always be tightened up a little before setting away, and if all right the fruit will keep in good shape. To can fruit and can it well is quite a trade, requiring much care. It is impossible to retain the natural flavor of some fruits. Straw[illegible] will keep well but will have no strawberry flavor in part. I expect to meet with opposition in this opinion, but being far away can hear it well.

Although I have tried to answer Lee's sharp questions for good fruit [illegible] meeting [illegible] good points on the corn question. In conclusion would say, Farming is a great Profession, and requires as much thought, practical experience, thorough work, close application to business to make a practical success. Yours with genuine respect, CALVIN W. WELLS.

The two papers read at our last meeting on the question of the question. The [illegible] seemed to be with the majority that with some fruits it is best to sweeten up to eat, and for serving others were less positive to sweeten unless used. Peaches seemed to be an exception. Do not wish to sweeten after they are heated, better not sweet.

After the [illegible] of the world [illegible] Mr. W. W. Wright was [illegible] Secretary elected as an honorary member of this society, after which the society adjourned until the last Saturday in August, to meet at W. B. Keyser's. A fine program will be given. B. The Secretary.

OBITUARIES.

Northern New York and was [illegible] years and 3 months old at the time of her death. She was the second of eight children, 3 daughters and 5 sons—of Anselmo and Lucinda Winslow. The two sisters and three of the brothers still survive. [illegible] recently deceased were married in her native town in 1853, came to Tecumseh in 1854 and settled on the place at "Newburg," which continued to be their home until called to the higher life. She was the mother of six children, [illegible] survived four daughters and [illegible] sons and one daughter died in early childhood. Two of the daughters were present at the funeral. The other, wife of the departed mother, had been spending the winter in Western Kansas, but was detained at home by the dangerous illness of her husband.

The deceased departed this life at Chesaning on Sunday, May [illegible]. The remains were brought to her old home in Newburg on Monday, where the funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. M. Gotchell. The burial was in the family lot in the Tecumseh Cemetery. She was a kind wife, and a faithful mother, beloved by all who knew her. Of her it may be truly said: Death is swallowed up in victory.

From a late number of the Sedalia, Mo., Bazoo, we copy the following account of the death of Mrs. Ailie King Lewis. The deceased was a former resident of Tecumseh, and attended our high school at one time. Her old acquaintances here will learn of her early demise with sincere regret and sympathy for the stricken mourners.

The funeral of Mrs. T. N. Lewis will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at the Congregational church, Rev. B. F. Boller officiating.

Alice Carrie King was born in Albion, Michigan, about twenty-seven years ago, and her childhood days were principally passed in that state. After the death of her parents which occurred some twelve years ago, she made her home with her sister, Mrs. Fred VanCamp of this city. Before her marriage to Mr. Lewis, she was an acknowledged belle in the society of this city, and no lovlier bride ever went to the marriage altar. She was taken sick at Wichita, Kansas, about three months ago, and owing to the fact that her husband's duties, he being chief clerk in the superintendent's office on the Fort Scott and Wichita road, necessitated his absence from home much of the time, it was deemed best to bring her to her sister, Mrs. Fred VanCamp, in this city. At first she rallied, and it was decided that she could be taken to Lookout mountain, but in a short time she grew worse, and last Friday the physicians in attendance pronounced her dying. She seemed conscious until the last moment, and although unable to speak, lovingly caressed her heart-broken husband and other relatives. She died peacefully at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, and as was said above, the funeral will take place to-morrow. She was a lovely girl, a true and devoted wife, and the grieving relatives have the sympathy of all in their affliction. Her only child died about a year ago.

On the 16th of May, Mr. S. B. Terry, of this village, received a telegram from Fort Worth, Texas, conveying the sad news that his son, Norvell, died very suddenly on the preceding day. Full particulars were not received for several days, but Dr. Terry has since learned that his death was caused by an attack of inflammation of the bowels.

The deceased was born in Tecumseh village forty-two years ago, but at an early age his father's family removed to Ridgeway and the years of his boyhood were passed in that village. After leaving Ridgeway he spent five years in Detroit, residing with his uncle, Dr. John Terry. He then removed to Jackson, where he was engaged in business for nearly five years. During the ensuing two years, he lived at Toledo and about six years ago he went to Fort Worth, Texas, to take charge of a large crockery store, which position he continued to hold until his death.

He was a young man of fine business attributes, possessed of a quiet, genial disposition, and made friends with every one. He leaves a father, Sherman B. Terry, and one sister, Mrs. P. J. Welling, both of this village, to mourn his untimely departure.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

We clip the following from the Ionia Sentinel Mail of May 26th. Thus another of Tecumseh's bachelors becomes a benedict. We can assure the bride, although a stranger among us, that her choice will prove a wise one, as we have every reason to believe that LaVern has been equally fortunate. Rev. Phelps, of this village, tied the mystic knot, and it was done after the Episcopal ritual and in genuine Tecumseh fashion. The HERALD extends its congratulations, not with the mere formality common to such occasions, but from a heart overflowing with the sincerest wishes for the well-fare of an old and true friend. May the beacon light of happiness and prosperity illumine their pathway through life.

The marriage of Mr. LaVern P. Coller and Mrs. Mary M. Wolverton took place at St. John's Episcopal church this morning at 9 o'clock. The church was open at 8:30 and a goodly number of friends and acquaintances of the contracting parties were present to witness the ceremonies. Prof. Smith presided at the organ, and at the appointed hour the bridal party marched up the aisle to the altar to the wedding march, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Phelps, of Tecumseh, according to the ritual of the Episcopal church, of which the bride is a member. There were no bridesmaids or groomsmen, the two ushers, Mr. Reed Taylor and John Young Jr. leading the march, and the bride was dressed in traveling costume. After the ceremony, the couple repaired to the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. & Mrs. H. L. Mitchell, where, in company with their relatives, they sat down to a wedding breakfast before leaving on the 10:50 D. L. & N. train for Tecumseh, their future home. The affair was entirely informal, but a number of elegant presents were presented by friends. Mr. Wheeler has been a resident of this city about one year and has taken a leading place as an artist and musician, and is honored as a man by all. The bride has spent nearly her whole life in this city, is a graduate of our high school, and is esteemed by all who know her. The best wishes of the Mail accompany the couple on their way through life.

The City Band wound up Decoration Day with a free concert in front of the Lilley House in the evening.

Miss May Hunt, of Manchester, was the guest of the Misses Heesen on Saturday, Sunday and Monday last.

Let us all take hold of the business with a united spirit and get up an old fashioned rousing Independence Day celebration.

We have received Rev. Mr. Borden's address delivered at the Decoration Day exercises at Britton, but it came too late to be put in type this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren VanAntwerp, of Deerfield spent last Sunday at R. C. VanAntwerp's in this village. Loren is now running a harness shop in Deerfield and doing well.

Mrs. S. A. James, of Detroit, is passing a few weeks at her father's, O. B. DeWolf's. Sam comes out each Saturday night and spends the next Sunday with his wife and baby.

New pulpit furniture has been placed in the Universalist church which adds much to the appearance of the audience room. The outfit was purchased by the ladies social.

A bulletin board at the foot of the stairs leading to the telephone office announces the base ball games upon their completion in afternoons. The scores are taken over the line from Adrian.

Fred Deuel's steamer, the G. A. R. passed up Chicago street about three o'clock Tuesday afternoon loaded on tracks and drawn by a four horse team. It attracted almost as much attention as a circus procession.

Teachers who wish to review for examinations and all who desire a thorough course of study for five weeks, should remember the summer school at Adrian College, beginning July 18th. For particulars address Pres. D. S. Stephens, Adrian, Mich.

The Toledo Blade is large, orderly new web perfecting press which will be completed by September 1st next. It will be the fastest press in the United States with all the latest improvements. The Blade is one of our very best exchanges and we are glad to note this evidence of prosperity.

The Semi-Centennial Celebration of the University of Michigan promises to be a grand affair. The exercises of commencement week will begin on Sunday, June 26th and close on Thursday, June 30th. The University desires to obtain the address of all its former students. Address J. H. Wade, Ann Arbor, Mich.

In Bulletin No. 26, issued in May from Agricultural College Department of Zoology and Entomology, on page 4 a typographical error makes the proper proportion of Paris Green or London Purple to water for spraying apple trees for the coming March, to mean pound of Paris Green to two gallons of water, whereas the proportion should be one pound of Paris Green or London Purple to two barrels or one hundred gallons of water.

Lieut. E. Pratt Case went to the Lilley House for dinner the other day, and the waiter boy had to seat him at the head of officers' tables. In a moment after a gentleman was seated at his right hand who proved to be Capt. Ellis, and within three minutes thereafter Capt. Mann was ushered to a seat at his left hand. All three served in the same Regiment, the 7th Mich. Cav., and it was the first time the three had met since 1865. It is needless to say that they passed a happy dinner hour together after had an enjoyable chat afterwards.

Judge Stacy narrowly escaped a serious accident last Friday. He was seated in the buggy in front of Abner Wilson's talking with Ab. when a bicyclist came up behind and frightened the horse. Old Pat turned square around and dropped the buggy bottom side up in less than no time. Edna and Crinnie Beardsley were also in the buggy. The Judge rolled out on the ground as easily and gracefully as an India rubber foot ball. Little Crin landed on top of him and Edna clambered out on the upper side of the buggy. Fortunately the only damage done was a broken suspender for little Crin.

Mrs. Ezra F. Blood, of Tecumseh, has received a pension.

[illegible] is being placed on the Heesen block this week.

N. M. Sutton spent last Sunday and Monday with friends in Detroit.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo has been spending a few days on the old farm at Newberg.

There is no loss without some gain. The rain on Monday, although it spoiled Decoration Day, was a good thing for the farmers.

A lot of new shelving has been placed in the public Library Rooms to accommodate the new books that will soon be added to the Library.

Decoration Day about the county was seriously dampened by the rain. The day was observed however as well as the weather would permit.

John J. Adam's subscription expired on the 25th of May. He called on the 26th, and liquidated for another year in advance, according to his usual custom.

A. W. Haight has moved his office into the second story of the new Wheeler block in Adrian, and is now giving his whole attention to insurance.

Wide Awake, best of young folks' periodicals all the world over, begins its 25th volume and celebrates June with a number of singular richness and promise.

Mrs. H. E. Stout gave a tea party last Saturday afternoon in honor of her Mother Stout's birthday, and a very enjoyable afternoon was passed by those who were favored with an invitation.

The band concert last Saturday was delayed until evening on account of Prof. Skinner's absence at Brooklyn where he was attending the races. He could not reach home in season for an afternoon concert.

Prof. U. R. Evans, of Adrian, was in town last Saturday and gave the HERALD a call. He has just completed a successful term of penmanship at Clifton, and expects to go there again during the summer.

Those interested in wild flowers should make a note of the fact that Mr. E. E. Sterns, 23 Union Square, New York, offers to furnish, without charge, the correct scientific and popular names of any plant in flower or fern that may be sent to him.

Capt. Lawrence has received a postal from the John A. Dix Post G. A. R. of San Jose, Cal. containing the order for the observance of Memorial Day. It is signed by S. B. Anderson, Adjutant. "Brock" remembers the Tecumseh boys who were on last summer's excursion.

Richard Caldwell, of Franklin, has got up a new and useful article in the line of hay racks. The foundation for the rack makes a good ordinary wagon box. The two wings are so constructed that they can be placed in an oblique position to form a hay rack, or in a perpendicular position to form a stock rack. It is the most complete combination of racks we have ever seen. The changes can be made easily and quickly. One of them is now on exhibition at Thos. Elliott's blacksmith shop in this village where farmers can inspect it. We understand that Mr. Caldwell has applied for a patent on it.

Outsiders frequently wonder where the railroads obtain proper return for some of the ingenious but costly methods adopted to advertising their lines. One of the latest to attract our attention is a nicely bound 64 page book entitled, "What to Do," containing description and the aggregate cost of a large number of games suitable for parlor or porch, which has been issued by the Passenger Department of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway, and will, we understand, be forwarded postpaid upon receipt of cents by C. H. Warren, General Passenger Agent, at St. Paul. It is a book that would ornament almost any table and interest both old and young.

The Art Amateur for June begins the seventeenth volume with a new cover and a profusion of attractive illustrations and vigorous letter press. Three figure and drapery studies in two colors, a striking full-page portrait and a number of pen drawings after pictures and sculpture accompany an interesting biographical account of Sir Frederick Leighton, President of the British Royal Academy. There is a capital notice of the Paris Salon, with an admirable two page drawing of Ridgway Knight's picture, "In October," together with reviews of the American Artists' and Prize Fund Exhibition and the new Seney Collection, a Boston letter on New England art progress, an amusing French account of the Morgan sale, and a timely article on composite photographs. The minor departments are lavishly filled and in every respect the number fully maintains the high reputation of the magazine. Price 35 cents. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Geo. Kies is spending the week at Toledo.

Herb. Reed of Manchester was in town Monday.

J. L. Traun was in town yesterday on a short visit.

H. W. Snow, of Morenci, was in the village last Monday.

L. P. Tribon went to Detroit last Saturday, returning Monday.

Dr. George Ferguson spends a few days in Coldwater this week.

Mrs. L. McAde, of Detroit, is visiting at Tecumseh this week.

Frank Spencer and Jno. Brown went to Adrian Monday to celebrate Decoration Day.

Rev. F. Adkins is attending the Lenawee Baptist Association at Adrian this week.

Kindergarten society will meet at the home of Mrs. C. D. Bills at seven o'clock next Tuesday evening.

Persons owning hedges and trees in the cemetery and wishing them trimmed, are requested to notify the Sexton.

The base ball club has marked out a diamond on their new grounds and otherwise improved it, and will commence practice at once.

The American Magazine for June is a superior number and improves with each succeeding issue. It is rapidly taking its place among our best periodicals.

The noon train North yesterday had two locomotives attached, and two parlor coaches containing the Jackson rifles on their way home from the National drill.

There is considerable talk of a grand 4th of July celebration in Tecumseh, and there is no reason why we shouldn't wake up and have a rousing one.

The newspaper, which has been prepared by the Rhetoric Class, was read yesterday at a session of the class, by the Editor in Chief, Jenny Fitzsimmons. It was named the High School Hustler, and the contents merited the name.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Coller, of Adrian, spent Sunday in Tecumseh. Mr. Coller always combines business with pleasure, and before returning Monday morning he sold a handsome cottage organ to Fred Gamble, of this place.

The members of the gymnasium wish it understood that the organization has not gone "where the wood-bine twineth" but has only adjourned during the summer months. The dumb bells, gloves, etc., will receive proper attention as soon as cold weather sets in next fall.

A brick tank has been built in the cellar of the engine house and a force pump attached thereto to feed the boiler of the engine with water. The assistant engineer has been improving the appearance of the engine room with pictures etc., and visitors to see the engine are assured of a clean and pleasant place to enter.

Charlie Cummins has accepted a position as boiler inspector for the Hartford insurance company, the same company that Robt. Stretch has been traveling for. He commences his duties yesterday with headquarters at Chicago. We understand Mr. Stretch has given up his position with the Co., and is now engaged in perfecting a patent right.

Mrs. H. L. Stewart, Mrs. M. P. Brown and Mary C. Wood attended the Department Convention of the W. C. T. U. held in Ann Arbor last week and report it very interesting and profitable meeting. Mary T. Lathrop addressed a large and appreciative audience on Sunday evening. Union Lake excursion. Also Mrs. H. L. Stewart, Mrs. M. E. Sutton and Mrs. M. P. Brown started Monday morning this week for Port Huron to attend the convention of the State W. C. T. U. The collections in the various churches of this village and Texas and other States now engaged in missionary work, amounted to $[illegible] which was sent by our delegates to the state treasurer to be used for this purpose.

Card of Thanks

The daughters and grandson of Mrs. S. McNeil wish to express their sincere thanks to the friends and neighbors who so kindly rendered them their timely assistance, in our hour of affliction, also to the choir, and clergyman that officiated.

Fourth of July.

All citizens interested in a Fourth of July celebration in Tecumseh this year are requested to meet at the Council Building, Tuesday evening, June 7th at 8 o'clock. Let there be a good attendance, other towns are moving let us not be in the rear.

Just received a large stock of Binding Twine from the McCormick Co., of the very best quality and binds guaranteed. Call and see me before you buy. C. A. Slayton.

MEMORIAL DAY

THE REGULAR PROGRAM BROKEN UP BY THE CONTRITIOUS RAIN

The Day Fully Observed as Well as Possible, Considering the Inclement Weather.

A rain never came more opportunely to disarrange a public celebration than the storm of last Monday. The sky was overcast early in the morning, and about eight o'clock, the rain began to drizzle down, and the drizzle continued with now and then a good sharp shower until three o'clock, in [illegible] would look for a few moments, but only for the purpose of getting a new point. Notwithstanding the discouraging prospects, however, donations of flowers continued to pour in, and the ladies were industriously at work during the forenoon transforming them into beautiful wreaths and bouquets. About three o'clock the closing shower actually arrived the clouds broke and which [illegible] thereafter, the City Band, the G. A. R. Post, and Co. C, filed out of their respective headquarters, formed in line on Chicago street, and proceeded directly to the cemetery. An abundance of floral mementoes had been prepared, which the G. A. R. boys took with them to the cemetery. The exercises at the cemetery were carried out somewhat hurriedly but with the usual ceremony. They were in charge of Post Commander Chas. Davis and Chaplain Barnes. Not a grave was left uncovered and all were suitably decorated. Upon the return of the procession to the village, Co. C. broke ranks and retired. The Band and Grand Army members assembled in G. A. R. Hall where the literary exercises arranged for the afternoon were presented to all who could gain admittance to the room. The members of Post regretted very much that they were compelled to hold these exercises in so small a room, but there seemed to be no other alternative.

Post Commander Davis presided. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. H. Babbitt. An address was given by Rev. J. M. Getchell, which may be found elsewhere. The band gave two or three of their best selections.

Fred Deuel's steamer quietly rested on the placid waters of the Globe Pond during the day, and other features of the program as previously arranged failed to materialize. But all interested can rest satisfied that they did their best under the circumstances, and that the memory of our soldier dead was fitly celebrated and the sacred day properly observed.

SABBATH SERVICES.

The usual memorial services were held on Sunday evening, May 29th, at the Presbyterian church. Evening services at the other churches were all discontinued. The G. A. R. Post and Co. C. attended in a body and occupied seats in front. An eloquent discourse was preached by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, who was assisted by Revs. Potter and Vincent. The choir rendered some fine music appropriate to the occasion. The large audience room of the church was completely filled and the services from first to last were interesting and impressive.

CARD OF THANKS.

The members of Ira Davis Post G. A. R. of Tecumseh, desire to publicly express their thanks to those persons who lent their aid on Memorial Day, to Rev. W. H. Babbitt for his eloquent Sunday discourse, to Rev. J. M. Getchell for his appropriate address, on the 30th, to the ladies for their generous donations of flowers and preparing the floral emblems, to the Tecumseh City Band for their valuable assistance, to Co. C. for their assistance in the line of march and attendance, who assisted in the exercises incident to Memorial Day. Those who have participated their aid to their work and their peculiar appropriateness in the services, and they are entitled to extend for their sympathy and efficient aid.

At a session of the west side school board last Friday evening, Mr. C. M. Robbins, of Constantine, was engaged to succeed Mr. Wilson as principal, at a salary of $800. Mr. Wilson goes to Constantine where he receives an increase of salary of $200 per year, or $1200. Mr. Wilson has been a most successful teacher here, has fully sustained the standing of the school and we are sorry so valuable a man is about to leave us. We can only hope his successor will prove equally as valuable.—Blissfield Advance.

Michigan papers are calling the attention of farmers to the fact that potatoes have been for years one of the most profitable of farm crops. The prices obtained have not allured in the general depression of farming products, yet the cost of raising, digging, housing and the security of the crop in unfavorable seasons, are much improved by and adequate food insurance. Michigan ought to be a good market for another year.

A Miraculous Escape from the Grave.

"I have been in poor health, with a diseased stomach and liver, causing a cankered mouth continually for ten years. I kept about my house until a year ago last June. For three years prior to that time I had a severe pain in the region of my heart, at times shooting past endurance. It effected my shoulder, took all strength from my arms, could get no relief only by doubling. My stomach being so disordered, my food caused me great distress. My age also seemed to be in the way of my recovery, and not the least of my sickness. I employed the very best of medical assistance I could get, but to no avail. My wife, who came to my bedside, urged me to try Electric Bitters, which she had read so much about. This seemed to me a long shot for a life, but I had tried everything else I had ever heard of, and my wife insisted so earnestly that I should try this last, that I yielded to her request. My wife walked to Vassar, Oct. 1, 1885, on a pair of crutches, and returned, carrying me every ten minutes a teaspoonful of brandy and tea with one teaspoonful of nourishment at a time. I commenced bloating soon after arriving here, had every appearance of dropsy. We called our Caro physician here, and he said my condition was worse than when in Caro, on the 27th of May last we called a consultation of doctors from Vassar, "three in number." All of them pronounced my case incurable. I had with the most inflammation of the bowels, and I was almost lifeless, and one of the leading physicians said if I could be restored to a sane mind again it would be all my husband might expect, and anything that would soothe me was all that could be done. My husband got me some medicine from Johnson & Williamson's, druggist, at Vassar, and commenced giving it to me, and in three week's time they began to put me in an easy chair, "for a short time each day," at which time I had no use of my lower limbs and my back was broken; it was a little more than two months before I could walk without crutches. I am now a well woman, have walked one and a half miles within a month, can eat all kinds of food and enjoy it, have gained from 82 pounds, since last May, to 116 now. I need say more of my sickness, but delicacy prevents. I want to say to friends that Hibbard's Rheumatic Drops and Plasters are the medicines that cured me. I used four plasters with the first five bottles; have used ten bottles in all and am well. If anyone who reads this has any doubt as to the authenticity of my statement, I will afford the pleasure to refer them to my neighbors all about here, as they are all astonished at my recovery. It is a great family remedy.

Very truly,
MRS. CHESTER GAGE.

This is to certify that I have known Mrs. Gage since she came to Vassar, and know the facts set forth in her statement above to be true.

Chauncey Depew and the Reporters

Mr. Depew is at all times an agreeable talker, and to reporters he is especially so. "I never but once refused to be interviewed," said he, while here the other day, "and I gave in on that finally. It was very late at night, and I had gone to bed more than usually tired. I was in the middle of my first sleep, when I was roused by the door bell ring. I made up my mind I would not answer, hoping that whoever he was he would tire out and go. But he did not, and finally I got up and went down to the door and entered in a young man. 'Mr. Depew,' said he, 'I am a newspaper reporter.' 'My wife is very sick and the doctor says I must take her to Clifton Springs to-morrow. I don't look to you for sympathy.' 'Yes, I know you have many.' One of the newspapers naming one of the leading citizens of New York has given me a terrible name. What a knife. I've got to fix it. The money I will get for it will, perhaps, save my wife's life. I have walked the streets an hour wondering what I would write when I thought of you. Now, I want you to fill that space.' 'Oh, said I, 'what shall I talk about?' 'Anything,' said he. So I walked up and down the room and commenced to talk upon a subject. 'No,' said he, 'I don't think they'd like that.' Then I started off on another. 'I'm afraid of that,' said he. He suggested a topic, but that was professional and I could not talk to him about it. Then I rambled off a category of different things until he interrupted me on one. 'That'll do,' said 'give me something on that.' and I fired a speech at him. In a few minutes he stopped. 'That's enough, Mr. Depew,' said he; 'I've got my column and a half,' and he had. The next morning the interview appeared, and my night friend's wife no doubt received the benefit of it."—Albany Journal.

Carrying the Creel.

The mode of procedure in the village of Galashiels was as follows: Early in the day after the marriage those interested in the proceeding assembled at the house of the newly wedded couple, bringing with them a "creel" or basket, which they filled with stones. The young husband, on being brought to the door, had the creel firmly fixed to his back, and with it in this position had to run the round of the town, or at least the chief portion of it, followed by a number of men to see that he did not drop his burden, the only condition on which he was allowed to do so being that his wife should come after him and kiss him. As relief depended altogether upon the wife, it would sometimes happen that the husband did not need to run more than a few yards, but whenever she was more than ordinarily bashful, or wished to have a little sport at the expense of her lord and master—which, it may be supposed, would not unfrequently be the case—he had to carry his load a considerable distance.

This custom was very strictly enforced, and the postman who was last creeled had charge of the ceremony, and he was naturally anxious that no one should escape. The practice, as far as Galashiels was concerned, came to an end about 80 years ago, with the person of one Robert Young, who on the morning of the plea of a "sore back," he said, had the day after his marriage, and obstinately refused to get up and be creeled. He had, it may be added in extenuation, been twice married before, and had on each occasion gone through the ceremony of being creeled, and now he declared that he had had quite enough of creeling.—All the Year Round.

The Persians Good Riders.

Of the cavalry of the regular army of Persia, the Persians are good riders, and equal to Europeans in horsemanship. Their saddles are of the Cossack pattern, and they use a long lance, which they handle very well. The Persian cavalry, however, are not to be compared with the Cossacks, who are the best cavalry in the world. The Persian cavalry are good for a charge, but they are not to be depended upon for a long pursuit. The Persian cavalry are good for a charge, but they are not to be depended upon for a long pursuit.

A DRUNKARD'S THEORY OF DRUNKENNESS

[illegible]

YOU DID IT.

[illegible]

Among those of the neighbors who [illegible] amid the excitement [illegible] as the rum seller who had dealt out the poison in that neighborhood for years. He drew near the death bed, and heard a watcher, who was wiping the death damp from the child's beautiful face say: "But how he cursed her." Little Bessie caught the whisper, and, raising her eyes that were growing large in death, she fixed a dying gaze upon the rum seller and said: "You did it!" and in a few minutes was dead.

That group never forget the dying child's charge and the rum seller says that it haunts him day and night and yet he continues to deal out the fatal beverage to his victims. Every one of us who does not rise up and assist in crushing this brazen serpent is guilty before God and the ruin wrought will say of us: "They who are not against us are for us" and more than one "Little Bessie" will say to us: "You did it."

[illegible] the wholesale murder of innocents will not cease until this traffic ceases, and today millions of voices are crying to us from the grave: "You sold it."—The Christian Home.

[illegible] improvement in the laborers' condition is impossible without cutting down the drink bills. No social arrangement which man can make can benefit people who get drunk. No matter what wages you pay a drunkard, no matter how liberal or how generous the sands can be improved therefrom there is no use in providing extra plays for men who use them to get drunk. There is no use in cutting down the day's labor from ten to eight hours, if the two hours gained are spent in a rum-hole. There would be no use in making arbitration compulsory. If one of the parties was likely to be kept from obeying the decision by liquor. There would be no use in dividing over all the property in the world to industrious men, if they drunk as they do now. They would soon dissipate it and add nothing to the store.

A Case of Deafness Cured.

Office of Shaw & Baldwin's Wholesale Notion House, Toledo, O., Dec 11, 1887.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.—Dear Sirs: About three months ago, [illegible] a letter addressed to you in [illegible] Shevin, in reference to the cure of his son by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure, we were induced to commence the use of it for our daughter Nellie, now fourteen years old, who has been suffering from catarrh for about eight years, during which time she has been treated by some of the best physicians in the city. We have also tried the use of almost all the known remedies for catarrh with no more success than temporary relief. Many times we had to keep her home from school on account of her suffering. We were afraid that she would never recover. We have now used six bottles of Hall's Catarrh Cure, and we believe Nellie is entirely cured. In a few days after commencing the use of it we noticed a decided change for the better, and from that right along she has improved, so that now she breaths as easily as anyone. She sleeps well and her health is perfectly good. We feel [illegible] the disease is entirely removed. We write this unsolicited letter, feeling that it is due you, and with the hope that others may be benefited in like manner. We can hardly realize that such a change could be effected in so short a time after battling with the disease so long. We are still using the [illegible] at intervals, as it seems to build up the system. You are at liberty to use this in any manner you see proper.

We are yours, truly,

Mrs. Sarah Rappleye who attended the W. C. T. U. state convention at Port Huron, returned Saturday evening, and reports a very pleasant and profitable time.

Chas. Pocklington's horse became frightened at a cow, while left alone for a moment Saturday, and ran away and demolished the top of his fine carriage.

Children's day will be observed here next Sunday. The morning service will be conducted by Rev. W. J. Clack with a sermon appropriate for the occasion. The evening services will be provided by the school, consisting of responsive readings, quartettes and singing by the school. The friends are requested to meet Saturday afternoon and decorate the church in the usual way.

The township Library was moved to Britton one day last week. S. P. Smith has been bothered with it for the past fourteen months and is rejoicing over its departure.

The Editor of the Britton Eagle was in the village last week one day.

S. P. Smith, with his new peanut roaster, ice cream and lemonade, presented a picturesque appearance under his pavilion stand on Loree's park during the base ball game Saturday.

Master Glen Smith while climbing on the frame of the Feed Mill Saturday, fell to the floor a distance of 12 feet, but fortunately he was not hurt but frightened.

We take pleasure in saying to the citizens of the village and surrounding neighborhood, that the Macon Band will give an open air concert on our streets this week Saturday evening if the weather is favorable. Let everybody turn out and give the boys a hearty welcome. Ice cream and lemonade will be in order during the evening.

W. P. Cadmus, C. A. Pocklington, and their wives, spent a pleasant time at Wampler's Lake last week.

Mr. Harry and Misses Sadie and Lizzie Nelson and Nellie Cochrane of Monroe, were the guests of Dr. R. H. Nelson and family Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. John Arner went to Dundee Tuesday to see her sister-in-law, Mrs. Chauncey McNeal, who is very sick.

The body of the late W. V. Kelly, which was interred in the cemetery near Holloway was removed on Thursday of last week to our cemetery west of the village, by the request of his widow.

Notwithstanding the scorching sun, Saturday, the Lake Ridge base ball team composed of players from Moorville and Milan, and a big headed pitcher, were on the diamond on time, and at 3 P. M. I injure John Gauntlett, of Moorville, called the game with the Lake Ridge team at the bat. During the fore part of the game it was up and tuck, with plenty of goose eggs all around, but at the end of the fourth innings the score stood 2 and 2 in favor of Lake Ridge, with the visiting team at the bat, but when the sixth innings was finished the score stood 5 to 7 in favor of Ridgeway, and at the end of the first half of the ninth innings the score read Lake Ridge 6, Ridgeway 16, with our boys at the bat but called enough and was not played. The Macon Cornet Band was in attendance and occasionally furnished some fine music. During the afternoon there was a good quantity of ice cream and refreshments present and everything passed off nicely. After supper ice cream and lemonade had been served by the association to the band and visiting team, the band gave some excellent music on the street, leaving for home with the best wishes of the entire village.

David Harrison of Petersburg, Monroe co., will on the 24th inst. at 2 o'clock be in the village of Britton for the purpose of letting contracts for the improvement of the highway in the several road districts in this township.

The Base Ball boys have accepted a challenge to meet the Cones here next Saturday. The Macon Band will be in attendance and will remain during the evening and give our citizens an open air concert.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Catchy weather for sheep shearing.

Rev. C. S. Dutton is at Holland, Michigan.

Ezra Sink has rented the parsonage lot.

John Southwick is on the road selling patent incubators.

G. A. Wilkins is quite lame from a horse stepping on his foot.

Clarence Baker, son of J. W. Baker, is running a well-boring machine in Kansas.

The boys at Harrington's corners have organized a base ball club.

E. R. Olds and family visited at Holloway Saturday and Sunday.

Dan Bailey has three-quarters of an acre of onions.

A case of color blindness occurred last week. Report says that Dave Sloan of Macon purchased a red heifer of Geo. Avery for his meat market. On going after the same next day, took a brown two year old Jersey heifer, running in the same pasture, belonging to W. D. Easlick, killed and sold it. Easlick is not very well pleased with the transaction as he set great store on the heifer as a milker.

The Highway Commissioner of this township has made a move in the right direction by putting in about 40 rods of tile along the highway east of Fred Morrells, as an experient. Sam Knillin, Lew Miller and Jim Smith are also tiling the street in front of their lots at Britton. In our opinion, the proper way to construct permanent highways, on muck, quicksand or clay is by putting in three strings of tile, one in the center and one about 8 feet adjacent on each side; this will establish a dry road-bed, which with a light covering of sand or gravel, will insure a good road at all seasons of the year. The present practice of applying road work, by plowing and scraping the refuse from side ditches into the center of the highway is worse than labor thrown away. The same labor properly applied in putting in the tile and drawing gravel, with a light annual tax on the township for purchasing tile, would in a few years construct permanent highways. Farmers are slow to learn the great advantages from good roads, dry barnyards, lanes and all places of general travel on the farm, around buildings and to public markets. Nothing adds so much to value, beauty and comfort of home and surroundings, or is a greater saving of team and tools, than good roads.

ONSTED ODDS.

Missionary concert at the church next Sunday eve.

Working on the road seems to be the order of the day.

Emily Tracy will close her school in district No. 2, this week Friday.

Owing to the scarcity of mason work here, Fred Snow has gone to Morenci, where he has a good job.

Herbert Gallop is painting the inside of the Prospect Hill church.

Jacob Maxwell gathers cream for the Brooklyn creamery. One day last week his horse became frightened and he seemed to be running a street sprinkler.

Lottie Allen is one of the brave young ladies of Onsted. A four-foot snake made his appearance at her father's door the other day. Miss Lottie got an ax and soon put an end to his life.

Mrs. Anna Crane of Clinton, was visiting among her many friends here last week.

M. O. Aldrich went to Addison last Saturday on business.

Eli Taylor and wife, from Watkins station, visited friends in this vicinity the first of the week.

Charles Wooden and family attended the wedding of a daughter of Jesse Barcham, near Brooklyn, Wednesday.

Charlie was down town Tuesday buying a hanging lamp.

Porter Jaycox was driving down main street Tuesday morning, his team became frightened at a boy on horseback and ran away, but stopped before much damage was done.

MACON MUSH.

Mrs. Marshal, who has been visiting her son at Chicago, returned home Thursday.

Mrs. T. Carter attended the W. C. T. U. meeting at Hillsdale last week.

Mr. Asa Smith is giving his house a new coat of paint.

Mr. Geo. Strait of Lima, Ohio, spent a few days with his aunt, Mrs. J. L. Jackson last week.

Mrs. Jane Smith, having sprained her ankle, will be laid up for a few days.

Lyman Ames, spent Sunday with his daughter, Mrs. Ham Niblack.

Dave Langan visited his mother the first of the week.

The band went to Ridgeway last Saturday to attend the base ball play.

Mame Allen of Hudson, has been spending a few days with her friend, Helen Travis.

On Saturday afternoon June 4th, a few of the relative and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Hannah Pennington to witness the marriage of Mr. Arthur Oyers and Miss Hilda Pennington; the ceremony was performed by Rev. E. P. Price. The happy couple started the same evening for their future home. The bride and groom have a host of friends who will unite with us in wishing them much joy and a prosperous journey through life.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Mr. and Miss Smoot and Miss Henry of Adrian College, are expected to spend Saturday and Sunday next, with friends at this place.

The ladies here are decorating the floor of the M. E. church by putting down a new carpet in preparation for children's day, which will be observed on Sunday next at 2 P. M.

D. A. Turrell was in town on Monday last and sold to the school board a fine collection of books for the township library. M. F. Turrell and wife accompanied him home to attend the funeral of their grandmother, who died recently.

A. J. Monagin, who has been introducing Porter's Pain King through Lenawee county for the past year, has supplied the county by putting out 2500 bottles and says that he has yet failed to find a person but what pronounce it the best medicine of the kind ever before introduced. Next he will undertake to relieve the people of Washtenaw Co. from all aches and pains the human mechanism is heir to. We predict that he will have good success as the cucumber season is near by.

A good joke is told on Bryan, the festive young reporter on the Ann Arbor Register. Last Sunday was a beautiful day in the eyes of the enthusiastic Bryan, so he concluded to enjoy it to its fullest extent by a fishing excursion to Whitmore lake. He took a sail boat and roved the turbid waters for several hours with more or less, principally less, success in hooking the innocent minnows. He finally tired of the exciting sport and concluded to go ashore, but how to get there was the question, and whether it was a case similar to Tiny Carleton's exploit when he said "there were three of us in a boat—Bill Nye, a jug and I," deponent saith not; anyway he hallooed to a boy, who went out in a rowboat and towed him ashore for a silver dollar.—Saline Observer.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

"The Beautiful Sunshine" struck the editor of the Jonesville Independent last week. It was a poem, written in a lady's hand, and before publishing it Brother Harding says he must examine said hand, as an evidence of good faith.—Hudson Post.

A FAVORITE WITH THE FAIR SEX.

Papillon extract of flax Skin Cure is superior to all the much advertised skin beautifiers with the advantage of being beneficial, and not like the mineral preparations usually sold which are very poisonous. It will remove all inflammation, chafing and roughness of the skin, sunburn, freckles and unsomly blotches, and leave the cuticle fair and soft as an infant's. An actual necessity for the complete toilet table. Large bottles $1.00.

For sale by A. S. Doty.

The indications now are that there will be a big crowd at the Farmer's Club picnic at Sand Lake next Saturday.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

[illegible] EXODUS XX. 1-17. Notes. God spake.—There was a special reason why these Ten Commandments were spoken more to Moses than to others, and yet also the Lord.—A God who is Jehovah, the God of the Jews. This [illegible] of obedience, and the many sanctions of their application gives them a universal obligation. Whether vs. 2 is one of the Ten Words or not is not so clear. The Bible does not call them Ten Commandments, and the Jews speak of them as Ten Words, of which they make vs. 2 the first, and then they unite the first and second commandments into one. Our division is very early, and makes the most natural division in ten Commandments. The Catholic division, which unites the two first into one, and then divides the tenth into two, is very old. Each division is honest, and it makes no difference which we adopt, except that the Catholic separation of the tenth into two is very natural.—"Before me."—That is, Beside me, in my presence.—"A graven image."—Properly carved with a tool, but equally cast in a mould.—"Nor the likeness of any form."—Of course this does not forbid art work except for worship. Moses made figures of pomegranates and cherubim; and oxen of brass were put under the laver. The prohibition to make any likeness must be interpreted with the explanation, "Thou shalt not bow down," etc.—"In heaven above," etc.—The forms in Heaven above were those of the sun, stars, or any gods supposed to live there. There in the waters under the earth were those of mythological dragons or animals supposed to live in the under world. It does not refer primarily to fishes.—"The iniquity of the fathers."—In idolatry.—"Upon the children."—Who naturally became idolaters also, and subject to God's punishment.—"Showing mercy unto thousands."—Treat is of generations, and of individuals.—"In vain."—Most literally this refers to using God's name falsely in an oath. But it is not an error to apply it also to a heedless and meaningless use of God's name, as in profanity.—"The Sabbath day."—Literally, rest day.—"For in six days."—Here we have a reason of universal application given, not for the Jews alone. A change to the first day does not affect this reason.

INSTRUCTION.—When God speaks, let the world pay attention. Even Moses exceedingly feared and quaked. The children of Israel begged that they might hear the voice of Moses, not of God, lest they should die. We should now hear these words of God with the deepest reverence.

If Jehovah was first revealed as the God of the Hebrews, no less is he our God. He has delivered us out of every evil; He has given us every mercy; He has redeemed us through his Son from our sins. There is no Egyptian bondage like that of sin.

The Commandments are all but one negative in form, but they are all positive in spirit. When our Lord was asked the sum of the Law, he gave the positive command of love. To have no other gods is to have the one God. Not to swear falsely implies swearing truly.

Idolatry, as the literal worshiping of other gods, has ceased among us, but not its spirit. Whatever one values more than God is his god, whether it be wealth or a good name. Nothing else must be put before God. Roman Catholics declare that their worship of graven images is quite unlike their worship of God, and that it does not break the Commandment. But when one runs to the Virgin Mary instead of God the Father or God the Son, and when one has some other favorite saint to help on every occasion, it approaches very near to idolatry, and the common mind will not readily see the difference. God can do for us whatever any saint can, and he is our Father.

It is a law of Nature and of God that the parents sins must affect the children. Such children are taught to sin. The love of sin is born in them and cultivated. The punishment as well as the sin is inherited.

When a child breaks away from his father's sin then the line of inheritance is broken and a new line begins, for God does not want any one to continue in the evil line.

The third commandment seems first to forbid false swearing. That implies that true swearing in a court of law, as when Christ before the court was adjured to tell the truth, is permitted. The Quaker objecting to swearing is not founded on a correct exegesis of this command or of Christ's words.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JULY [illegible]

[illegible]

In company with a party of our citizens we stopped aboard the morning train of the Jackson branch last Thursday morning bound for Findlay the great center of oil and gas in Ohio.

We reached Toledo at [illegible] and had we not concluded to remain in the city to see the unveiling of the Steedman monument in the afternoon, we would have taken a conveyance for the Toledo Columbus & Southern Ry depot, which is at the east end of Cherry street bridge in East Toledo, where we would have found a train in waiting and would have reached Findlay in time for dinner. As it was we did not reach there until late in the evening, for as we passed through Bowling Green after dark we saw the first gas well we had ever seen. The light so good for illuminating the whole town and the numerous wells scattered through the country on our route gave us but a faint idea of the sights in store for us.

The country through which we passed was known in an early day as the "black swamp." It is a level tract well timbered with limestone rock cropping out of the ground at various places and large lime kilns are erected along the line of railroad. The country has a new appearance as though the railroad, so fairly constructed, had begun to develop its resources. Large stave factories are erected at nearly every station and there is plenty of work at good wages for those who wish it.

Reaching our journey's end Friday we saw a bright light and heard a roaring noise, it resembled that of a locomotive blowing off steam but approaching nearer the noise increased until it was almost deafening and as we drew near we found that it was caused by a gas well, which was burning to shield the men from the [illegible].

After supper we saw one of the most magnificent sights it has ever been our good fortune to witness. The edge of town for miles was illuminated [illegible] and it was as light as day along the streets, every house and business place was lighted by gas and [illegible] and groups of lights which spoke the long broad streets a magnificent appearance.

At the Jackson House where we stopped we found a gas fire burning in the grate and the entire house was lighted with gas. We learned that all stores, factories and residences are heated and lighted in the same manner. The next day we noticed that many of the lights were burning in houses and on the streets and upon inquiring why they were allowed to burn in the day time received the answer that it was cheaper than to buy matches to light them. Fifteen cents a month pays for running a stove. How is that for cheap fuel?

There is an order to the gas, not obvious to us, which they claim is an advantage, as by it a loss can be located.

We arose after a good night's rest, at 7 o'clock and set out to see the town before breakfast. We found the lights burning as when we retired but concluded that we would not be in time if before we took in the whole city, so we returned to our hotel. Mr. Jones, the proprietor, is interested in one of our gas companies and the delicious Kate we had belongs to it. He was very courteous to his guests and gave us many "points."

After breakfast Mr. Ta[illegible] [illegible] and took us around the city [illegible] about three miles to show us a gas well [illegible] [illegible] of this section a three rolling mill [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 9, 1887

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," Etc.

It was about a week after his conversation with old Silas Crott that it occurred to John that Bessie's manner had grown rather strange of late. It seemed to him that she had avoided his society instead of, if not courting it as heretofore, showing a certain partiality for it. Also she had been looking pale and worried, and evinced a tendency to irritation that was quite foreign to her natural sweetness of disposition. Now, when a person on whom one is accustomed to depend for most of one's social intercourse and those pleasant little amenities that members of one sex value from another, suddenly cuts off the supply without any apparent rhyme or reason, it is enough to induce a feeling of wonder, not to say of vexation, in the latest. It never occurred to John that the reason might be that Bessie was truly fond of him, and perhaps unconsciously disappointed that he did not show a further interest in her. It, however, we were to examine into the facts of the case we should probably discover that this was the real explanation of the change. Bessie was a straightforward young woman, whose mind and purposes were as clear as running water. She was vexed with John, though she would probably not have owned it even to herself in so many words, and her manner reflected the condition of her mind.

"Bessie," said John one lovely day, just as the afternoon was merging into evening—"Bessie"—he always called her Bessie now—"I am going down to the black wattle plantation by the big mealie patch. I want to see how those young trees are doing. If you have done your cooking"—for Bessie had been engaged in making a cake, as young ladies, to their soul's health, often have to do in the colonies—"I wish you would put on your hat and come with me. I don't believe that you have been out to-day."

"Thank you, Capt. Ned," answered Bessie, looking at him in a bewitching little way she well knew how to assume, "thank you, but I think I had rather not go out walking." This was what she said, but her eyes added, "I am offended with you. I want to have nothing to do with you."

"Very well," said John; "then I suppose I must go alone," and he took up his hat with the air of a martyr.

Bessie looked through the open kitchen door at the fallible mealie to pumpkin and saw John's figure, the swaying bosom of the hill behind the house.

"It certainly is very fine," she said; "are you going far?"

"No, only round the plantation."

"They are so many puff-adders down there, and I hate snakes," suggested she, by way of finding another excuse for not coming.

"Oh, I'll look after the puff-adders—come along."

"Well," she said at last, "I will come, not because I want to come, but because you have overpersuaded me. I don't know what has come to me," she added, with a little stamp and a sudden flushing of her fine eyes with it, "I do not seem to have any will of my own lately. When I want to do one thing I don't know what you want; and I tell you I don't like it, Capt. Ned, and I shall be very cross on walking," and she swept past him, on her way to fetch her hat, in that peculiarly graceful way that angry women can some times assume, and left him reflecting that he never saw a more charming or taking lady in Europe or out of it.

He had half a mind to risk it and ask her to marry him. But then, perhaps, she might refuse him, and that was an idea that he did not quite take to. After our first youth few men altogether relish the idea of putting themselves in a position that gives capricious woman an opportunity of flirt figuratively jumping on them, and then, perhaps, bringing them up to the scorn and obloquy of her friends, relations and other admirers. For, unfortunately, until the opposite is clearly demonstrated, many men are apt to believe that not a few women are by nature capricious, shallow and unreliable, and John Ned, owing, possibly, to that unhappy little experience of his youth, must be reckoned among their misguided ranks.

CHAPTER XII.

OVER IT.

On leaving the house Bessie and John took their way down the long avenue of blue gums. This avenue was old Silas Crott's particular pride, for although it had only been planted for about twenty years, the trees, which in the divine climate and virgin soil of the Transvaal grow at the most extraordinary rate, were for the most part very lofty, and as thick in the stem as English oaks of 150 years' standing.

Down this charming avenue John and Bessie walked, and everything should have led to the right and proper end, for a little footpath winding in and out of the rocks ran about up the plateau on the hillside on which the house stood. Presently this led them through the orchard, and then came a large stretch of wildness, a very danger-spot in a tornado-storm, but a great safeguard to the house and trees round it, for the iron stone cropped up here, and from the house one might generally see fight after flight stooping down on to it and rising, running and zigzagging about its surface. To the left of this were some cultivated lands, and beyond them the plantation in which John was anxious to inspect some recently planted wattles.

When he had finished looking at the young trees he returned. On getting to the border of the plantation he paused to look at Bessie, who was some twenty paces from him, perched sideways on the low wall, and framed, as in the full, rich light of the setting sun. Her hat was off, for the sun had lost its burning force, and the band that held it hung idly by her, while her eyes were fixed on the horizon flaging with all the varied glories of the African sunset. He gazed at her sweet face and lissome form, and some lines that he had read years before floated idly into his mind:

> The little curls about her head
> Were all her crown of gold,
> Her delicate arms divided
> In slender mold,
> As white veined leaves of lilies
> Curve still cold
> She moved to measure of music
> As a swan sails the stream.

He had got so far as this when she turned and saw him, and he gave up the poetry in the presence of one who might well have inspired it.

"What are you looking at?" she said with a smile, "the sunset?"

"No; I was looking at you."

"Then you might have been better employed with the sunset," she answered, turning her head quickly. "Look at it! Did you ever see such a sunset? We sometimes get them like that at this time of the year, when the thunderstorms are about."

She was right, it was glorious. The heavy clouds which a couple of hours before had been rolling like celestial hearses across the azure deeps were now aflame with glory. Some of them glowed like huge castles [illegible] or burning coal.

John stood and looked at it, and its living, glowing beauty seemed to fire his imagination, as at first earth and heaven, in such sort, that the torch of love lit upon his heart like the sunbeams on the mountain tops. Then from the celestial beauty of the skies he turned to contemplate the earthly beauty of the woman who was standing before him, and found that also fair. Whether it was the church bells, or the glories of nature—for there is always a touch of melancholy in beautiful things, or whatever it was, he was not a bit of a subject in it that he had never seen before, and which certainly added a little charm to his shadowed life to the church of the light.

"What are you thinking of, Bessie?" he asked.

She looked up, and he saw that her lips were [illegible] "Well, do you think I resemble my mother. I can only just remember her, a woman with a thin, sweet face. I remember one evening she was sitting in front of a fire, just as the sun was setting like it is now, and I was playing by her, when suddenly she folded me to her and kissed me, and then pointed to the red clouds that were gathered in the sky, and said: 'I wonder if you will ever think of me, dear, when I have passed through those golden gates?' I did not understand what she meant then but sometimes I have remembered the words, and though she died so long ago I do often think of her," and two large tears rolled down her face as she spoke.

Few men can bear to see a sweet and pretty woman in tears, and this little incident was too much for John, whose caution and doubts all went to the winds together, and have not since blown it back.

"Bessie," he said, "don't cry, dear; please, don't. I can't bear to see you cry."

She looked up enough to demonstrate at his words, and then looked down again.

"Listen, Bessie," he went on, awkwardly enough, "I have got something to say to you. I want to ask you if—if, in short, you will marry me. Wait a bit, don't say anything yet. You know me pretty well by now. I am no chicken, dear, and I have knocked about the world a good deal, and had one or two love affairs like other people. But, Bessie, I never met such a sweet woman, or, if you will let me say it, such a lovely woman as you, and if you will have me, dear, I think that I shall be the luckiest man in South Africa," and he stopped, not exactly knowing what else to say, and the time had not come for action, if indeed it was to come at all.

When she first realized the drift of his talk Bessie had flushed up to the roots, and then the blood had sunk back to her breast and left her as pale as a lily. She loved the man, and they were happy words to her, and she was satisfied with them, though perhaps some woman might have thought that they left a good deal to be desired. But Bessie was not of an exacting nature.

At last she spoke.

"Are you sure," she said, "that you mean all this? I know sometimes people say things of a sudden, upon an impulse, and then afterward they wish that they never had been said. If that was so it would be rather awkward, supposing I were to say 'yes,' you know.

"Of course I am sure," he said, indignantly.

"Yours eyes," went on Bessie, poking at the wall with the stick she had in her hand, "perhaps in the place you might be putting an exaggerated value on me. You think I am pretty because you see nobody but Kaffir and Boer women, and it would be the same with everything. I'm not fit to marry a man like you," she went on, with a sudden burst of distress; "I have never seen anything or anybody. I am perfect but an ignorant, half civilized farmer girl, with nothing to recommend me, and no fortune except my looks. You are different to me, you are a man of the world, and if ever you went back to England I should be a drag on you, and you would be ashamed of me and my colonial ways. If I had a fortune and lived near, I would be different, for all the more I guess is in her little finger than I know in my whole body."

Somehow the pitiful, and to John flattering, honesty of her nature and its appeal touched him like a breath of cold air on a hot day. He wanted to put down all the mind just now.

"My dear Bessie," he broke in, "why do you suppose such things? I can assure you that if you appeared in a London drawing room you would put most of the women out of the shade. Not that there is much in London my fascinating London drawing rooms again," he added.

"Oh, yes, I may be good looking, I don't say that I am not, but can't you understand, I don't want you to marry me just because I am a pretty woman, as the Kaffirs marry their wives. If you marry me I want you to marry me because you care for me, the real person not the outward and inward shell. I don't know what I mean very well, indeed," she added, [illegible] sadly.

"Bessie, dear Bessie," said John, who was pretty well beside himself by this time, "I tell me honestly—I will make it my duty—I am very much, I am very fond of you, in all the ways you describe, and I love you with my whole heart. If you can't love me back, I can wait, I can wait years, I can wait all my life, if I must, for the sake of the hope that some day you will be my wife. Only say that you will try to love me, and I will be the happiest man in the world."

She turned her face toward him, and in its depths he read the truth. The shield was down, and the soul was there in all its purity and strength for him to see. But now a shadow fell on the happiness of the wooer, and he felt as a man who has won the prize in the lottery of life and then, on the threshold of his door, sees a man in the distance with a ticket that he knows to be the prize. He might, as a matter of honor, try to win back the lost prize by throwing away his own, but the big meeting at Paarde Kraal was to have been in the month of December, and it is now in the middle of March, and there is still a little time left.

"I love you," she said, in a low voice, that was hardly more than a whisper.

"That has been the cry for years. How many big meetings have there been since Sekukuni and the Zulus? Six, I think. And what has come of it all? Just nothing but talk. And what earthly good do I suppose the Boers did by it, what would the Kaffirs do? They would be laughed, and that would be the end of it. You don't suppose that Paul would give up a handful of Boers to a Kaffir? What did Gen. Wolseley say the other day at the dinner at Pietermaritzburg? Why, that the country would never be given up, because the government, Conservative, Liberal or Radical, would have to do so by a vote. And now the new Gladstone government has telegraphed the same thing, so what is the use of all the talk and excitement? Tell me that, Frank Muller."

Muller laughed as he answered, "You are all very simple people, you English. Don't you know that a government is like a woman who cries 'No, no, no,' and kisses you all the time? If there is noise enough, your British government will eat its words and give Wolseley and Shepstone and Bartle Frere and Lanyon, and all of them, the lie. This is a bigger business than you think for, Om Silas. Of course all these meetings and talk and excitement are for Jantje's taste, and he absolutely needed periodical recreations of this sort. Like a civilized child he longed for wild beasts and enemies, and if there were none handy he found a reflected satisfaction in making a pretense of their presence.

long way off, his quick ear caught the sound of the horse's footfalls, and he straightened himself and listened. Not satisfied with the results, he laid himself down, put his ear to the ground and gave a guttural grunt of satisfaction.

JOHN, I LOVE YOU WITH MY WHOLE HEART.

"Baas Frank's black horse," he muttered to himself. "The black horse has a cracked heel and one foot hits the ground more softly than the others. What is Baas Frank coming here for? After missie Bessie, I think. He would be mad if he knew that missie went down to the plantation with Baas Niel just now. People go into plantations to kiss each other. Jantje was not far out there, and it would make Baas Frank mad if he knew that. He would strike me if I told him, or I would tell him."

The horse's hoofs were getting near by now, so Jantje slipped as easily and naturally as a snake into a thick tuft of rank grass that grew between the blue gums and waited.

Presently the big horse approached, and the snake like Hottentot raised his head ever so little and peered out with his beady black eyes through the straw like grass stems. They fell on Muller's cold face. It was evident that he was in a reflective mood—in an angrily reflective mood.

"What is Baas Frank thinking of, I wonder?" said Jantje to himself as horse and man passed within four feet of him. Then rising, he crossed the road, and slipping round by a back way like a fox from a covert, was standing at the stable door with a vacant and utterly unobservant expression of face some seconds before the black horse and its rider had reached the house.

"I will give them one more chance, just one more," thought the handsome Boer, or rather half breed (for it will be remembered that his mother was English), "and if they won't take it, then let their fate be upon their own heads. To-morrow I go to the hymanaar at Paarde Kraal to take counsel with Paul Kruger and Pretorius, and the other 'fathers of the land,' as they call themselves. If I throw in my weight against rebellion there will be no rebellion; if I urge it there will be, and if Om Silas will not give me Bessie, and Bessie will not marry me, I will urge it even if it plunge the whole country in war from the Cape to Waterberg. Extortion! Independence! Taxes! that is what they all cry till they begin to believe it themselves. Bah! those are not the things I would go to War for; but ambition and revenge, ah! that is another thing. I would kill them all if they stood in my way, all except Bessie. If war breaks out, who will hold up a hand to help the overdonde Engelsmann? They would all be afraid. And if it is not my fault. Can I help it if I love that woman? I would slaughter every English man in the Transvaal to gain Bessie—ay, and every Boer, too, and throw all the natives in," and he laughed aloud and struck the great black horse, making it plunge and caper gallantly.

"And then," he went on, giving his animal a long, wheel I have got the land, and we have kicked all these Englishmen out of the land, in a very few years I shall rule this country, and what to do? Why, then I will stir up the Dutch feeling in Natal and in the old colony, and we will push the Englishmen back into the sea, make a clean sweep of the natives, only keeping enough for servants, and have a united South Africa, like that possibly man Barnard used to prattle of, but do it a good deal more to bring about. A united Dutch South Africa, and Frank Muller to rule it. Well, such things have been, and may be again. Give me forty years of life and strength, and we shall see."

Just then he reached the veranda of the house, and dismounting, his secret and ambitious reveries ended. Frank Muller disappeared into the sitting room, he found Silas Crott alone in a deep chair.

"Good evening, Om Silas," he said, extending his hand.

"Good evening, Mynheer Frank Muller," replied the old man, coldly, for Jantje had told him of what he had seen at the dinner party, which had so nearly ended in a duel, and he was not in a good mood with the young man who had caused it.

"What news is there in the Volksraad, Oom?" he said, [illegible]

"Nothing, as far as I know, except that the English are [illegible] Bessie, [illegible] put off the question, and she slipped half out of the seat with her head [illegible] and she looked at her [illegible] women, and they were very heavy of an evening."

Taken by surprise, the old man hesitated, and his eyes fell before those of his visitor. "That has been the cry for years. How many big meetings have there been since Sekukuni and the Zulus? Six, I think. And what has come of it all? Just nothing but talk. And what earthly good do I suppose the Boers did by it, what would the Kaffirs do? They would be laughed, and that would be the end of it. You don't suppose that Paul would give up a handful of Boers to a Kaffir? What did Gen. Wolseley say the other day at the dinner at Pietermaritzburg? Why, that the country would never be given up, because the government, Conservative, Liberal or Radical, would have to do so by a vote. And now the new Gladstone government has telegraphed the same thing, so what is the use of all the talk and excitement? Tell me that, Frank Muller."

Muller laughed as he answered, "You are all very simple people, you English. Don't you know that a government is like a woman who cries 'No, no, no,' and kisses you all the time? If there is noise enough, your British government will eat its words and give Wolseley and Shepstone and Bartle Frere and Lanyon, and all of them, the lie. This is a bigger business than you think for, Om Silas. Of course all these meetings and talk and excitement are for Jantje's taste, and he absolutely needed periodical recreations of this sort. Like a civilized child he longed for wild beasts and enemies, and if there were none handy he found a reflected satisfaction in making a pretense of their presence.

[illegible] people are angry because of the English way of dealing with the natives, and because they have to pay taxes, and they think that, now that you English have paid their debts and smashed up Sekukuni and Cetewayo, they would like to have the land back. They were glad enough for you to take it [illegible] But still that is not much. If they were left to themselves nothing would come of it except talk, for many of them are very glad that the land should be English. But the men who pull the strings are down in the Cape. They want to drive every Englishman out of South Africa. [illegible] Dutch claim and break up the peace they have been trying for years to make, and that England, peaceable of the whole country, if the Transvaal belonged to England and [illegible] Kaffirs, for half a dozen state reasons, and that is why they are [illegible] They want a war, and that is why they are stirring the people up. They [illegible] they will be the Boers themselves. If the Boers win the day they will be the Boers themselves. If they lose you will hear nothing of them, and the Boers will [illegible] for their patriots. Oh, they know well after the [illegible]

Bessie sat [illegible] and made no answer, and Frank Muller rose and stared out of the window.

PUBLISHED MONDAY MORNING

DECORATION DAY AT BRITTON

Address by Rev. E. W. Bordeo

Fellow Citizens and Soldiers of the Republic: [illegible] day, and so an occasion sacred for hallowed recollections. This is the 22d anniversary since the close of war. Time moves on, not impulsively but steadily and surely, and with the advance of time come great and mighty changes. Far back, in the morning of the world's history, we read of the human race beginning in one family and under the patriarchal rule, that is, [illegible] government. This world continued until civil and moral corruption brought about universal destruction. Wickedness begets insubordination, insubordination begets anarchy and confusion, and where these hold sway human society must go to pieces. This result is not always accomplished by the same method, but the result is always sure. The antediluvian world was drowned, twice drowned first, in the floods of moral vices which they themselves let loose, and then in the flood of mighty waters, which God let loose to sweep away a corrupt race and wash the earth of its pollution. Such a judgment seemed necessary, because there was not enough virtue to hold its own against moral corruption. The same thing was true of Sodom and Gomorrah. There was not enough of the pure moral element left in society for it to work off the evil, and therefore the corruptions were consumed by fire. In both cases, it would seem that but one family differed from the great mass of society. All were alike abandoned to wickedness, save Noah and Lot. Noah of antediluvian times and Lot of the Sodomites. Lot was not quite a saint, but he was so much better than the people among whom he lived, that he passed for a righteous man. And we are told that his righteous soul was vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked from day to day." Such a Noah, in antediluvian days, was the one only representative of moral and religious sentiment. In such cases the God of judgment makes short work. In a few hundred years after the flood the prosperity of Noah had increased into a multitude, and as they journeyed southward, from the mountains of Armenia, they came upon the plains of Shinar. Here they proposed to dwell. Nimrod had shown himself a mighty man among them, and he became their leader. He organized a government and proceeded to build a government house, with an immense tower, that should reach into the very heavens. Meantime, a colony was led out into Assyria and the city of Nineveh was begun. Nimrod was a man of stirring enterprise and contemplated great things in the way of government and empire. But his rule was not begun in wisdom. He did not seek counsel of God. His ambition was prompted by haughtiness of spirit; he would glorify the name of Nimrod. Yet, suddenly his enterprises ceased. His people began to speak in different languages, and dividing up into clans or tribes they spread themselves abroad through all the earth. Then commenced the building up of civil states. And, friends, it is instructive to read the beginnings, the progress, the glory, and then the downfall of nations. The careful reader will not fail to see that virtue and piety lie at the foundation of all prosperity, while reverses and final ruin come of moral and religious corruption. By moral corruption in nations, I mean a depreciation or loss of a proper sense of obligation toward God and mankind. When a civil state, be it empire, a kingdom or a republic, becomes indifferent to the claims of Divine authority, and to the highest well being of the people, then moral corruption has begun its work of ruin. This moral corruption shows itself in the halls of legislation, giving the sanction of law to human oppression, showing a want of honesty, of justice and of mercy in the formation of government and the administration of the laws. Governments are for the proper ordering of society. They are designed for the securing of the personal rights of each individual subject; and, therefore, each individual subject is under obligations to protect the authority of the government. But if the rulers become corrupt in the making and administration of the laws, then the people soon lose all respect for the legislators and the laws. And when this becomes a fact that nation is doomed. The strength of a government lies in the respect and love of its subjects for its laws and its rulers. But, if the people are oppressed by law, they can not love, but hate. They hate, not only the oppressive laws, but those who made them, and they hate those who execute the laws. For a time, the people may stand in awe through fear of the power lodged in the government, but that fear only serves to make them the more desperate enemies when the opportunity for rebellion is seen. Or, if it be not a case of open rebellion, the people who do not love their government are slow to come to its defense when assailed by foes. This truth has been manifest in the history of all nations.

Among the first of ancient monarchies was Egypt. Under the wild and equitable rule of her first rulers she rose to greatness. Religion, the arts and sciences were cultivated. Philosophy, Astronomy and Mathematics were successfully studied and taught. The nation increased in wealth and her subjects were prosperous. But, as the increase of prosperity came vain conceit, haughtiness of spirit, oppression and wicked aggressiveness. Her Pharoahs reduced Israel to serve as bondsmen. They were made to serve in brick making and building of pyramids and obelisks, under the greatest severity. The cries of groaning bondmen reached the ears of the oppressed and came to their deliverance. Then began the ruin of Egypt. The works of the oppressed remain in monuments that speak of hard toil, sweat, tears and groans, but Egypt and her kings are gone, gone.

Babylon also rose to greatness, and excelled in learning, in the mechanic arts and in wealth. Her fame for massive and noble works of grandeur surpassed all other nations. The walls surrounding the city were a marvel of greatness. The streets and public works were models of beauty. Babylon stood among the nations, mistress of the world. But, when her king grew haughty, and her nobles joined to oppress the weak, when self conceit was added to oppression, and the king demanded that worship which was due to none but God, then moral corruption was eating out the vital powers of the state. It was then but a question of time, as to the fall of Babylon. Media and Persia were preparing for her overthrow. The walls, the palaces, the beautiful gardens, the great wealth of king and nobles, could not save the state. Her government was not loved and it fell into the hands of foes.

But I have no need to continue these examples in illustration of the fact that virtue and piety are the two grand pillars of civil governments.

This fact was recognized by our fathers, in founding this Republic of the United States of America. It was oppression that constrained the first settlers of this country to leave their native land, cross the ocean and prepare for themselves a home in the wilderness and among savages. When they landed, they took possession in the name of Almighty God. And then they consecrated this whole domain, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, to the ever living and true God. Years rolled on, the people increased by both births and immigration. The people were subject to English government. At length the people began to feel oppressed by the measures adopted against them by the Home Government. At first, they protested very respectfully; then they demanded protection in their rights as citizens. But, seeing that oppressions were increased rather than diminished; that instead of protection in personal rights, they were not only neglected, but wasted, they lost all respect for the government that wasted them, and turned from king and parliament, with an appeal to God for the rectitude of their action in declaring themselves a Free and Independent people. A struggle of war was thus inaugurated that lasted for seven tedious years; at length, the war was happily ended by an acknowledgment of the civil freedom of the American people. But, this young nation inherited an evil that clung to it with great tenacity. Human slavery did not originate in this Republic, it came here from the mother country. Many of our revolutionary fathers deprecated the evil and protested against it, and declared it incompatible with the free institutions of a Republic, but, at that time, it was thought unsafe to attempt its removal. An infant born with some deformity may be greatly improved by surgical operation, but wisdom may dictate delay, until the infant has acquired strength to bear the operation. This nation, in its infancy, was seen to have an angry cancer, it needed cutting out, our fathers saw it; but, loving the child, they said, Not now, let the infant gather strength to endure the cutting, then the deformitory may be removed with safety. Friends, we all know the time came for this nation to undergo the trying ordeal. To very many, the time seemed long deferred; but, divine Providence guides with safety, in all important events, and we have every reason for supposing the time was well chosen, and we should rejoice in the success of the work that was done. But it was not an easy work, it was not a short work, nor was it a pleasant work. Looking back to the spring of 1861, we remember the first call of the President for 75,000 men to bear arms for the government. What part those men were to perform could not very well be told at the time of the call; but, the oncoming events speedily revealed what was to be done, and that vastly greater numbers of men were needed to do the work. But, as the crisis drew on, and the people of this Republic saw what was necessary to preserve the government, there was no lack of men or means for complete success. The intensity of the struggle did not prevent enlistment. Our young men pressed their way to the recruiting office, volunteered their services and went forth to defend the honor of the general government. And why? because they loved the country and its laws.

Soldiers of the Eaton Post, what prompted you to enlist in the United States Army? You knew that hard fare was there. That wearisome travels were to be performed. Your bed, a hard bunk in camp. Your rest broken and irregular. Your discipline would be rigid. You were then young. Had you wife and babes to leave behind? You knew you could not leave the ranks at pleasure to visit wife and children. Ah, you knew that, perhaps you might never see home again. You knew that to go into an engagement with the enemy was putting yourself in position to be shot at, to be maimed, wounded or killed. Did you covet any of these evils that you should have chosen the army? O no! I hear you exclaim. My country was in a struggle for life, and I wanted to see her successful; therefore, I sacrificed home comforts, accepted the hazards of war that I might aid the country that I love. Well, that is the language of a true soldier. It does not matter, whether native or foreign born, if the soldier really loves the country for which he fights. Some, who are foreigners by birth, have, by voluntary adoption, become more faithful and reliable citizens, than many [illegible]

Soldiers of the Grand Army of this Republic, I do not ask where you were born, where educated and why you are here. A man has a right to the country he likes best. And when he has fought for it hazarded life and limb in its [illegible] I [illegible] him as a brother. But, soldiers, your presence here to-day reminds me of the ranks to which you once belonged, with whom you marched, with whom you suffered and with whom some of you bled, though not unto death. We speak of those ranks of noble men; what an army they would make could they rise before us, uniformed as they marched in rank into the battle. But, perhaps the numbers who died in hospital of sickness, or of wounds received on duty, are fully equal to the numbers killed in battle. These remains of some of the dead were brought home and interred by loving friends, some were recovered, no doubt, even dead. O that we knew where to find them! we would weave a royal wreath of evergreens and of richest flowers, and strew them all along the way and spread them over the grave and say, "So let it be done to those who loved and fought for our Grand Republic." Some of the patriot dead are here. They lie cold and silent around us. We touch their graves with reverence and spread thereon, with loving hearts, wreaths of vines and flowers, the emblems of reviving life and beauty. As the flower fades and passes away and after a time, comes forth again in richer life and beauty, so may these dead revive and come forth into higher and more perfect life. But, soldiers of the Eaton Post, you yet survive the dead. When you went forth to do battle for your country you were young and vigorous. Now you begin to feel conscious that years have passed over you. The hair is becoming gray. The step is not as elastic as it was. But you have lived to see the country you love and for which you went forth in war, in the condition of peace and of great prosperity. In defending your country against rebellion you did more than preserve the government, you were the means of making the government better than it was. The rebellion was begun to maintain slavery, if it resulted in national ruin. But, in their purpose they failed. The rebellion was crushed and the institution of slavery was out-lawed and denounced by the general government. Soldiers, you went out to defend, you did it well; so well that the government not only was maintained, but vastly improved. But what of those states that were in the rebellion: are they the worse for the whipping you gave them? not at all. They are now the better for the war; themselves being judges. The whole south is more prosperous to-day than at any period prior to the war. The bone of contention between north and south is gone; the whole country now lies open for improvement, and men of capital and business enterprise may establish and build up all manner of industries in the south as well as in the north, the west or the east. At this time the south is inviting settlers from the north. Farming lands, seats of water-power and rich mines are being offered to settlers. The most influential men of the south now say: This country belongs to one general government, the general government is supreme and state governments are subordinate. Henceforth this nation is a unit.

Secretary Lamar, in an oration recently, at the unveiling of the monument of John C. Calhoun, in Charleston, S. C, said: "If Calhoun were alive to-day, he would say that the great controversy being closed at the ballot box, closed by the arbitrament of war, and above all, closed by the Constitution, South Carolina should accept the verdict and seek the happiness of her people, their greatness and glory, in the greatness and glory of the American Republic." These are words well spoken, and they indicate the growing sentiment of the southern people. They now lament the war as well as we. They mourn, as do we, their patriot dead, respect their memory and reverence their graves. It was an unhappy feud. We were brothers all. The quarrel ended, we will not revive the strife by unkind words. We will rejoice and give thanks to God for the good accomplished, while we sorrow for the dead and decorate their graves. Soldiers, it is scarcely necessary for me to remind you, at this time of the conflicts through which you, in common with the whole Grand Army, were called to pass, in securing the peace and stability of our beloved country and government. We all feel some sense of shame at the memory of "Bull Run," but had not that failure occurred, it is hardly probable that the war would have closed so soon as it did. The shame of that failure spurred the north to action. The right man was sought and found in the person of the tanner—U. S. Grant, to command the Grand Army. We have not forgotten his cool, terse and spirited words in reply to the enemy's proposal to capitulate. "We propose" said he, "to move immediately upon your works." That was a bull that did not run. He took the enemy on his horns. And again in his pursuit of Gen. Lee, he, in a dispatch to the President, clearly states the severe work they had to do, the losses they had sustained, but, without a tremor, he coolly says, "I propose to fight it out on this line, if it takes all summer." Gen. Lee was not long in learning that a Commander for the northern army was now at its head whom he might well fear. Receiving a dispatch that informed him of the movements of Gen. Grant and seeing himself outwitted and entirely out generaled, it is said that with tears in his eyes, he forewrote the dispatch remarking, "The northern army has at last got a Commander equal to the occasion. Our cause is lost! yes, it is lost!" Providence gave us the right President for the times, and Providence gave us the right man to direct our armies. Abraham Lincoln will live in the history of this Republic as a wise, faithful and good President, and U. S. Grant's name will go down to future ages as one of the most able generals that ever ruled an army.

ROBERTS' PATENT SNOW PLOW.

Mr. Jacob G. Roberts of Tecumseh has received letters patent on an improved style of snow plow. The patent was issued May 31st, was obtained through Thos. S. Sprague of Detroit, and bears the number 364,[illegible]. We give below the principal part of the specification which will show the character of the invention.

This invention relates to certain new and useful improvements in snow plows of that class designed to be employed in connection with locomotives for clearing railway tracks.

Devices of this character as usually constructed have a tendency to pack the snow around or the plow without throwing it from the rails, two or three locomotives being necessary to force the plow through a drift.

It is the object of this invention to construct a plow that will effectually clear the track and deposit the snow upon either side of the rails, and to that end the invention consists in the peculiar construction of the plow and its attachments, all as more fully hereinafter set forth.

Fig. 1 is a front perspective of my improved snow plow. Fig. 2 is a bottom perspective of the same. Fig. 3 is a vertical cross section.

In accompanying drawings, which form a part of this specification, A represents the two mold boards of my device, formed upon curved lines, substantially as shown in Fig. 3, the forward end of the mold-boards being connected together upon an incline to the rear, as shown. The bottom edges of the mold-boards are provided with the lifting-flanges B.

In practice the snow plow is rigidly secured ahead of the locomotive, the cow-catcher resting between the flanges C, and to which it should be properly bolted, while any suitable coupling-bar is connected to the head of the plow to give greater rigidity to the parts. As the plow is driven ahead the lifting flanges pass under the snow and direct it to the curved mold-boards, which, by their peculiar curvature, discharge it upon either side of the track, substantially in the same manner as a furrow is turned by an ordinary agricultural plow. The brushes F, being adjusted to rest upon the face of the rails, sweep off such snow as may be left upon them.

What I claim as my invention is—

In a snow-plow, the combination of the curved mold boards A, provided with the outer lifting-flanges, B, with the inner flanges, C, carrying adjustable hangers, D, and brush-holders E, the parts being constructed, arranged, and operating substantially in the manner and for the purposes described.

The welfare of the State University and its future usefulness are trembling in the balance. Now is the time for the members of the legislature to display a little courage and back bone. Let them pass the appropriation bill over the veto.

As well as the handsomest, and others are invited to call on Baker & Hall, and get free a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely upon its merits and is guaranteed to cure and relieve all Chronic and Acute Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Price 50 cents and $1.

Clayton has decided to celebrate the glorious Fourth.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, Oh, it will wear away, but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which we sell on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free, at Baker & Hall.

Children's Sunday will be appropriately observed next Sabbath at the M. E. church. A special service will be given in the evening in the nature of a Sunday School concert.

John R. Clarke will spend most of the summer at Grimsby Park, the Chantauqua of Canada, for a season of rest and recreation. He orders his HERALD sent there, of course.

Children's Sunday observed next Sunday at the Universalist church. In the morning at 10:30 sermon to the children. Text—Psalm 34:11 14. At 7:30 in the evening a Sunday School concert. All invited.

Myron H. Ellis, the Deputy Collector of this district was in town last week, and we had the pleasure of making his acquaintance. His home is at New Boston, Wayne Co. His official duties will probably call him here about once a month.

The committee appointed to canvass for funds for the 4th of July celebration report that they are meeting with splendid success. About $200 have already been pledged and they are confident of raising enough to have a raiser. Turn out to the meeting to-morrow night.

"Billy" Smalledge had quite an accident befall him Friday afternoon. He was loading some freight on his dray and as he was adjusting a roller under a heavy box, the latter slid forward causing the roller to roll on the fore finger of his right hand and bruising it. He will not be able to use his hand in several days.

F. H. Rosacrans and wife, of Harper, Kansas, are spending two or three weeks with Fred Rosacrans and other Tecumseh friends. Frank is Vice President of the Harper City Roller Mills Co., and has charge of their mill at that point. The same company own and operate another mill in Kansas. It is nine years since he visited the old home and we had to look twice before recognizing him.

The west approach of the Palmyra bridge went out last Thursday afternoon and Elijah Wilson was immediately sent for to make the repairs. Just before it was washed out, a wagon containing eight persons passed over, and when they viewed the wreck, they considered themselves very fortunate. Mr. Wilson told the commissioner two years ago that the bridge was not substantial. What our Elijah does'nt know about a bridge is'nt worth knowing.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

To the Weather Clerk: Please give us a rest.

Fred Rosacrans and family went to Detroit last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Orr spent last Sunday at Jackson.

Wm. Cadnoh of this village has filed an original pension.

Sells circus will show at Adrian next Tuesday, June 14th.

Rev. E. P. Pierce favored the HERALD with a pleasant call Tuesday.

Mrs. James Jones started for Detroit last Saturday for a few days visit.

Congressman Allen delivered the Decoration Day address at Ann Arbor.

Miss Libbie Kirchgessner, of Clinton, is clerking in Anderson's dry goods store.

Miss Hattie Stevens returned last Thursday from a trip to Battle Creek and Hanover.

The scriptural saying has been verified this week, that it raineth on the just and the unjust.

The contract for boring the Hudson gas well has been let to Amos Steelsmith, of Findlay Ohio.

The High School commencement exercises will be held on Thursday, June 23d—two weeks from to-day.

We understand that a full program is in preparation for the Alumni Reunion, and that it is likely to be an extra good one.

The Michigan State Gazeteer for 1887 has been delivered. It is the most complete Gazeteer that has yet been put out by the enterprising publishers; R. L. Polk & Co.

"The Pathways of Truth" is the subject of a beautiful Children's Day service which will be rendered at the M. E. church in Clinton, on Sabbath morning and evening next, June 12th.

Did Gov. Luce veto the University bill to save his honor? Perhaps so. Let the members of the legislature preserve the honor of the state, as well as their own, by passing the bill over the veto.

The daily Yellowstone Journal of May 31st, published at Miles City, Montana, contains the Decoration Day address in full, delivered by Capt. Henry Romeyn. It is one of the finest Memorial addresses, we ever had the pleasure of reading.

The Misses Marguerette and Winifred Bills gave a pleasant party to their young friends last Saturday. We suppose a very pleasant time was had, although the conversation was probably carried on mostly by the young "mamas."

Postmaster Stacy has issued some neat four page folders, giving the rates of postage, with hints and instructions for the preparation of mailable matter, which have been distributed among the patrons of the office. They contain much useful information.

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Wheeler, of Tecumseh, were in Hudson this week, to attend the wedding of Mr. Pratt and Miss Fowle. Wheeler carries himself with all the decorum necessary for a man who has just taken upon himself the cares incident to becoming the head of a family.—Hudson Post.

Art Rice's team indulged in a little sport of their own last Thursday afternoon. They became frightened when at the west end of Chicago street and came tearing down that street, turning down R. R. street and were finally stopped near Hayden's residence. No one was hurt, but the wagon was strung all along the route.

Detroit Evening Journal: William H. Cleveland, appraiser of this port, bears the distinction of being a relative of the President, whom he resembles somewhat in general looks and physique. He is a good story teller and an excellent musical critic. His recollection of great singers extends back as far as his listeners desire to have him go.

Next Sunday, June 12th, will be Children's Day at the Presbyterian church. There will be special exercises appropriate to the day, at the usual hour of morning service and these will take the place of the ordinary Sabbath School exercises. Besides singing and recitations there will be an address by the pastor. At night a discourse will be given to Young people by the pastor. A cordial invitation to all to attend.

The issue of the Elgin Weekly Advocate of the 28th ult. is a special edition giving a very complete review of the manufacturing and business interests of Elgin and Kane county, Ill. It contains sixteen pages of reading matter and nearly fifty illustrations, many of which must have been prepared especially for this issue. It has an elaborate and handsome lithograph cover and altogether it is one of the neatest special editions of a paper we have ever seen. It was compiled by Geo. N. Stacy and H. R. Lowrie.

William Heck went to Detroit Tuesday.

Mrs. David McNaughton started for West Point last Monday to visit her son at the military academy.

Wes. Bordine was called to Battle [illegible] of his brother.

R. J. W. Bowen, the efficient manager of the C. T. line has succeeded in obtaining a renewal of the weather reports to Tecumseh. A letter from Washington to him states that after the 15th of this month the signal flag may be hoisted to the Summer's breezes.

Mr. C. E. Potter, son of Rev. T. H. Potter, was at home from Saturday until Tuesday last. He has been filling a position for the past two years in the counting room of the Detroit Free Press, and has just accepted a place with the Evening News of Kansas City, and he will leave next week for the latter place.

Rev. F. Adkins returned from Minneapolis last Saturday where he had been attending a meeting of the Baptist Association. While there he met G. P. Wright formerly of this village, who is now assistant pastor of the Emanuel Baptist church of that city. Miss Carrie Osborn was also at the meeting and accompanied Mr. Adkins as far as Chicago where she will visit her brother for a few days.

Our present Governor has a peculiar faculty for blundering. His latest and most egregious blunder is his veto of the University appropriation bill. It is claimed that he is honest in his views. If that be true, how more is the pity. It is almost incomprehensible that a Governor of Mishigan should deliberately strike a blow at the welfare of the State University. Now let the members of the Legislature exercise their prerogative and override the veto. They can rest assured that the people will sustain them.

Toledo's new pleasure resort, known as Presque Isle Park, will be formally opened to the public on Wednesday of next week, June 15th. The Park is located six miles down the river at the head of Maumee Bay and is said to be one of the most beautiful natural locations on the lakes. The park has been provided with a large opera building, picnic accommodations, electric lights, boats and all the et ceteras for making it a first class place of amusement. The opening next Wednesday will be under the auspices of the Toledo Press Club and a grand time is anticipated.

We have just received from the Rheumatic Syrup Company, of Jackson, Michigan, a very handsome picture, thirteen by twenty-eight inches in size, called "The Egyptian Girl." It is an Oriental figure, lovely in design and truly a work of art, and it cannot fail to be appreciated by all who see it. We are requested to say that they can be procured by calling on your druggist. In case the druggists do not have them, inclose six cents in postage stamps to the Rheumatic Syrup Co., at Jackson, Mich., and they will send you one by return mail.

In a letter from J. G. Stevens of Belvidere, Ill., enclosing his subscription, he says: "I enjoy reading the HERALD very much, for even the sight of a familiar name, calls up many very pleasant recollections. Miss Sarah Stocking, one of Tecumseh's former girls is visiting us here at Belvedere. I attended the International Sunday School convention at Chicago last week and there met many old acquaintances; among them was Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, brother of W. V. Fisk, of Clinton, who took charge of the convention most of the time; also Rev. S. E. Wishard, formerly of Tecumseh." Mr. Stevens is running a large Dry Goods and Notion store at Belvidere.

Eleven men and two boys answered the tap of the bell last Tuesday evening and assembled in the council room to make prelimary arrangements for the 4th of July celebration. What the meeting lacked in numbers was made up in enthusiasm, and those present gave favorable reports from absent business men. President Hall presided over the meeting and the most important business transacted was the appointment of a committee to solicit funds, which was composed of S. W. Anderson, Dr. E. Hause and Harry Root. Considerable discussion was had over the matter of celebrating on the Saturday preceding the 4th in order to give the saloon keepers a chance to do business. The majority of those present seemed in favor of holding it on Monday the 4th. The meeting adjourned until to-morrow Friday evening, when the committee will report progress, and it will then be decided whether we shall "let the eagle scream" this year in Tecumseh or not. There is no reason why Tecumseh should not celebrate. We could easily have a band tournament, base ball games, firemen's tournament, military parades, and those added to our natural attractions, a good speaker, etc., would bring one of the largest crowds ever seen in the village. Let all turn out to the meeting to-morrow evening and push the matter along.

Jim Jones went to Detroit yesterday.

Elmer Hendershot, of Ann Arbor, is home for the vacation.

Louis Hardenburg is clerking for Whitenack, Bordine & Co.

A. A. Kennedy, of Battle Creek, was in town yesterday on a flying trip.

A cyclone has struck H. E. Anderson's grocery store. Full particulars elsewhere.

Landlord Mertz has been doing the town in front of the Central House very nicely.

To the members of the legislature from Lenawee County—Vote for the University appropriation bill, notwithstanding the veto.

Will Hayden and Clara Hayden are expected home from their Washington trip to-day.

The new addition to the O. & M. Coal & M'fg. Co's. factory is progressing daily between showers. It is nearly ready for the roof.

L. F. Wheeler has just completed a fine oil portrait of Wm. Bresie, full bust size. It is a very natural likeness and finished in the highest style of the art.

Committee No. 2, of St. Peter's Guild will serve strawberries and ice cream in the Hewitt block, on Tuesday, June 14, from 6 until 10 P. M. All are invited to attend.

L. F. Wheeler is now fully prepared to fill any orders for views, groups, cravon or oil portraits, and would like to engage two or three good agents to canvass for his portrait work.

Attention is called to the village ordinance relative to dogs, which is printed on the 4th page, by order of the Common Council. The owners of dogs had better read the ordinance carefully and then heed it.

W. K. Powers sends his subscription promptly and adds: "We are always glad to hear Tecumseh news, and the HERALD always fills the bill." Walter has a good position with the firm of Bassett, Hantting & Co. of Metiregor, Iowa.

The young people of the Presbyterian Church will give a strawberry and ice cream social a week from to-night, on Thursday, June 16th in the lecture room. Music has been provided for, and fancy and useful articles will be for sale. A pleasant evening is expected.

The wood market has fairly opened in Tecumseh, although but few clips have been purchased as yet. Three firms are buying wood here this year: Reynolds & Wilson; Cook & Palmer; Williamson & Stevens. The average price paid is 25 to 27 cents, but very choice lots may bring a higher figure.

Ladies, now is your chance; if you are wise you will take advantage of it. Mrs. M. A. Freeman has a full assortment of hats and bonnets of the latest summer styles and shapes, which she is selling at astonishingly low prices. A dazzling array of ribbons, laces, flowers and trimmings of all kinds. Hair goods a specialty. Call and inspect her stock and you are sure to be pleased.

Thos. Langdon, of Franklin, drove into the village this morning and reported a horse and buggy of his missing, and the officers are busy searching for him. The young man who assaulted Dr. Hause several years ago, named Carroll, has been working for him, and he is also missing. He was seen on our streets last evening with the rig, and said he was going to Monroe.

The following note from Mr. Beals, who occupies a position in the Detroit Division of the Lake Shore Railway, has a good word for John Freeman's Aboriginals.

DETROIT, Mich., June 2, 1887.

TECUMSEH HERALD.—Kindly permit me through the columns of the HERALD to express thanks to the popular Lake Shore conductor, F. J. Stout for a "Sur-Prise" package received by express, of a fine box of "Aboriginals" from the house of John J. Freeman, cigar m'f'g'r, of your place. If these are a sample of his productions certainly they deserve a generous patronage. W. E. BEALS.

On Saturday, June 4th, a few specially invited guests assembled at the residence of Mrs. Israel Pennington at Macon, to witness the marriage of her daughter Hilda to Dr. A. G. Oyen, of Petoskey. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. P. Pierce, of Clinton. After the ceremony and the usual congratulations and refreshments, the party left on the afternoon train for Detroit to take the boat for their future home at Petoskey. The parties have been favorably known in this vicinity during their whole lives. The bride is a graduate of the High School at Adrian where she has many friends. The groom is a graduate of both the Literary and Medical Departments of the University of Michigan, and was an instructor in the latter department previous to his locating at Petoskey. Their many friends wish them a happy and prospero is life, in which the HERALD most heartily joins.

Dundee has decided to celebrate and the necessary committees have been appointed.

Mat Blosser of the Manchester Enterprise paid Findlay, Ohio, a visit week before last and has an interesting account of his trip in the Enterprise.

Ex-parte Judge Schoonmaker, of the Hudson Gazette, has received an invitation to deliver an address at a supper to be given by Hebrews in New York, June 16. He went to West Point last Monday.

The Masonic lodges of instruction held by Grand Lecturer Clark throughout the State have never been better attended than this season. Much benefit as accrued from his visits.

One of last Sunday night's street scenes was a young man and his girl walking arm in arm, the former smoking a cigar and the latter a cigarette.—Saline Observer.

Sexton Smith was not disappointed by the rain Monday—he always looks for it on Decoration Day. There have been but three pleasant days for decoration exercises in his eleven years' experience as sexton of Maple Grove.—Hudson Gazette.

The Blissfield Gas and Oil Co have made their first assessment—50 per cent. It is expected that work on a derrick will be begun shortly, the material for which is now being got together. The question of location has not yet been decided.—Blissfield Advance.

Worms have materially injured corn in Ogden, the garden town of the county, and farmers are steadily engaged in replanting and trying to get a new crop started. Many fields have escaped the ravages of the worm, and never did corn look better at this season of the year than now, in those fields.—Adrian Press.

The Petoskey fish hatcher will send out a special car soon with 8,000,000 or 9,000,000 wall-eyed pike. They will be principally planted in the southern part of the State, in Branch, Hillsdale, Jackson, Lenawee and Washtenaw counties in all the principal lakes and rivers in those counties.

Of the great amount of talk indulged in hereabouts of late, concerning oil and gas wells, real estate boom in prices, &c., one sentiment only—only one—appears to prevail, that of personal profit and money getting, thus to at an expense of something else. Dundee, nor Dundee interests, do not seem to be taken into consideration. Why cannot a little attention be given to benefiting Dundee and its business interests?—Dundee Reporter.

After two adjournments, the village council finally got down to business Wednesday evening and disposed of the Downer saloon bond question. The usual crowd of interested persons gathered about the corporation solons, but were not edified by any debate whatsoever. The session was an exceedingly brief one, being long enough to take a vote. Five of the councilmen stood for rejection and one only for acceptance of the bonds. This action will not end the matter, however. Mr. Downer confidently believes that his security is amply sufficient, and he will immediately, through his attorneys, ask the supreme court of the State to issue a mandamus compelling the council to give definite reasons why it would not accept the bonds.—Morenci Observer.

The heavy rain of Monday interfered with the program for decoration day. The exercises which were to be given in the open air were held in the Town hall. The program as giving in last week's issue, was fully carried out and in a manner that gave general satisfaction. The reading of May Adair Orton was such as stamp her a careful and conscientious elocutionist, and her selection was most appropriate to the day. The oration by Prof. J. L. Travis was a grand one in every sense, and he delivered it in a masterly manner. Notwithstanding the elements were forbidding, decoration day in Clinton passed off very pleasantly.—Clinton Local.

Our people, we know, will be pleased to learn that our worthy citizen, L. L. Kilby, who has been in poor health for several years with that dread disease, paralysis, is receiving material aid from the Odd Fellows' lodges of our state. The assistance thus far reaches up into the hundreds of dollars, and is still coming. As a secret society that fully lives up to its teachings of friendship, love and truth and acts the part of the good Samaritan as outlined by that book of all books, no better organization exists in the world. This is not fully, but solid facts, and the proofs are easily, but unbidden.—Saline Observer.

The graduating class of the Manchester High School have invited Rev. J. M. Mitchell to deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon at Manchester Mich. on Sunday evening, June 19th. The invitation has been accepted.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

[illegible] June 7, 1887.

Regular session—Present entire council.

Minutes of preceeding meeting read and approved.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

On cemetery. The committee reported the application of Alex. Boyd for permission to remove remains and for release from his contract of purchase of cemetery lot on payment of $5. Referred to cemetery committee.

On Public Grounds and Buildings reported that the old cemetery had been sown to grass and that the committee had received an item bill of hay. Accepted and adopted.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS

The Sexton reported 2 adults and 2 infant interments in May and sale of one lot for $15, cash. Also presenting note for approval. Report accepted and filed and note returned to be made stronger.

Street Commissioner reported 61 days and 2 hours team labor and 119 days and 7 hours hand labor in May, also names of 32 of owners where new sidewalks should be built, and names of 28 lot owners where sidewalks should be repaired. Report accepted and filed and Marshal instructed to notify such lot owners that their sidewalks must be repaired or rebuilt in accordance with the street commissioner's report, before next meeting of the council, or the council will take action to compel such repairs or rebuilding.

PETITIONS AND APPLICATIONS

Application of Sigler Bro's of Cleveland, O. for special non-resident auctioneers license at $10 per week, was presented and granted at $20 per week.

NEW BUSINESS.

And so it shall come to pass that in securing his salvation you will set in motion influences that will roll on in a perpetual stream of blessing through all time, and the joys of eternity be made sweeter and grander because you were so fortunate as to lead even one soul into the paths where God's light and love are shining ever more.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

Albert Emminger, Covington, Ky., writes: "I was afflicted with Catarrh three years. Despair. After trying every known remedy and doctor which I saw advertised, I tried Ely's Cream Balm. I used two bottles of this Catarrh Cure and am cured. It has made complete cure and is worth its weight in gold. I have seen scores from parties I have given it to, and it never failed in a positive cure. Large bottles 50c."

A Woman's Sweet Will

She is prematurely deprived of her charms of face and form, and made unattractive by the wasting effects of ailments and irregularities peculiar to her sex. To check this down upon not only her strength and health, but upon her amiable qualities as well, is her sweet duty. This is safely and speedily accomplished by a course of treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a nervine and tonic of wonderful efficacy, and prepared especially for the alleviation of those suffering from "dragging-down" pains, sensations of nausea, and weakness incident to women—a boon to her sex. A Case of Deafness Cured.

Office of Shaw & Baldwin's Wholesale Notion House, Toledo, O., Dec 11, 1879.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Dear Sirs: About three months ago, noticing a letter addressed to you in the Bee from Gen. Slevin, in reference to the cure of his son by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure, we were induced to commence the use of it for our daughter Nellie now fourteen years old, who has been suffering from catarrh for about eight years, during which time she has been treated by one of the best physicians in the city. We have also tried the use of almost all the known remedies for catarrh, with no more success than temporary relief. Many nights have we laid awake to hold her mouth open to keep her from strangling. Her hearing had also become affected. We were afraid that she would never recover. We have now used six bottles of Hall's Catarrh Cure, and we believe Nellie to be entirely cured. In a few days after commencing the use of it we noticed a decided change for the better, and from that right along she has improved, until now she breaths as easily as anyone. She sleeps well and her hearing is perfectly good. We feel that the disease is entirely removed. We write this unsolicited letter, feeling that it is due you, and with the hope that others may be benefitted in like manner. We can hardly realize that such a change could be effected in so short a time after battling with the disease so long. We are still using the remedy at intervals, as it seems to build up the system. You are at liberty to use this in any manner you see proper.

We are yours, truly,
Mr. and Mrs. S. BALDWIN

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Working on the highways and sport is the principle occupation at present.

Jerome Higby of N. Y. spent Saturday and Sunday with his cousin, Mrs. John Vanvliet.

Uncle Horace Gray was shaking hands with friends Saturday. He appears as well as ever.

Irving Bush has gone home for a visit again.

Miss Hattie Osgood of Macon spent Saturday evening and Sunday with Miss Belle Barlow.

The Cone base ball team failed to put in an appearance Saturday as they agreed to.

Our ball team go to Clinton this week Saturday to play the Clinton team.

The Macon Band were here again Saturday evening and furnished an open air concert on the street. They have promised to visit us a week from next Saturday evening June 25th, if the weather is pleasant. Ice cream and lemonade will be served as usual and all who wish to enjoy a pleasant time may do so, as the band will furnish some very fine music during the evening.

Walter Bateman and Grace Minnis of Milan, spent Sunday as the guests of Mrs. John Arner and family.

Belle Barlow visited college friends at Adrian last week.

Fred Teachout of Adrian, and Cora Jones and Tuede Harris of Tecumseh, and May Bodine of Manchester, called on Lou Arner Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. W. H. Arner returned from her visit at Wasipa with friends on Saturday last, feeling unusually smart.

The village school closes this week Friday. In the evening the school will give a free entertainment at Cottage Hall. The program consists of declamations, recitations, dialogues and music. Some of the young people of the village will assist them. Let everybody come and enjoy a pleasant evening.

Children's day was observed Sunday in the usual way. The day was a beautiful one, and the attendance was quite large. The morning service was conducted by the Pastor, who delivered a very appropriate and interesting discourse for the occasion. The evening service was in charge of the Sunday school and the exercises passed off very nicely. The church presented a fine appearance, being decorated in and around the rostrum with house plants, flowers and ferns. The walls were decorated with pictures, etc., with here and there a bird cage, the occupants keeping up a chipper seeming to enjoy the occasion, while the little fish in the globes kept in a continuous motion.

William Birdsell, who had the misfortune to have an arm broken last fall, was compelled to have it broken over again Monday for some reason of which we did not learn. Dr. Stephenson of Adrian, performed the operation.

MACON MUSIC.

Our school taught by Fred Sabin of North Adams, and Miss Maude Howell of Macon, closed last Friday, June 10th, with appropriate exercises in both rooms; Miss Howell having her exercises in the forenoon in order that she and her scholars might attend the exercises of the other room in the afternoon. After the program had been carried out, which consisted of music both vocal and instrumental, reading a paper, and a historical sketch Emma Cotton, in behalf of the schol ars, presented Mr. Sabin with a very fine plush album; also Miss Howell received from her scholars a pair of vases. A number of visitors were present, and all seemed pleased with the program. The scholars all felt very sorry to part with Mr. Sabin, not knowing that they will ever meet him again. He is expecting to start for Colorado very soon where he will remain for some time. All wish him success.

The aid society held at Mrs. Edd Osgoods last week was well attended.

Senator Howell and wife called on friends Sunday.

Dr. Elmer Hendershot returned home last week.

Miss Persis Rimert closed her school in the Merritt district last week.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

The wet weather has interfered so much with cultivation that in some fields, on low ground, the corn is nearly hidden by the grass.

Commissioner Luce has ordered the building of several town bridges in this vicinity something that has been long needed, as a good share of our road taxes have had to go to the repairing of the old ones. Smith Mulger has the contract for two, and Mr. Lamkin another.

Milton Wood closed his school in Franklin last Friday.

Mrs. Wm. Witherell is very sick. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kinsey of Tecumseh, are staying with her at present.

John Eddy, who worked his father's farm in Franklin the year ago, has located in Colorado some sixty miles west of Kansas and intends to make a home there.

Lafayette Spencer and wife drove out from Raisin a few days ago, visiting at her parents, and afterward at the home of her sister, Mrs. Maggs, of Tecumseh township.

We are sorry to hear of the very serious illness of Mrs. Chas. Beebe, of South Franklin.

The big rains destroyed four acres of potatoes for Ed. Pawson and three for Mr. Hunt. They were planted on a reclaimed swamp that had been successfully farmed since 1882.

Will Spaulding, who showed his pluck and manliness by going west last April, has taken a claim in Logan Co., Kansas, and erected a shanty thereon. A box of household necessities having followed from home, he is now keeping bachelor's hall. We judge he was very fortunate in selecting his location, as, since his settlement a village of 150 inhabitants has sprung up within half a mile, and a railroad is on the way. Although in West Kansas, he reports the country well watered.

A number from this neighborhood attended the farmer's picnic at Sand Lake, Saturday, and report a splendid time. "Ye Editor's" speech is admiringly commented upon.

Fred Davenport has been repairing his barn and has also built a wagon shed and hen house.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF CHRONICLE.

And it came to pass after the reign of King Milton, that the scribes and pharisees assembled themselves together at the tabernacle to discuss the subject of their former ruler. Some declared one thing and some another, and thus the time was far being spent when there arose one among their number, saying Brethren and sisters, what offering of gratitude and love shall we make to one who walked daily out and in our temple discharging various duties from the rising of the sun till the going down of the same? After casting lots it was agreed, with one accord, that the said ruler should rest from his labors at the close of the 11th day of June, 1887, on an easy arm chair; so the happy group repaired to the home of M. F. Turrell on the evening above mentioned, and ere he could recline upon his couch they placed him in the chosen chair, while the hostess made glad their hearts with coffee, cake and other refreshments, and after an enjoyable time all returned to their homes with the well wishes of Mr. & Mrs. Turrell.

CAMBRIDGE.

On the beautiful luxuriant Sabbath day of June 12th, at the well remembered church in Cambridge, erected over thirty years ago by the generous farmers, with the aid of that truly Apostolic Clergyman, Rev. Wm. N. Lyster, whose services or benefits were never repaid on this earth, but now gone to the realms where admired rest and truth always prevails; at this church of St. Michaels and All Angels, Rev. A. R. Flower pastor, it was arranged with the Sunday school scholars and the Superintendent, John W. Dewey, to make on this delightful day a cheerful record to be long remembered by the congregation; there were large baskets of flowers brought, with beautiful entwined vines, not omitting many rare plants from the low lands of the ancient tamaracks. Thus was every part of this house built for the service of God, trimmed in artistic order as children's day with a large variety of admired roses, plants, ferns, evergreens. Also at one o'clock the church seats were nearly all full, the Sunday school scholars taking a full share.

Exercises began with prayer by Rev. A. R. Flower. First, the Superintendent announced a hymn which ten young girls of the first class sang in cheerful order, second, several recitations; third, prompt and perfect definations by a share of the school fourth, a beautiful selection sang by three young girls less than 12 years of age. C. H. Dewey made a short address to the S. S. scholars. Rev. A. R. Flower addressed the school. Superintendent J. W. Dewey made a very appropriate and closing sentiment for all. F. A. D.

Morenci has a bloated monopolist. One man there has bought all the livery stables and now lets out "hosses" at his own figures.

FRANKLIN & CAMBRIDGE FARMERS CLUB.

On Friday evening, May 27th, at the residence of A. J. Case, in Cambridge, occurred the regular meeting of the Farmers' Club. There was a large attendance, and after a short time spent in social conversation, the meeting was called to order by President D. W. Lyster, and the business of the club was attended to. A cordial invitation having been read by President Lyster from four other clubs to join with them in a picnic, to be held at Sand Lake, on the 11th of June, a motion was made to accept the invitation, which was carried. Then came some interesting literary exercises, after which the subject for discussion, "The ravages of the cut worm," was taken up. The following were appointed a committee for the next meeting: A. J. Case, T. M. Camburn, Mrs. Smith German. The next meeting will be at the residence of Alvinza Whelan, on the 24th of June, to which all are invited.

THE FLOWER MISSION.

The different local unions of the W. C. T. U., about the county assembled at the ladies temperance rooms in Adrian, last Thursday morning to make arrangements for the proper observance of Mission days. We gather the following from the report of the Times.

At 1:30 p. m., members of the different unions proceeded to the county poor house, where exercises were opened by singing "Jesus lover of my soul."

Mrs. G. Fuller, of Adrian union, led in prayer, followed by Scripture reading and remarks, by Mrs. Z. Cook of Raisin Valley union.

Singing "The land of the sweet bye and bye" followed, and then came the distribution of flowers by Mrs. S. R. Norton, of Adrian union, and Mrs. Jerome Palmer, of Blissfield union.

The ladies then visited the poor house hospital, where similar exercises were given.

The next visit was at the county jail, where the quartette sang "Jesus, lover of my soul," followed by prayer by Mrs. J. Bliss, of Blissfield.

Mrs. Mary C. Wood, the Quaker minister from Tecumseh union, read the 15th chapter of Luke, 1st to 24th verses, and gave an earnest address to the inmates.

Singing by a trio, and distribution of flowers by Miss Mattie Barber, of Raisin Valley union, and Mrs. Geo. Jones of Lenawee Junction union.

Mrs. H. L. Stewart gave a Scripture reading, and some good motherly advice to the girls at the jail.

The procession of carriages then moved on north to the State industrial home for girls, where they were greeted at the chapel by two hundred girls singing a beautiful song of welcome.

The trio accompanying the delegation gave a selection, and then Mrs. J. M. Geddes, of the Adrian union, read the first seventeen verses of the 13th chapter of John.

This was followed by prayer by Aunt Laura Haviland.

Mrs. Chas. Humphrey gave a fine address to the girls, which was followed by the trio singing, "What shall the harvest be."

The bouquets for the girls were then distributed by Mrs. M. W. Redfield, of Adrian union, and Mrs. M. P. Brown, of Tecumseh union.

Thus ended the pleasing exercisds of the day.

CERTAINLY THE BEST.

Papillon Clark's extract of flax Catarrh Cure, from an experiment, has grown to be the acknowledged superior of any remedy for similar purposes. Purely vegetable and scientifically prepared, it is absolutely harmless, and effects cures where all other known remedies and the most learned medical talent fail. That it is a favorite with all classes is evidenced by the fact that during the past two years, 86,000 gallons have been sold. Positively cures Catarrh, Hay Fever, Colds, etc. Large bottles $1,00.

For sale by A. S. Doty.

Clover cutting will commence next week.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

LESSON SEVEN.

THE COMMANDMENTS.—Exodus 20: 1-21.

NOTES.—The law is said to have been written on two tables of stone. How much was on the one and how much on the other is not clear. The answer to this question depends on the answer to the question whether the differences between the form given in Exodus and that in Deuteronomy indicate that the Commandments were originally given, as many scholars hold, in an abreviated form, and the full reasons were added when they were compiled in a book. In the former case only three or four could go on the first table. In the latter case five would be on the first table, and the division would be good, as piety toward parents would come more properly in the class with piety toward God than in that of duties to our fellow men.——"That thy days may be long."—Primarily the days of the nation in Canaan, not those of the individual son.——"Shalt do no murder."—This is different from killing, as killing might apply to the execution of criminals or to war. The command is against willful and unlawful slaying.——"Not commit adultery."—The primary command is against infidelity to a husband or wife, but its intent includes other forms of impurity.——"Falsewitness."—Especially in lying about him in a court of law. This command is very much like the third, but forbids an offense against a man, while the third forbids the offences against God.——"Thou shalt not covet."—It is difficult to see how this command could be reduced, as some critics do by assuming that only the first prohibition was uttered at Sinai. But Exodus and Deuteronomy differ as to what is the first prohibition. It would seem as if this command were a broader repetition of some that had gone before, forbidding even a coveting of the things against which prohibition was expressed in the seventh and eight commandment.—"They . . . stood afar off."—As they had been ordered to.

INSTRUCTION.—The word pietas in Latin means as much dutifulness toward parents as toward God.—Parents are in the place of God to the child. It is the same sort of sentiment which makes a child, affectionate and obedient to parents as makes his father and mother affectionate and obedient to God. We may hope that a child will grow up pious toward God if he has been trained to piety toward his parents, and not otherwise.

Because piety to parents and to God are so akin it is appropriate that the fifth commandment should be the last of the first tables of the law, or, at least, the link between the two.

Long national life is promised to those that honor their parents. Of all nations the Chinese are the oldest, and they most honor their parents.

The true spirituality of the commandments is explained in the Sermon on the Mount. It is not merely the words that are to be obeyed but the letter. Scribe is not free of the guilt of breaking the sixth commandment who has done no murder, but only he who indulges no anger and is affectionate even to enemies.

Remember that the Revised Version does not say "Thou shalt not kill," but "Thou shalt do no murder." Killing may be right. The command is not against killing animals, or killing in a just war, or in punishment.

The guilt of the murder rests on those who bring war unjustly against a people. That one is a king does not free him from the guilt of murder. Napoleon was a great murderer.

Impurity of thought and word as well as of deed is forbidden in the seventh commandment. The young should very carefully keep a clean mouth and a pure heart. Coarse and vulgar stories and jokes are ungentlemanly as well as indecent. Don't associate with those who tell them.

Large thefts are forbidden—thefts from parents, thefts from railroad or horse car companies, thefts from the state or the public. Many people who would be thought honest do not hesitate to take things from their relatives without permission or to steal a ride or to avoid paying a tax. But it is all pure theft.

False witness against one's neighbor is the worst form of lying, but falsehood for one's neighbor, or falsehood out of mischief or sport is also forbidden by the spirit of the command.

Truthfulness is the chief mark of courage and manliness.

The tenth commandment shows that these commands are exceeding broad. It forbids the beginning of sin. It reaches the heart.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JUNE

THE GRAND ARMY AND THE PRESIDENT.

[illegible] very needlessly because the people of St. Louis have invited the president of the United States to be present in that city on the occasion of the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. There seems to be two factions of the Grand Army, one of which can never forgive the president for vetoing the dependent soldiers bill, and the other which holds that he did his duty as he saw it. At all events they do not regard that act of the president as one that removes him from the pale of respectability and renders him the object for gratuitous insult. The president of the United States is the commander of the nation's army and navy, and as such, if nothing more is even proposed from a visit from a body of men whose highest pride it is that they have faithfully and well served the country in the field of battle. The assertion made by some that it is simply to further his own chances for renomination that he accepts the invitation to be present at St. Louis is pure nonsense and would be brought forward only by an idiot. The country generally with out regard to party sustained the president very warmly for the veto of the dependent soldiers bill, and in this he received also the indorsement of a large number of soldiers, although the veto was not regarded with favor by the Grand Army. That however is a matter which should not be brought in the matter. The only question is, were the reasons given by the president in his message for vetoing the bill valid? Had they not been so [illegible] would have passed the bill over Mr. Hayes's veto. The reasons are [illegible] the veto was now its moments beyond dispute, and certainly [illegible] Democratic [illegible] the president, shall be [illegible] for his action that is said to be the intention. We do not believe the Grand Army as a body is in favor of slighting the president or of treating him with disrespect. The [illegible] that the president [illegible] as he has never [illegible] to force his presence upon those who did not desire it.

FOREIGN TUITIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY.

The question of raising the tuition of foreign students has been brought up by Governor Luce, who in his inaugural has assumed that if 751 non resident students now yield $[illegible] income to the University, to double the fees would cause the foreign students to bring in a revenue of $[illegible], but it wouldn't. In fact if this raising of fees went very far there would not be any foreign students paying fees. This would compel the University to call upon the legislature for more funds. For the expenses of the University is plainly determined by the number of branches of study taught and not to any extent by the number of students. For instance in the law department, the expense of lecturing to the 150 students from this State would be exactly the same as is now incurred in lecturing to the 350 students of the department. But owing to the $1,500 fees received from the foreign students, the law department was last year enabled to pay all its own expenses and a balance of $[illegible] was left. Excluding the foreign students would cause a deficit of $[illegible]. In the other departments the same story may be told. The following table indicates the proportion of fees paid by the non resident students in the various departments.

[illegible]

The only saving in excluding the foreign students would be the salaries of four professors and professors and tutors. Gov. Luce estimates the saving at $[illegible] but certainly $[illegible] represents the gross saving. The loss would be $[illegible] to the state of Michigan. In the light of the figures Luce's economy seems to be of the penny-wise and pound-foolish variety. Ann Arbor Argus.

The Next Naval War.

[illegible] sat comfortably in an easy chair in the drawing room of the Hotel Balzac and chatted half an hour or so about a variety of naval matters.

"Yes," he said in reply to my inquiry, "you are right. The next naval war will [illegible] attack of a torpedo boat, of course. I suppose we can do it if the thing comes round I mean, for the armor plates never cover the bottom, but the question is, can the torpedo boats [illegible] to carry out their charges? You see, we have [illegible] the ships at the place, [illegible] of the ships battery [illegible] the ships battery [illegible] but we can do the [illegible]

I suppose that the torpedo boats [illegible] to be [illegible] Well, we pay [illegible] have met with very little success but of course if such a system can [illegible] the [illegible] rather an advantage to remain on shore. How [illegible] I think that the torpedoes will have their greatest application in the harbor and coast defenses. There we shall see some lively times, the defenders ready to touch an electric button and blow into pieces the first ship to cross the spot where the dynamite lies ready, and the ships belonging on the other hand and mostly at night, to destroy the torpedoes or cut the wires. It will be like the old game of mining and countermining."

In regard to our own naval strength the admiral said: "We are, you know, supposed to be absurdly weak in our navy. It is just as we have no advantage over any other country, that we can predict now by a long series of failures and improvements made by them while we have been doing nothing. Our new ships will represent [illegible] the efficacy of [illegible] time found to be best.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.

Speed of a Fast Train.

Speed is hard to measure. The old and [illegible] gradually [illegible] a march. An advance of 8 miles per hour [illegible] Pennsylvania "limited" is to run from depot to depot in Philadelphia, 90 miles in less than two hours. The "Flying Dutchman" train is supposed to make the fastest time in the world, between Leamington and Bristol, 118 1-4 miles, in less than two hours. The average, though, of even this fast train is only 59 1-8 miles per hour. There are several other trains noted for remarkably fast time on short distances. Sometimes a straight and [illegible] a grade for a distance of 20 miles will permit a train to run at the rate of more than a mile a minute. One train on the Canadian Pacific road, from Cotaneau to Ottawa, averages 50 miles an hour for a distance of 75 miles. On the Central road the late Mr. Vanderbilt travelled at the rate of 90 miles an hour. An average of 36 1-2 miles an hour is considered fast traveling. Many of the United Lightning expresses travel at a faster rate. The value of railways in the United States exceeds $8,000,000,000.—New York Mail and Express Interview.

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Cady Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and now able to do all my own housework and owe my thanks to Electric Bitters. I having renewed my youth, and have moved completely all disease and pain.

CHAPTER XIII.

FRANK MULLER SHOWS HIS HAND

Presently Muller turned round. "Do you know why I have told you this, Oom Silas?" he asked.

"No."

"Because I want you to understand that you and all the Englishmen in this country are in a very dangerous position. The war is a coming, and whether it goes for you or against you, you must suffer. You Englishmen have many enemies. You have got all the trade and own nearly half the land, and you are always standing up for the black people, whom the Boers hate. It will go hard with you if there is a war. You will be sent and your houses will be burned, and if you lose the day, those who escape will be driven out of the country. It will be the Transvaal for the Transvaalers, then, and Africa for the Afrikanders."

"Well, Frank Muller, and if all this should come to pass what of it? What are you driving at, Frank Muller? You don't scare me, you know, but I like to know."

The boer laughed. "Of course I don't. Oom Silas. Well, if you want to know, I will tell you what I mean. I mean that I could protect you and your place and people in the bad times that are coming. I have more influence in the land than you know of. Perhaps, even, I could save old the war, and if I saved the [illegible] I would do it. At the least I could keep you from being harmed, that I know. But I have my price, Oom Silas, as we all have, and it may be money down and the credit."

"I don't understand you at [illegible]," said the old man, coldly. "I am a straightforward man, and if you will tell me what you mean I will give you my answer at once. I do not see the good of [illegible] talking."

"Very well! I will tell you what I mean. I mean Jessie. I mean that I love your niece and want to marry her. I say, I mean I marry her by fair means or foul—and that she will have nothing to say to me."

"And what have I to do with that, Frank Muller? The girl is her own mistress. I cannot dispose of her in marriage, even if I wanted to, as to that is the law of my land. You must plead your own suit and take your own answer."

"I have pleaded my suit and I have my answer," answered the boer, with passion. "Don't you make a mistake, she will have nothing to say to me. Sooner or later she will be my vrouw. Now, Oom Silas, I am in earnest, I love the girl, I want her, and I will have her. Now, I ask you, will you help me or will you be against me? Remember, I can do much either way. Will you be my friend or my enemy? Speak!"

"And what have I to do with that, Frank Muller? The girl is her own mistress. I cannot dispose of her in marriage, even if I wanted to, as to that is the law of my land. You must plead your own suit and take your own answer."

Will you be my friend or my enemy? Speak!"

"Why, replied Silas Croft, calmly, "is that not Jess? Then she shows very good taste, for John Nel is an honest man. Frank Muller, and you are not. I beg you pardon," he went on, with a sudden outburst of passion, "I tell you that you are a dishonorable man and a villain. I tell you that you murdered the Hottentot Jantje's father, mother and uncle in cold blood when you were yet a lad. I tell you that the other day you tried to murder John Nel, pretending to mistake him for a buck. And now you, who petitioned for this country to be taken over by the queen, and have gone round singing out your loyalty at the top of your voice, come and tell me that you are posting to bring about an insurrection and to plunge the land into war, and ask me for Jessie as the price of your protection. And now I will tell you something in answer, Frank Muller," and the old man rose up, his keen eyes flashing with wrath, and stretching his long frame, pointed toward the door, "without out of that door and never come through it again. I pay open debt and the English nation to protect me, and not on such as you, and I would rather see my dear Jessie dead in her coffin than married to a knave and traitor and a murderer like Frank Muller. Go!"

FARMERS UNION PICNIC.

HELD BY THE FARMERS' CLUBS OF THIS VICINITY AT SAND LAKE LAST SATURDAY.

A Day of Enjoyment and Pleasure, Boating and Bathing, Fishing and Sailing, Music and Mirth.

A few weeks ago the four farmers' clubs in this vicinity conceived the idea of uniting their forces and getting up a union picnic at Sand Lake. A conference committee was appointed, a program was arranged and last Saturday was the appointed day for the affair. A more convenient time for the farmers could not have been chosen and the day proved to be a beautiful one for a picnic gathering. At an early hour in the morning teams from Tecumseh and Franklin and the adjoining towns could be seen wending their way westward, and by noon Putnam's grove was filled with a jolly but hungry crowd. The tables were prepared promptly at noon, and by one o'clock a sumptuous dinner had been disposed of, and people were ready for the balance of the program.

At that hour the crowd was gathered about the band stand, and the literary program was opened with a selection by the Tecumseh City Band. Mr. Wesley B. Keyser of the Northern Lenawee Club presided in a very acceptable manner.

After music by the band the toast entitled "Our Farmers' Clubs" was called and Mr. I. H. Schreder responded. Mr. Schreder is the President of the "Social Club," which is the Pioneer club of this vicinity, and he gave an interesting sketch of the aims and purposes of these organizations.

Next followed a quartette by the Franklin Glee Club, entitled "Come where the lillies bloom." This club consists of W. M. Alexander, Burt Briggs, E. A. Wilson and Vern Roberts, with Miss Alexander as organist. They sing together very finely and their vocal music was a material addition to the program.

Next came the toast "Our Youngest Club" which was responded to by H. W. Love, who is the President of the recently organized Franklin and Cambridge Club. This club has had only one or two meetings but is getting finely started. The committee of arrangements extended an invitation to this club to participate in the picnic, which was gladly accepted.

Then came a quartette by the Raisin Glee Club, entitled "Dat Watermillion." This club is well known for their inimitable vocal music and no praise is needed for them. The club consists of Wm. Wilson, Arthur Green, Spencer Lester and C. Beardsley, with Miss Vina Underwood as organist. This club sang at the Institute last winter and were warmly received at that time. They received a hearty encore and responded with "Barnyard Serenade."

Next came the toast "Club Reporters," to which S. C. Stacy responded.

The Franklin Glee Club followed with the quartette "A little Farm Well Tilled." It was splendidly sang and brought down the house. In response to an encore they gave "Kingdom Coming," which was also enthusiastically received.

The toast "Farmers' Wives" was then responded to by Mr. B. Hurry, who is the President of the Tecumseh and Franklin Club. His remarks were well received and were very appropriate.

The Raisin Glee Club then gave another quartette "Hear dem Bells," and upon being called back they gave "Jolly Jonathan."

Volunteer speeches were called for. Rev. J. H. Maynard of Sparta, Mich., a former resident of Macon, was introduced who favored the crowd with a spicy and interesting talk of fifteen minutes.

The Raisin Glee Club then rendered the chorus, "The Man Behind the Plow," which closed the formal program. The Tecumseh Band then took the stand and gave a few of their latest and best selections.

Three o'clock had now arrived and the crowd scattered. Some went rowing, others sailing, and others to ride on one of the steamers, while some sauntered along the south shore making a tour of inspection of the cottages. The row boats were busy the entire day, and both steamers were well patronized. At five o'clock the tables were again spread and the portion of the crowd who remained indulged in supper. A large proportion of those in attendance remained about the lake until sundown and drove home in the cool of the evening. It was voted by all that a custom had been inaugurated by the farmers' clubs of Northern Lenawee which must be kept up regularly each year and that the first annual picnic under their auspices had been an unqualified success.

PICKLES AND DOUGHNUTS.

The weather clerk was in his most [illegible] mood. A fine breeze was stirring all day, making it pleasant for boating and sailing.

Not the least accident occurred to mar the general enjoyment, and a happier gathering we never saw.

The series of exercises passed off without a hitch and seemed to give general satisfaction.

The committee in charge of the picnic are entitled to much credit for the completeness of their arrangements. Everything moved along like clock work.

The clubs themselves felt not a little adulation over the success of their first attempt in this line. With the experience gained this year, they can gather a much larger crowd another season.

The number in attendance during the day and evening was variously estimated, some placing it as high as [illegible] and probably as many more people were scattered about the grounds and on the lake at that hour. The shades of evening brought a large crowd of visitors who were not there during the day.

Putnam's grove and stables were filled with teams and scores of farmers took their teams over to Wells's on the north side.

There was a generous rivalry between the two glee clubs which seemed to inspire both of them to do their level best.

The Tecumseh Band never played better. They are improving daily.

Hunt's orchestra was present and furnished music for a goodly company of dancers during the afternoon and evening.

The band reminded there over Sunday, and both organizations gave recitals on Sunday morning and afternoon to a large crowd of listeners.

Our band and Hunt's orchestra form a musical team which cannot be equalled in this section of the state.

We made a brief call at the Hayden cottage and found Mr. and Mrs. Hayden ready to entertain their friends. They have made some additions to the cottage this spring and now have a very convenient and commodious summer house.

We also called at George Tiffany's cottage but much to our regret we found them not at home. They were enjoying the day with picnickers outside.

An addition has been erected to Putnam's Hotel during the past winter and he has a very commodious resort.

His steam yacht, the Manitou, is a snug little craft, new and safe. It was crowded during the day with picnickers.

We gave Mr. Wells a short call on the north side, and found him in fine health and spirits. His business is opening finely this spring. His hotel is now headquarters for Fred Deuel's new steamer which he will undoubtedly find an advantage to him.

If Mr. Putnam expects to entertain picnics of this character regularly, it behoves him to build seating accommodations for at least one thousand people, and to enlarge the speakers' stand. That should be at least four times its present size. His arrangements for accommodating a large crowd to listen to a lengthy program are very meagre.

Fred Deuel's new steamer, the G. A. R., was the center of attraction and was overrun with patronage from morning till night. For beauty, safety and speed, it certainly takes the cake among all the small steamers on either Sand or Devils lakes.

Mr. Putnam forbid Fred from taking on passengers at his dock. Unless we are misinformed Sand Lake is a meandered lake. It is as much public property as the Chicago turnpike. We see no reason why any jealousy should exist between the owners of the two steamers. They are both nice boats, and there is patronage enough for both of them.

Mr. Wells's sailboats were frequently called into use, and it was a fine day to test them. The Pearl took us across the lake in about fifteen minutes.

REMINISCENCES OF RAISIN INSTITUTE.

Paper Read at the Raisin Valley Seminary Reunion Held on Thursday, June 2d, by Mrs. F. C. Rector, of Tecumseh.

Backward, turn backward, O time, in your flight,
Make us boys and girls again, just for to-day.

Gladly would we turn time backward in its flight that we might recognize, in the faces here, the boys and girls that attended the Raisin institute in "old lang syne." As we clasp hands at these reunions, we try to recognize in the faces grown older, and the locks turning gray, the boys of twenty five or thirty years ago; we look in vain for the rosy cheeks and coquetish ways of the girls we remember, in the sedate, matronly women with the "silver threads among the gold." We can hardly make it seem possible, as we begin to recognize some remembered face, that it can be this one or that one, for we have not met some of them for years, and memory brings the faces as they were in the past, and we cannot make them seem the same all the while forgetting that we too have grown old and are also as strangers.

As we begin to talk and bring up old reminiscences and incidents of our youthful days, old friends and acquaintances, the strangeness wears off as we recognize the tone of the voice, expression of the eyes, or some well remembered gesture, and we are boys and girls to each other for a time.

To-day to renew old acquaintances and talk of old times, that we may not become or continue strangers.

I intend to recall incidents of olden times, but shall confine myself principally to the years just preceding the war. As we look at them from the standpoint of the mature years many of them appear foolish, but we will be young again to-day and try to enjoy them with the old time zest.

As I see before me some who must have attended this institute in its early years, I will relate two incidents as related by Rev. John Patchin.

He said: "I had called upon one of my young sweethearts, Jane West, and had kneeled down with her to pray, when I was summoned to prayers to reprove several of the leading scholars for some slight impropriety of the day before, but in administering my rebuke I failed to maintain a proper dignity. My feelings overcame my self control and I burst out crying in the presence of all my scholars. The feeling seemed contagious and nearly the whole school fell to weeping. I could not say another word only to dismiss the students to their rooms. I was somewhat in doubt as to what might be the result of my unexpected break down before the school, but before long those who had been out of the way came to me with humble acknowledgements asking forgiveness, and others came confessing errors of which I had no knowledge, and all promising that there should be no occasion for complaint thereafter. I think the promise was conscientiously kept and that which threatened to be a serious disturbance was happily bridged over and the threatened evil was overruled for good."

He also adds: "There is another item of my experience in Raisin of considerable interest to me. It is that there I preached my first sermon during my first term as teacher. The students wishing some religious services besides the prayer meeting, asked me to preach to them a sermon. I promptly refused, as I was not a minister, never had preached, and never thought of preaching until I had fully prepared myself by a thorough course of study. But one Sabbath morning a passage of Scripture occurred to my mind, accompanied by a train of thought, which I quickly jotted down on a piece of paper. I was drawn by some influence to go to the schoolroom where our religious services were held, and present the text and the thoughts I had upon it to the students and neighbors there assembled. They called it a sermon. Perhaps it was. It seemed to me that in it I had told all I knew or ever could know of religious truth. Truly, I could never do the like again, for I had exhausted all my resources; but to my surprise, the next Lord's day, a similar experience was repeated. A fountain seemed open that would not run dry, and it came to be generally understood that a sermon would be forthcoming at the regular hour of meeting."

There are many reminiscences connected with Grahamtown, and I hardly know where to begin or what to tell, but one is given by R. B. Robinson which, undoubtedly, some of the boys remember:

One night, after the other boys had retired, he darkened the window with a thick green curtain, and sat down at the table by the window, trying hard to dig out some abtruse proposition, when his lamp, that was filled with the burning fluid common in those days, burst and set the window curtain on fire. In an instant the whole surface of the table, book, and curtain, were in a flame. In his fright he caught up a pail of water and dashed it on the fire. The water not only went on the burning paper, but through it and through the window, breaking out several panes of glass. At this junction he opened the door and yelled fire. The boys, more asleep than awake, came running into the hall without much thought of the appropriateness of their attire; in fact, it would have been discovered that it was nature scantily adorned, as they rushed frantically up and down the hall, had it not been for the total darkness which pervaded the whole scene, for by this time the flames had consumed the small amount of burning fluid, leaving the room in Egyptian darkness. He was only able to convince the boys that his cry of fire was not a practical joke, by borrowing a lamp and showing them the havoc himself and water had made. As is customary in great conflagrations, the firemen had done more damage with the water than had been done by fire.

The spirit of mischief delights to dwell with students, and particularly where they room together in a large building. A colored student at one time attended the school and a mischievous white student discovering a cake of ice, in a pail, that would slip out easily, concluded to play a cool joke on the unsuspecting colored student. The night was cold, and knowing that the colored student was out and would return late, the white student put the cake of ice in his bed. The colored student returned late as anticipated, and being very cold, he hurried to bed, but he felt the ice, and thought it rather cold comfort, and as he was not ready to be packed in ice, naturally felt very indignant, and next day entered complaint to Aunt Laura. She advised him to find a pail that the ice would fit, hoping in this way, to find the culprit. He went around trying to fit the ice, but the white student thinking investigation had proceeded far enough contrived to jostle him just as he was going down the back stairs, and the ice [illegible] door, where one of the boys was splitting wood. He accidentally hit the ice, and shivered it to pieces, and investigation proceeded no farther.

Aunt Laura always tried to preserve the utmost decorum in everything pertaining to the institute, and it was her aim that nothing should be done that should cause talk, as is shown by the following poem written by Walter Anderson and his sister Kate:

Young Mulard was walking the schoolroom one morning,
Aunt Laura came to him, and thus she did say:
"The scholars to the Falls, they hike, they must walk
But if you couple off, it will make a bad talk."
So Mulard got them safely there in a flock, much to the regret of the boys, who would have preferred a more quiet walk, but after the exercises Prof. M. stopped to have a short interview with the professor at the seminary, and the young people took advantage of the interview and started back to the institute in couples, some going north, some east, etc., as fancy dictated. Soon the professor, remembering his charge, began to look for them that he might marshal them in order, but lo, they had flown, with the exception of one young lady, to whom he gave his arm with the remark, "I guess we are left, but if we hurry we can overtake them;" but they went alone, which circumstance called for this concluding stanza:

Now, my young friends, my advice to you all,
Is to go single or not go at all;
Or, like the professor, go up in a flock,
And when you return, return in the lock.

Cupid was a frequent lodger at the institute. Indeed I think he was seldom absent, and many were the ways, beside using his bow and arrows, by which he contrived to mature his plans. Knowing that cold water used with plaster of Paris would make a firm and enduring cement he thought to use it in uniting hearts, as the following reminiscence, "given in the writer's own words," will show:

"Time—eighteen hundred and four—people know when. A bright, windy day the last of March a young student took his best girl out for a walk. They wandered by the riverside. River pretty high from recent rains. Tiring of one side they undertook to cross on a fallen tree. Wind blew the young lady into river and she pulled young student after. Both touched bottom in twelve feet of water, but came to the top right side up. Young student flounced around, gained a foothold, and helped the young lady out. Young student emptied his boots of water, the young lady wrung her clothes, and they took a short cut through orchards and by-ways for institute. Each one was met by room mate and helped to change garments. Wet ones hustled way back in the orchard to dry, when both dry as powder, immediately appeared among the other students as gay as larks. Just then a young man from a neighboring farm appeared, and asked if young student and young lady fell into river? Says he saw young student empty his boots and young lady wring her skirts. Students say that cannot be, as they both are here and have not been away long enough to get dry. Young S. and Young L. came forward and disclaimed any knowledge of such an affair. Young farmer concluded his eyes were eclipsed, and he had better go home. Result—married—children."

Ghosts of departed frolics! I should think they would hover near Tom Camburn in waking or sleeping hour. Young Smith was very fond of eggs, and boasted that he could eat two dozen at one time. Some of the boys, Tom being their leader, told him they would furnish the eggs and pay him twenty-five cents if he succeeded in doing it; if not, he was to then pay for the eggs and give them twenty-five cents. He accepted. The eggs were boiled hard and well buttered, so that they would slip down easily. Smith said, and he commenced. After swallowing fifteen he became very pale, but was courageous enough to say, "I can do it boys, but it will make me spew," a proceeding which he shortly performed. Tom began to think they were getting more than they bargained for, and he said, "Hold on Smith, and I will pay for the eggs."

Aunt Laura, do you remember the free ride those laughing girls gave you one day? The carpet in one of the rooms had become very dirty and the owners concluded to take it up and clean it. Some of the girls were helping them shake it, when Aunt Laura came along, and they quickly caught her and seated her in the carpet, and gave her a ride, entirely deaf to her cries of "Why girls, don't." Who would mistrust our matronly Julia Edwards of such tricks?

Ah, those were happy, happy days, and happy and free were the students who enjoyed them. Where are they all? Some have gone to try life in the distant west, others we have lost trace of, many have settled in dear old Lenawee, as this reunion bears evidence, and others have passed over to the "other shore," but it seems to me that they are very near us to-day.

Aunt Laura is nearing the sunset of life, but what a glorious one, and how peaceful her face is calm and beautiful, as she looks back over her long, active, well spent life, there can be no painful recollections, and she can see with the clear eye of faith the pearly gates standing invitingly ajar to admit her, when her work is finished, and when she stands "over there," and, when time is no more for us, I fancy she will call the roll, and may even one of her old students respond, "present!"

The Population of Tecumseh

Is about 2800 and we would say at least one half are troubled with some affection of the Throat and Lungs, as those complaints are, according to statistics, more numerous than others. We would advise all not to neglect the opportunity to call on us and get a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free. WEDDING BELLS.

Dr. A. P. Coddington's spacious parlors were filled with a merry company last Thursday to assist in celebrating the nuptials of his daughter Ella to Scott Remington. The guests began to assemble at three o'clock. The ceremony was performed at four o'clock by Rev. F. Adkins, pastor of the Baptist church, in a short but impressive formula. Congratulations followed and then a season of feasting and social converse. The tables were spread beneath a canvas arbor on the lawn and the guests did ample justice to the rich array of viands which would have tempted the taste of the most exacting epicure. Music, mirth and jollity took possession of the mansion at the close of refreshments and reigned supreme until the shades of evening fell, when the hundred guests participated in the festivities, many of whom came from abroad. It was a home-like family gathering. The blushing bride and silver haired matron were duly saluted, and all entered into the pleasures of the occasion with signal zest. A large and beautiful collection of wedding gifts, comprising useful as well as ornamental, bore to the esteem in which bride and groom were held by their friends. The usual wedding trip was dispensed with, and the contracting parties settled down at once to the realities of life at the residence of the groom's parents, which for the present is their own home.

The bride and groom have lived in this city for many years, where a host of friends who will bid God-speed in their new relation and wish them unbounded joy in meeting life's responsibilities. It was a splendid match and a "merry wedding," was the verdict of the favored ones who attended the nuptials.

Strange is the tale that I relate,
Nor does it seem to carry weight
But alone in a proper mate
Is proper time to marry.

Chas. Beebe went to Union City this week to pitch a game of base ball for the club of that town.

A. O. Miller passed through the village yesterday en route for Addison and other western towns on the M. & O.

C. C. Pitman, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Corey, for a few days, started on Tuesday for San Francisco to seek his fortune. May the best of luck attend him.

Erk. Anderson has sold his milk business to Fred Wilson. Mr. Wilson has given up the milling business and the steam mills will hereafter be in charge of Mr. Burtch.

Uncle Geo. Sheeler, of Cambridge, has been spending a portion of this week with his Tecumseh friends. He favored the HERALD with a pleasant call as he always does when in town.

A. G. Fonda, editor of the Hillsdale Lance was in town Saturday, and favored the HERALD with a short call. Mr. Fonda is making a live paper of the Lance, which is gaining a large circulation.

Wm. Hayden and Geo. Tiffany occupied their new cottages at Sand Lake last week. The latch string was out at both cottages last Saturday, and many of the picnickers called to pay their respects.

Fred Deuel's new steamer on Sand Lake is a little dandy and no mistake. The boat makes good time and has plenty of patronage. We are glad that Fred is likely to do well out of his venture.

Rev. J. H. Maynard, of Sparta, Mich., was visiting old acquaintances in this vicinity last week. He attended the Farmer's picnic last Saturday and was drafted into the service there to good advantage.

A letter from Geo. W. Knapp of Mt. Pleasant received the other day contained a remittance for his paper accompanied by some good fatherly advice. We are glad to know that Geo. is prospering in his new location.

The exercises of commencement week at the State Normal School will begin on Friday, June 24th and close on Tuesday, June 28th. Commencement proper will take place on the latter date, to be followed by the Alumni Banquet.

The Tecumseh base ball club went to Clinton last Friday with the intention of taking the scalp off the club of that town. Our sister village had too strong a nine however, and came off victorious, the score standing 22 to 25 in their favor. Our club will renew the attempt Friday afternoon, and better results are hoped for.

Frank Pitcher, of Franklin, started from this station on Saturday afternoon's freight to take care of a load of horses consigned to Buffalo, and while in the yards at that city, he accidentally caught his leg between the moving train and the platform, bruising it so that amputation was necessary. He was taken to the hospital there. Before starting he took out an accident policy for the sum of $3,000.

A. H. Chaplin, proprietor of the Tecumseh rake factory, met with a serious accident Monday afternoon, which nearly resulted in the loss of his life. He was engaged in running a turning lathe, and wanting to stop it he reached over with his right hand to throw off the belt, when the gouge he was using slipped out of his left hand and struck his right leg cutting a terrible gash, and but for timely assistance he would have bled to death, as the main artery in his leg was severed.

The rhetoric class in the High School were assigned the task of writing on the subject of capital punishment. Each member was to write an essay, choosing for himself the affirmative or negative. These papers were presented and read last Friday, eleven being in favor of the death penalty and eight against it. Two members of the class were absent, who would have joined the negative. On Monday and Tuesday the class hour was devoted to a discussion of the subject, and the question was thoroughly presented, pro and con. The class became quite enthusiastic before the discussion closed. As there was a majority of one among the members favorable to the affirmative the final decision was on that side. It was so near a drawn battle, however, that the disputants themselves on both sides claimed the victory.

Burt Garlinghouse was in Ypsilanti Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Fowler, of Ann Arbor, were in town to-day.

Everything points to an old fashioned rouser in Tecumseh, on the Fourth of July.

C. H. Hopkins, of Battle Creek, is spending a few days among his Tecumseh friends.

Our Fourth of July celebration is marching right along. We are bound to have a big time.

Marshal Kyle has been serving a lot of sidewalk notices lately. One result is a new walk in front of the HERALD Office.

There will be a special communication of Tecumseh Lodge No. 39 F. & A. M. to-morrow (Friday) evening. Work in the third degree.

Mr. S. J. Lathe, the mining engineer, who made the surveys for the Star Mountain Mining Co. has been in town a day or two and is now at Ridgeway on business connected with his company.

Rev. F. Adkins took a trip to Minneapolis week before last to attend the National Baptist Anniversaries. He also stopped on the road and paid a visit to the International S. S. Convention at Chicago.

The Bay View Assembly meetings will open on the 27th of July and close on the 10th of August. A copy of the Assembly Herald can be obtained by addressing that paper at Flint Mich.

The Annual sermon before the graduating class of the High School will be preached by Rev. F. Adkins at the Baptist church next Sunday evening, June 19th at 7:30 o'clock. Other congregations will unite in the service.

Don't forget to attend the Ladies' ice cream and strawberry festival in Heesen's hall Saturday afternoon and evening, June 18th. After listening to the music by the band step into the hall and get a dish of nice ice cream and strawberries and cream.

The present corps of teachers in the Tecumseh Schools have accepted the invitation to remain another year except Misses Nyland and Henderson. This will leave only two vacancies to be filled. The Board is to be congratulated on the fact that so many of them have concluded to remain.

In order to secure tents from the state it has been found necessary to change the dates of the southwestern G. A. R. encampment at Adrian one week later than originally contemplated. It is officially announced that the dates will be Aug. 30 to Sept. 2, inclusive.

Geo. Heesen went to Kalamazoo last week to examine an evaporator establishment, with a view of building something of the kind in Tecumseh this season. He is now making a careful investigation of the probable expense and income of such a business and will soon decide whether it will be safe to embark in it.

On Saturday morning we shall offer a large line of handsome fine Dress Goods at very low prices. We intend to close out the lot at once, and have marked them at very low prices they will go quickly. Call and see them.
W. & S. W. ANDERSON & Co.

"Children's Day" services at the Baptist church will be held next Sunday, June 19th. The morning hour of worship and the Sunday School hour will be devoted to these special services. The pastor will preach a sermon to the children at 10:30 A. M. and this will be followed by children's concert exercises under the direction of the S. S. Superintendent. All are invited.

Ladies, now is your chance; if you are wise you will take advantage of it. Mrs. M. A. Freeman has a full assortment of hats and bonnets of the latest summer styles and shapes, which she is selling at astonishingly low prices. A dazzling array of ribbons, laces, flowers and trimmings of all kinds. Hair goods a specialty. Call and inspect her stock and you are sure to be pleased.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church, of Adrian District, will hold its annual convention at the M. E. church in this place, commencing Thursday June 16th, at three o'clock P. M. There will be services in the evening of the same day, also on Friday A. M. and P. M. An interesting program is prepared and a cordial invitation is extended to all to be present at the meetings.

The first excursion to Presque Isle Park after the opening will run from Battle Creek over the C. J. & M. road on Saturday next, June 18th. Following are the rates of fare which will buy a trip ticket to the Park and return and the schedule time on which the excursion train will run,

TECUMSEH WILL CELEBRATE.

Arrangements are being perfected for a grand 4th of July celebration in Tecumseh, and every indication points to a successful one. The committees having the matter in charge are putting in hard work and the outlook is that they are secuing are sure to bring a tremendous crowd.

About $125 worth of fire works have been purchased for the evening. The City Band will furnish music, but it has been thought best to forego the usual fire-works display, as there are enough bands in the county to make it a success, but three of them will be invited to participate in the celebration. Bicycle races will be a feature, and about $50 in prizes will be divided among the different classes. A glass ball and clay pigeon shoot, possibly a balloon ascension, wheelbarrow races, sack races, and a trotting matinee at Bills' race track. The merchants are requested to decorate their places of business, and also to prepare a car or float to take part in the procession, representing the different trades and industries. Several military companies and G. A. R. societies will be invited to take part in the parade.

A complete program will be published in next week's HERALD. Below are the different committees.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK.

Next week will be commencement week in the High School. The following will be the order of exercises:

SUNDAY, JUNE 19.

Annual sermon at Baptist church, by Rev. F. Adkins, at 7:30 P. M.

THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 23.

Graduating exercises of the class of '87, at the Opera House. It has been decided on the occasion of these exercises to charge an admission fee of ten cents. The school board in justification of this innovation would cite 1, that such a practice is quite common in many other places, and 2, that there is still an indebtedness upon the school piano which has to be met, and that it is the intention to meet that indebtedness with these receipts. This will be a saving of just that much to the tax payers of the school district. Not a dollar of the public funds has been appropriated thus far in paying for the piano and it is hoped that by adopting the above plan, it will not be necessary to make such an appropriation.

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 24.

The annual meeting of the Alumni Association will occur as usual. The officers of the association and participants in the literary program are as follows.

President—C. A. Slayton.
1st Vice Pres.—Lyster Dewey.
2nd Vice Pres.—Inez Laing.
Treasurer—Mabel Hayden.
Secretary—Edgar L. Ide.
Toast Master—D. A. Hammond.
Poet—J. W. Patterson.
Alternate—Mrs. J. J. Freeman.
Orator—Frank Hall.
Alternate—Herbert McNair.
Essayist—Elida James.
Alternate—Julia Suel.
Historian—Mrs. S. W. Anderson.
Alternate—Dena Heesen.
Ex. Com.—Mrs. S. P. Hosmer, Maggie Clarkson, Lyster Dewey, David McNair.

The program will be interspersed with music by the Tecumseh orchestra and a quartette of gentlemen. After the literary program a supper will be served, followed with the usual order of toasts and good cheer. The place of holding the supper has not yet been determined upon, but a full announcement in circular will be issued the early part of next week.

Last Monday J. L. O'Mealey visited Tecumseh, on business, using a livery rig for a conveyance. When he ordered his horse to go, a different boy hitched up his horse and brought round J. R. Keeney's $300 colt by mistake. Lon thought it was a mighty good trade and started for home. Before reaching Adrian however, he was stricken with remorse, drove directly to the Wabash depot, hitched the horse to a post and took the first train to Morenci. The sheriff has offered a reward of a 5 cent cigar and a bottle of pop for Lon's arrest.

—Our popular milliner, Mrs. N. R. Brown, announces that she has an unusual large stock of Summer Hats and bonnets, and invites the ladies to call and look over the array of fashionable shapes. Also an immense assortment of ribbons in all shade, velvets, gauze trimming, flowers, and in fact everything that the fashionably inclined lady desires.

CHILDRENS' SUNDAY.

Childrens' Sunday was observed last Sabbath by three of the village churches.

At the M. E. church in the morning Prof. A. F. Hoyt, of the Central Tennessee College, Nashville, Tenn., gave a very interesting address upon the present condition of the South, and the religious and educational progress in that section of the Union. Three boys received the rite of baptism from the pastor. In the evening a concert was given by the Sunday School under the direction of the superintendent, Dr. K. B. House. The exercises were of the usual character, consisting of prayer, music, recitations, etc., by the members of the school. Many beautiful bouquets and potted plants adorned the platform and the space about the pulpit. The large audience room was crowded and the exercises were deeply impressive.

At the Presbyterian church the platform was tastefully decorated with potted plants, and the pulpit was shoved into the back ground and made a stand for vases of cut flowers. The Superintendent of the Sabbath School, Mr. Chas. A. Slayton, had charge of the exercises of the morning being aided by the officers and teachers of the school in carrying out the pleasant program. Members of the school were present in the front seats, by classes, from the little ones of the Primary class to the adult Bible classes, to the number of 260. The rest of the seats were fully occupied by members of the congregation not connected with the school. The exercises consisted of singing by choir and school, scripture responses, prayer and an appropriate address by the pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt. There was a sweet little recitation by Mattie McClure about the "Dear little heads in the pew," and another by Willie Elliott, about the boy who gave himself in the collection because he had no money to give. Offerings were made by classes for the Missionary fund of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, to the amount of nearly thirty dollars. There was a song also by Mrs. Gage's class and the primary class in charge of Mrs. S. W. Anderson. The little ones looked charmingly as they stood up on their seats and their Hosannas went to the hearts of those who listened to them. The large congregation separated feeling pleased and profited by the service. At night the pastor gave a discourse to Young people, from the text, "Behold I have set before you an open door."

At the Universalist church the pastor preached a sermon in the morning adapted to the children and addressed especially to them. A special floral service taken from the "Helper" was given in the evening, consisting of music and recitations by the little ones and older members of the Sabbath School. The floral decorations surpassed anything heretofore attempted. The pulpit, platform and choir front were embowered in flowers, and a magnificent geranium, loaned by Mrs. Starr, adorned one corner of the church. The entire program was good, but the song by L. F. Wheeler and the recitation by nine young ladies were especially meritorious.

Services appropriate to the day will be held next Sabbath morning at the Baptist church.

Among all the special days observed in the churches none is more beautiful or ennobling than that of Children's Sunday. It imparts to the little ones a love of the true, the good, and the beautiful. It makes them feel that they are a part of the church, and brings home to their feeble minds the great truth uttered by our Saviour that even the little children can enter into the kingdom. The day is rapidly approaching when this day will be observed as regularly by all churches as Christmas or Easter.

John F. Hicks has put up lightning rods for thirty years. He has lately struck a bonanza by obtaining an immense stock of rods at bankrupt prices and in consequence, is knocking the bottom out of former prices. He now gives a positive guarantee to keep all rods in repair for ten years. He has the best of recommends from such men as B. J. Bidwell, Lucius Lilley, Z. Cook, Judge Stacy and hundreds of others in this county for whom he has put up rods in years past. He put rods on the school buildings in this village over twenty years ago. The last building was struck and the points melted and the bolt passed into the ground without damaging the building. The points were replaced without charge.

Dr. BENNETT will be at the Adley House, June 23d, where those who wish to consult him on chronic troubles, may come FREE and investigate his new way of curing chronic troubles; his work does show the RESULTS, and that's what you all want "A Cure." This he gives when nothing else gives relief. A new method for a radical cure of Hernia, which never fails. Go and see him and learn how this is done and see his way of doing it. Piles of all kinds, no matter how bad, nor how long standing, cured without knife, ligature or inconvenience from your labor.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Library Association have added 57 new volumes to the library, obtained from the proceeds of their entertainments during the past winter. For the benefit of those interested we

MINING INTERESTS.

The Star Mountain Mining Company is engaged in placing the finer grade of concentrating machinery in their mill and will in the near future begin the treatment and shipping of ore. It is the object of the company to push development continuously in the future, and a large force of practical miners will be engaged on the various tunnels and open cuts. The mill will be run day and night, reducing seven tons of crude ore into one of clean marketable ore. That there is economy in this reduction is plain to be seen. Mr. John S. Strong, one of Tecumseh's largest and oldest merchants, is visiting in Colorado, and before he returns home he will pay this company's property a visit. It is the intention of Mr. Strong to make a thorough examination of the mines, mill and road belonging to this company, and his report upon his return will be read with interest by all who are stockholders in this Gold and Silver property.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders, syringes, astringents or any similar application, because they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surface and should be abandoned as worse than useless. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh has inflicted, testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

A CUBAN DUEL.

[illegible]

[illegible] Cuban, [illegible] man, [illegible] and [illegible] of silken [illegible] Paris [illegible] and [illegible] to his side, [illegible] that with a tiny [illegible] the top of the crowd, [illegible] on the top of his head [illegible] and the [illegible] of his attire was [illegible] scarlet, each of which [illegible] among set in white [illegible]. He wore several showy rings. There was something that relieved his [illegible] all suggestions of effeminacy, and that was the steady gaze of his eyes. His face was clean cut and [illegible] the mouth firm and the expression [illegible] whether he chose to smile. He was the gayest [illegible] of a rich widow, had [illegible] the best [illegible] in Havana, and was more of a favorite among such [illegible] women. This is the best [illegible] any man can have. I had met him in New York, and so posed as his [illegible] in [illegible] the quarterly [illegible] that again, but we had all [illegible] Havana a month, and we had been together constantly, so that he was quite as well acquainted with the English nobleman and the Chicago gambler as with us.

When he finally got to our table he pulled out his little jeweled watch and said:

"It is [illegible] 12 o'clock, and so we go to the ball."

When we got to the Tacon theatre, where the masked ball was going on, the place was crowded by men and women in [illegible] costumes and sing [illegible] waltz. We went in the [illegible] over the [illegible] in the second tier. In an instant every head in the room was turned towards Tomaso.

There was nothing new about the ball. It was the same old series of wriggles and contortions which invariably characterize the Cuban dance, and which make it impossible to form the opinion of the whole [illegible]. We had all been up for the night before, and I am afraid I was rather sleepy. At all events, I dozed [illegible] at the back of the box, while the music [illegible] away monotonously. The others talked and watched the crowd. It must have been nearly 2 o'clock, when a young yachtsman pulled open the door of the box, stuck a half scared face in and beckoned significantly to Tomaso. The latter raised his eyebrows [illegible] and [illegible] his thanks for the warning. It was evident that the duelist had arrived. The gambler pulled my sleeve and [illegible] to wake me up. [illegible] by the movement in the crowd that we were in for the row at last. A crowd of chevaliers and [illegible] surged in on the floor, and with their backs to the [illegible] with his face where them every and his big eyes rolling [illegible] in the [illegible] Englishman [illegible] and he was very much perturbed. As the little group [illegible] their way on the floor he arose and leaned over the young Cuban with a [illegible] fatherly air that I never seen him exhibit before.

"I wish you would come home," [illegible] he said, with a half sighs and half [illegible] "I feel like [illegible] I ought to have spanked you [illegible] two hours ago. The trouble is that the duel is such a recognized institution in these countries that an outsider can never interfere, but it is a pity that you have to get into any sort of a scrimmage with that white faced cat down there on the floor."

"It must be, you know," said the youngster resignedly. "It is the custom of the country, and if I showed the least tendency to shirk I would be cut by every friend I [illegible] native on the island."

The Englishman sank back again into his seat. Then I passed a note through the curtains. We [illegible] slowly with the gambler beside Tomaso and the Englishman and I walking together beside them. I was rather surprised to see that none of the Cubans came to Tomaso's side, but I could see the reason in one of them as we walked along. He said that as Tomaso had deliberately chosen foreigners, team-[illegible] in the trouble, they thought it would only be courteous to respect his wishes, but that they all held themselves at his services at any time. This I was told to communicate to him by the speaker, whose good looking appearance prevented him from [illegible] Tomaso himself. We moved down the [illegible] of chairs and into the open [illegible] the Tacon Theatre. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Wheat is beginning to turn.

F. E. Pockington began the mason work on the library hall Monday.

Sheep shearing is the present occupation among the farmers.

Monday afternoon quite a heavy wind with rain and hail passed thro' this section, doing some damage to fruit, etc.

Chas. Gripton visited Toledo on business Saturday.

Mattie Swift of Spring Lake, N. Y., an Adrian College friend of Belle Barlow, made her a visit of several days last week.

Marcie Kelley and Edith Smith spent Saturday evening and Sunday with friends at Pennington's corners.

Geo. Arner, agent at Augusta, spent the forepart of the week at the home of his parents, Jocob Arner, in company with Libbie Emmonds.

Eugene Pilbeam, who has been in Ohio working on a railroad grade returned last week.

W. P. Cadmus spent the Sabbath with Elsworth Russell and family of Tecumseh.

Sammie Arner is at Augusta, acting as agent for George while on a visit at home.

Pat Curry hurt his leg while laying stone one day last week, and is laid up for a few days from the effects of the bruise.

Walter Arner run a stub in his foot last week while cultivating corn, which causes him to lean on a cane for support.

It is expected that the Macon Band will be in the village this week Saturday evening, and give us an open air concert on the street. All lovers of music should be present and enjoy the pleasure. Ice cream and lemonade as usual.

Several went from here to Clinton, Saturday, to see the game of Ball between the Ridgeway and Clinton teams.

Edith Woodward of Tecumseh was the guest of Loana Davidson over Sunday.

Agent A. J. Sutton scooped up hail stones enough Monday evening to freeze Ice Cream with. How is that for a pointer.

The General Passenger agent of the C. J. & M. R'y of the Mich. Div. has reduced the fair from all points to Devils and Gull Lakes, to parties of four or more, one and one-third fare for the round trip tickets, good for thirty days from date, on all passenger trains during the season.

You can get a round trip ride from any station to any station on the Mich. Division of the C. J. & M. R. R. July 2d. and 4th, for one fare, good returning the 4th and 5th.

Belle Barlow is in Adrian this week visiting College friends, also attending commencement exercises.

The report of the game between our ball team and the Clinton team, was received here Saturday evening over the wire with the League reports, and showed up nearly as good.

The village school closed last Friday and at night the students, with the assistance of some of the young people in the district, presented a very pleasing program to a crowded house at Cottage hall. The program consisted of declamations, recitations, dialogues, papers, and music. Everything passed off very nicely. Much praise is due to Prof. and Mrs. Huston for the entertainment and for the interest they have taken in the school during the year past, and we wish for them a prosperous year to come.

Our base ball team went to Clinton Saturday and played the Clinton team a game. The game was called at 3:30 by Umpire G. D. Arner, "with our boys at the bat, an I it was a close game all through. Several errors were made on both sides which caused some excitement and applause by the lookers on." At the close of the 8th innings, score was Ridgeway 12; Clinton 13, but at the close of the 9th inning the score read Clinton 13, Ridgeway 16. The return game is expected to be played here some time this fall.

Great Clearing sale for 30 days only, beginning Saturday, June 25th, 1887. 20 per cent discount for cash on Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, and Gents' Furnishing goods. Milton Hawley, and John Cheesebrow of Napoleon were here Saturday.

The Base ball club have reorganized and are ready for this summers work. Miss Luella Holt of Jackson has been visiting Miss Jessie Short, of this place.

The strawberry and ice-cream festival at the Church Friday evening was a success financially and socially.

Harry Wood, has been engaged to teach the Onsted school next year. He comes well recommended and we wish him the best of success.

Mrs. B. A. Verrier is very busy nowa-days trimming hats and bonnets. Judging from the amount of custom she has, she must have a faculty of pleasing her customers.

The people of Onsted have developed quite a considerable taste for sur-surprises. For a week or two past we have noticed a good deal of whispering, especially among the ladies. The time set was Tuesday afternoon and the place was the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Secor. Mrs. Secor was invited to spend the afternoon at a neighbors. She had not been there long before she was informed that a number of ladies were at her house and returned home. The number of persons present was about seventy. About five o'clock supper was served. Presents to the value of nearly $50.00 were left and the happy company went to their homes.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

First Annual Meeting Thereof of the Adrian District M. E. Church, Held at Tecumseh, last week.

The first meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of Adrian District of the M. E. church began Thursday, June 9 at 2 P. M. with the President Mrs. Wm. Corbin in the chair. The pulpit was nicely decorated with flowers. The opening services were conducted by the President, who read the 19th Psalm. The 574 hymn, "A charge to keep I have" was sung. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Johnson of Medina, after which one verse of "My God to Thee" was sung. The President then suggested that each one give some promise of Scripture to which several responded. A Secretary pro tem. was chosen. On motion it was decided that the different committees be appointed by the chair.

The following committees were appointed:

Home Missions—Mrs. Royer and Mrs. L. Barnes.

Resolutions—Mrs. Douglas and Mrs. Robinson.

Enrollment—Mrs. House and N. R. Merritt.

Finance—Mrs. Heck and Mrs. Rogers.

Mite Box—Mrs. Brown.

The Secretary then called the name of the auxiliaries of the District. Mrs. Rogers invited the ladies to move to the front, which they kindly did. Mrs. N. R. Merritt delivered the address of Welcome in behalf of the Tecumseh society and extended us most hearty greetings and a very cordial welcome. Responses to the address of welcome were made by several ladies. Mrs. Douglas of Ann Arbor, responded in most beautiful and appropriate words. After which Mrs. Rogers felt that it was good for us to be together and hoped that our coming may be a blessing to you as we expect it will be to ourselves.

Mrs. Corbin delivered an address on the object of coming together. The subject of Organization of District Woman's Home Missionary Association was then discussed. Mrs. Corbin spoke a few words, after which Mrs. Rogers moved that the constitution be adopted as was read.

On motion a nominating committee of two was appointed by the chair consisting of Mrs. Douglass of Ann Arbor, and Mrs. Merritt of Tecumseh.

Mrs. Rogers read letters from Mrs. Pope of Cleveland and Mrs. Barney of Ypsilanti and Mrs. Coller of Flint, expressing their regrets that they were unable to be present.

A verse of "Blest be the Tie that Binds" was sung.

The nominating committee moved that the President of auxiliaries be the Vice Presidents, except in the case of Mrs. Wm. Corbin as she is already President of the district. Mrs. Sizer was appointed Vice President of the Adrian Auxiliary: Recording Secretary—Mrs. R. B. House, of Tecumseh: Cor. Sec'y.—Mrs. G. A. Douglass, Ann Arbor: Treasurer—Hattie E Johnson, Adrian. Motion was made that the Vice Presidents be elected together and the other officers separately.

Mrs. Rogers stated the need of the district contingent fund, and stated that after our assessments are met, all moneys except the membership dues, can be used in any missionary line. A discussion followed and different plans for devising means were stated. It was also moved that each auxiliary contribute as liberally as possible to the contingent fund. Mrs. Royer pledged $5 for Ann Arbor. Mrs. Douglass then read the report of Dist. Secretary. Twelve organized societies and several yet to organize: 315 members: eight life members: three honorary managers and 51 Home Missionary papers are taken. On motion the Secretary's report was accepted.

It was moved and adopted that the annual meeting subject be left over until to-morrow.

The meeting then adjourned.

HATTIE E. JOHNSON,
Sec. Pro Tem.

The evening session was called to order at 7:30 by the President. The opening services began with singing by the choir. Hymn 953. The President then read the twenty-third Psalm. Prayer was offered by the Rev. T. G. Potter of Tecumseh, after which a voluntary was sung by the choir.

Rev. N. W. Case, D.D., Adrian, was introduced and gave a very able and eloquent address on the subject of Missionary work. Hymn 565 was then sung.

Rev. H. F. Hoyt, President of the Central Tennessee College was introduced and delivered an interesting address on the progress of the work among the colored people.

At the close of the addresses, Mrs. Royer of Ann Arbor, read a paper entitled, "Claims of our Paper Woman's Home Missions."

Collection was then taken and $2.00 was raised. One honorary member, W. H. Osborn, was received and two subscribers were obtained for the Woman's Home Missions. The meeting was then closed with the Benediction by Rev. T. G. Potter.

THURSDAY SESSION.

The morning was opened with devotional exercises, conducted by Mrs. L. Barnes, and consisted of Scripture reading, prayers and singing; after which the President took charge of the meeting. The minutes of the previous sessions were read and approved.

Reports from auxiliaries were called for and were made from five.

A motion was made and carried to take up unfinished business.

A motion made and carried that the annual District Association Convention be held the last week in May. A motion made and carried that two all day meetings be held in the Dist. each year aside from the annual meeting. It was decided to hold the next annual meeting at Ann Arbor.

A motion was made and carried that one all day meeting be held at Adrian in Nov. and the other at Clinton in February. The date of these meetings to be left to the auxiliaries at which they are to be held. A motion made and carried to suspend the remainder of the work, to listen to remarks by Rev. T. G. Potter, which were very interesting as well as beneficial.

A motion made and carried to adjourn the meeting until 1 P. M.

The afternoon session was opened with singing "Rock of Ages." Prayer was offered by Mrs. T. G. Potter. Sec. Mrs. E. E. Royer of Ann Arbor gave an interesting talk on W. H. M. Loan Library.

The paper on "The Perils which Threaten Our Homes" by Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers of Ann Arbor, was one of the most able and finely written articles that was presented during the convention.

Mrs. Wm. Corbin of Adrian, talked on the Juvenile work.

Mrs. Hattie E. Johnson of Adrian, resigns her office of treasurer. A motion made and carried that the resignation be accepted. On motion Mrs. Douglas was elected treasurer to fill vacancy.

The following resolutions were presented by Mrs. Douglass, but no motion was taken upon them:

Resolved, That we tender our sincere thanks to the ladies of the Tecumseh Auxiliary who have in so many ways manifested their hospitality and so delightfully entertained the delegates and visitors to the District W. H. M. meeting.

Resolved, That we offer our sincere sympathy to the President of this Auxiliary, Mrs. Davidson, who is unable to be present with us on account of the severe illness of her sister.

Resolved, That we extend our earnest thanks to Dr. W. W. Case of Adrian, for his eloquent address on "home missions" before this association, and to Rev. Rev. T. G. Potter for his instructive and able address on "missionary work" and also to Rev. Mr. Hoyt, President of Nashville College for his interesting talk on "model homes."

Resolved, That our thanks are due to the Trustees for the use of the beautiful church edifice, and to the Sexton for his attention to the comfort of the ladies.

Resolved, That we say at our parting, "The peace of God be with you."

The enrollment committee reported three from Ann Arbor, Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, Mrs. E. E. Royer and Mrs. G. A. Douglass; from Adrian, Mrs. Wm. Corbin, Hattie E. Johnson and Mrs. Sizer, from Saline, Mrs. Benton and Mrs. Robinson; from Clinton, Mrs. E. Price; Mrs. Frank McClure, from Medina, Rev. Mr. Johnson.

Moved and carried that the chair has the power to appoint the standing committees.

On motion the Convention adjourned until its next annual meeting.

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body and afford an excellent index [illegible] When the eyes become weak and the lids inflamed also sore, it is a sign that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine for a short time I was completely

Cured

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever.—Mrs. William Gager, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until with a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, depriving me of sight, and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

By Taking

three bottles of this medicine I have been entirely cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no sign of inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye.—Kendal T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the first two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the second bottle her sight was restored. Her cure is complete.—W. E. Sutherland, Postmaster, Shelby City, Ky.

JESS.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "King Solomon's Mines" "She" Etc.

"Come out of those traces, you mule," said he, and stop slipping about like a snake in a stone wall!" shouted John. "What is it you want—wages?"

Thus adjured, Jantje advanced and sat down on the path as usual, in the full glare of the sun.

"No, baas," he said, "it is not wages. They [illegible]

"What, is it then?"

"No, baas, it is this. The Boers have declared war on the English government, and they have sieged up the sorchaatjes at Bronkers Spruit, near Middelburg. Joubert shot them all there the day before yesterday."

"What do you talk about, John? Nothing can fall in, his astonishment. "Stop, though, that must be right. You passed Middelburg the day before yesterday, that would be Dec. 20. When did you hear this?"

"At daybreak, baas. A Basutu told me."

"Then there is an end of it. The news could not have got more in forty eight hours. What do you mean by coming to me with such a tale?"

The Hottentot smiled. "It is quite true, baas. Bad news flies like a bird," and he picked himself up and slipped off to his work.

Notwithstanding the apparent impossibility of the thing, John was considerably disturbed, knowing the extraordinary speed with which news does travel among Kaffirs, more swiftly, indeed, than the swiftest mounted messenger can bear it. Leaving Bessie, who was also somewhat alarmed, he went in search of Silas Croft, and, finding him in the garden, told him what Jantje had said. The old man did not know what to make of the tale, but, remembering Frank Muller's threats, he shook his head.

"If there is any truth in it that villain Muller has a hand in it," he said. "I'll go to the house and see Jantje. Give me your arm, John."

He obeyed, and, on getting to the top of the steep path, perceived the stout figure of old Hans Coetzee, who had been his host at the shooting party, ambling along on his fat little pony.

"Ah," said old Silas, "here is the man who will tell us if there is anything in it all."

"Good day, Om Coetzee, good day" he shouted out in his stentorian tone. "What news do you bring with you?"

The jolly looking Boer reiled awkwardly off his pony before answering, and, throwing the reins over its head, came to meet them.

"Allemachter, Om Silas, it is bad news. You have heard of the bymakaar meeting at Paarde Kraal. Frank Muller wanted me to go, but I would not, and now they have declared war on the British government, and sent a proclamation to Lanyon. There will be fighting, Om Silas; the land will run with blood, and the poor roobaatjes will be shot down like buck."

"The poor Boers, you mean," growled John, who did not like to hear her Majesty's army talked of in terms of regretful pity.

Om Coetzee's face, his head with the air of one who knew all about it, and then turned an attentive ear to Silas Croft's version of Jantje's story.

"Allemachter," groaned Coetzee, "what did I tell you? The poor roobaatjes shot down like buck, and the land running with blood. And now that Frank Muller will draw me into it, and I shall have to go and shoot the poor roobaatjes, and I can't miss, try as hard as I will, I am a boss. And when we have shot them all I suppose Burgers will come back, and he is kraankah mad. Yes, Yes; Lanyon is bad, but Burgers is worse, and the comfortable old gentleman groaned aloud at the troubles in which he foresaw he would be involved, and finally took his departure, by a devious path over the mountain, saying that, as things had turned out, he would not like it to be known that he had been calling on an Englishman.

"John," said Silas Croft, suddenly, "you must go up to Pretoria and fetch Jess. Mark my words, the Boers will besiege Pretoria, and if we don't get our down at once she will be shut up there."

"Oh, no," cried Bessie, in sudden alarm, "I cannot let John go."

"I am sorry to hear you talk like that, Bessie, when your sister is in danger," answered her uncle, rather sternly; "but there, I dare say that it is natural. I will go myself. Where is Jantje? I shall want the Cape cart and the four gray horses."

"No, uncle dear, John shall go. I was not thinking what I was saying. It seemed a little hard at first."

"Of course I must go," said John. "Don't fret, dear; I shall be back in five days. These four horses can go sixty miles a day for that time, and more. They are fat as butter, and there is lots of grass along the road. I can't get forage for them." Besides, the cart will be nearly empty, and I can carry a load of mealies and fifty bundles of forage with me. I will take that Zulu boy, Mouti mahlonga, with me. He does not know much about horses, but he is a plucky fellow, and would stick by one at a pinch. One can't rely on Jantje, he is always wandering off somewhere, and would be sure to get drunk just his one wanted him."

"Yes, yes, John, that's right, that's right," said the old man. "I will go and see about having the horses got up and the wheels greased. Where is the castor oil, Bessie? There is nothing like castor oil for Cape patent axles. You ought to be off in an hour. You had better sleep at Lake's to-night, you might get further, but Lake's is a good place to stop, and they will look after you well there, and you can be off before sunrise to-morrow morning and be in Pretoria the next afternoon," and he hobbled off to make the necessary preparations.

"O Jackie," said Bessie, beginning to cry, "I don't like your going at all among those wild Boers. You are an Englishman, and if they find you out they will shoot you. You don't know what brutes some of them are when they think it safe to be so. Oh, John, John, I can't bear your going."

"Cheer up, my dear," said John, "and for Heaven's sake stop crying, for I can't bear it. I must go. Your uncle would never forgive me if I didn't, and, what is more, I should never forgive myself. There is nobody else to go, and we can't leave Jess to be shut up there in Pretoria for months perhaps. As for the risk, of course there is a bit of risk, but I must take it. I am not afraid of risks—at least I hope not to be, but you have made a bit of a coward of me, Bessie dear. There, give me a kiss, old girl, and come and helping to pack my things. Bless God I shall get back all right, and Jess with me, in a week from now."

Whereon Bessie, being a sensible and eminently practical young woman, dried her tears, and with a cheerful face, albeit her heart was heavy enough, set to work with a will to make every preparation she could think of. The few clothes John was going to take with him were packed in a Gladstone bag, and the box that was arranged underneath the movable seat in the Cape cart was filled with the tinned provisions that are so much used in South Africa, and all the other little arrangements, small in themselves, but of such infinite importance to the traveler in a wild country, were duly attended to.

[illegible] was when the cart was at the door, with Jantje hanging as usual on to the heads of the two front horses, and the Stalwart Zulu, or rather Swazi boy, Mouti, whose sole baggage appeared to consist of a bundle of assegais and sticks wrapped up in a [illegible]

[illegible] John, dear John," said Bessie, kissing him again and again, and striving to keep back the tears that, do what she could, would gather in her blue eyes. "Good by, my boy."

"Good bye, [illegible]

[illegible] Nor was this all. Overhead was blazing and burning one of those remarkable sunsets which one sometimes sees in summer in Africa. The sky was full of towering clouds, and the sullen orb of the setting sun had stained them perfectly blood red [illegible] sky, and blood red their shadows lay upon the grass. Even the air seemed red. It looked as though the earth and heaven had been steeped in blood, and fresh as John was from the sight of the dead driver, his ears yet tingling with the tale of Bronker's Spruit, it is not to be wondered at that the sight of the setting sun passed [illegible] killed, as an old buck kaan hidden away somewhere in the grass. He was not hard given to that sort of thing, but he did begin to wonder whether this was the last journey of all the many he had made during the past twenty years, and if a Boer bullet was about to drive the mystery of life and death for him.

By the time that the horses had been fed, forage and Mouti had forced the bits into their reluctant mouths, the angry splendor of the sunset had faded, and the quiet night was falling over the veldt, like soft pall on one's spirits. There was, fortunately for the travelers, a bright half moon, and by its light John managed to direct the cart over many a weary mile. On he went for hour after hour, keeping his tired horses to the collar as best he could, till at last, about 11 o'clock, he saw the lights of Heidelberg before him, and knew that the question of whether or not his journey was at an end would speedily be decided for him. However, there was nothing for it but to go on and take his chance of slipping through. Presently he crossed a little stream, and made out the shape of a cart just ahead, around which men and a couple of lanterns were moving. No doubt, he thought to himself, it was the bishop, who had been stopped by the Boers. He was quite close to the cart when it moved on, and in another second he was greeted by the rough challenge of a sentry, and caught sight of the cold gleam of a rifle barrel.

"Who dar? Who's there?"

"Friend!" he answered, cheerfully, though feeling far from cheerful.

There was a pause, during which the sentry called to another man, who came up yawning, and saying something in Dutch. Straining his ears he caught the words, "Bishop's man," and this gave him an idea.

"Who are you, Englishman?" asked the second man, gruffly, holding up a lantern to look at John, and speaking in English.

"I am the bishop's chaplain, sir," he answered, mildly, trying desperately to look like an unoffending clergyman, "and I want to get on to Pretoria with him."

The man with the lantern inspected him closely. Fortunately he had, on a dark coat and a clerical looking black felt hat; the same that Frank Muller had put a bullet through.

"He's a preacher fast enough," said the one man to the other. "Look, he is dressed like an old crow. What did 'Om' Kruger's pass say, Jan? Was it two carts or one that we were to let through? I think that it was one."

The other man scratched his head.

"I think it was two," he said. He did not like to confess to his comrade that he could not read. "No, I am sure that it was two."

"Perhaps we had better send up to Oom Kruger and ask," suggested the first man.

"Oom Kruger will be in bed, and he puts up his quids like a porcupine if one wakes him," was the answer.

"Then let us keep the third Englishman till to-morrow."

"Pray let me pass, gentlemen," said John, still in his naughty voice. "I am wanted to preach the word of God, and to watch by the wounded and dying."

"I AM WANTED TO PREACH THE WORD."

"You are not wanted here, more's the pity, or I would let you go. But, [illegible] will do, [illegible] Bronker's Spruit. Look, why [illegible] you want you. You are a [illegible] like a cur with [illegible] the [illegible] to get away [illegible]

"Pray!" said [illegible] "[illegible] I am [illegible] Are [illegible] the road? The will not [illegible] Boers [illegible] said with a chuckle [illegible] the old man [illegible] Boers plundered [illegible] passes I [illegible] in the shape of a bag of mealies.

"Well, agreed to let the old man go," said the first man.

"If we don't let him go we shall have to take him up to headquarters, and I want to get to sleep." And he yawned.

"We [illegible] Boers [illegible] John made out the Transvaal flag fluttering in the night breeze, and emblazoned with the appropriate emblem of an ox wagon and an armed Boer, marking, no doubt, the headquarters of the triumvirate. Once the cart ahead of him was stopped by a sentry and some conversation ensued. Then it went on again, and so did John, unmolested. It was weary work, that journey through Heidelberg [illegible] moment expected to be stopped and dragged off ignominiously to jail. The horses, too, were dead beat and made frantic attempts to turn and stop at every house. But somehow, they got through the little place and then were stopped once more. Again the

Before the Graduating Class, of the High School. Delivered Sunday Evening, June 19th.

BY REV. E. ADKINS.

TEXT.—"We are no longer under a schoolmaster." Gal. 3:25.

As you anticipate the day of your graduation, my young friends, no such thought as this is often in your heart, if not these very words upon your lips. It is a very natural thing, surely, for the student, reaching the end of a prescribed course of study, having successfully passed the tests and struggles, the restraints and discipline of school life, to say, "we are no longer under a schoolmaster."

He may say this with an air of triumph and perhaps a set se of manly pride. He is conscious of acquisition, of culture, of mastery, of powers disciplined and equipped for action and achievement. The restraints of school have passed. Henceforth he is free to be his own man, to plan and act and execute for himself. He is "no longer under a schoolmaster." And this feeling of independence and triumph may be perfectly right. It will be so, provided he takes a correct view of the just relation of the days of schooling to his mission in life; provided he has made a wise use of his advantages under the schoolmaster, and enters life with a true estimate of its responsibilities.

But it is easy to entertain an erroneous or inadequate view of these relations. And this sentiment may be perilous very unwisely. If it expresses a hasty impatience of wholesome restraint, a feverish haste to be free from the eagerness to mark out new paths, it may prove a rapacious one, as fatal to the pleasures and profits of the present as that of the prodigal, [illegible]

[illegible] ways entirely distinct, their lines often [illegible] ple. There is a state of minority when outward restraints have their important and necessary uses, and a state of majority when freedom is ascendant. There is "the state of pupilage, and the state of faith." A time for the rule of the schoolmaster, and a time for larger, maturer, liberty.

And these two stages of life must be observed in their natural order and relation if the best results are secured. This principle underlies all sound education, is essential to all true human progress. To neglect the period of training and come prematurely with undisciplined mind and heart into the mature business of the world is often to meet with discouragement and failure in the earlier efforts of life. Or to continue the primitive discipline after that faith and manhood are come, is to check the process of manly growth. There are therefore times and seasons for a class of restraint in a process of education. And only when proper conditions are observed may restraint be safely laid aside. To be "no longer under a schoolmaster" then, will be cause for gratulation or for grief, according as these relations and principles are remembered and acted upon as you go forward into the future. That you may then be free from the schoolmaster in the best sense, observe certain things to be carefully remembered.

1. OBSERVE THE LAW OF PROGRESS.

You will surely not imagine because you are no longer under a schoolmaster, that you have nothing more to learn. This perhaps, may seem a needless caution. It may have been in irony that the young man in flush of enthusiasm, when he had successfully passed his examinations for graduation from College, telegraphed his mother, "Educated." But if so, his laconic dispatch may be taken as a serio-comic expression of a sort of infatuation into which many minds are apt to fall when they have reached what they fail to recognize as only a preliminary stage in their education, forgetting that other stages lie beyond, to reach and pass which will require the most [illegible] process extending onward through [illegible] the best only of the world. But I pass to the open door, the boundless knowledge. It is to be approached not by the gateway of an school [illegible] henceforth has to [illegible] this growing [illegible] opportunity. [illegible] will chiefly [illegible] An eloquence. Sp[illegible] has made the [illegible] received purest large[illegible] What she is to [illegible]

[illegible] the whole circle of human knowledge, or that you have half explored its circumference. Build on what you know, and think modestly of what you do not know. There are plenty of questions which may wisely be [illegible] solved in coming years and under clearer light, or perhaps for the world to solve for itself after you are gone.

3. OBSERVE THE LAW OF RESTRAINT.

Accept this as a principle of universal and constant application in human progress. Do not suppose that because you are "no longer under a schoolmaster," you are therefore to be no longer under restraint. The principle still applies and will be operative and indispensable to the end. The only difference is in the method of its application. The real restraints are still in force, only the student instead of in the school should have learned how to apply restraints to himself. And this in its perfection is the highest and truest liberty, it is the mark of maturity. But we must never cease to observe the sovereignty of order, and to remember that the highest and truest education of humanity depends upon it. Says an eminent recent writer, "we defy anyone to give an instance of a community where the checks and balances of justice have been ignored that has not been disgraced by an inferior manhood. To rule well, men must consent to be ruled, and where they are willing to be ruled, there they will become more intelligent and capable, and will render their surroundings worthier themselves." And the greatest social strides have been made where the supremacy of law has been cheerfully acknowledged.

We hear much in these days of an exaggerated notion of liberty. Men think liberty is license to do as they please without regard to the wishes or rights of others. They recognize no obligation to any higher power than their own free will. Liberty becomes lawlessness. Hence men grow impatient of all restraint and affect to despise and overthrow government. The manly royal virtues [illegible] have no place in their souls. There are people [illegible] our stores, but under the [illegible] evil dispositions and [illegible] variables, justly recoiling from the [illegible] actions and government [illegible] of which they have been the victims, but unfit for freedom, unfitted for the social institutions [illegible] America [illegible] With their [illegible] spirit they form a dangerous element in our population. They are at the worst [illegible] times. ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the ... ley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; every body said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained ten flesh, thirty-six pounds.

"Is the man dead?" asked a reporter of a policeman after an accident. "Not yet," replied the officer. "The doctor haven't come."

What are Suppositories?

A. G. Rose, from New London, Conn., writes: Send me two boxes of your Kemp's Pile Suppositories by mail. Our druggist's out. They are for a friend. I tried everything without help, but the Suppositories cured me.

The treatment is new and within reach of all, and would advise the affected to give them a trial. For sale in Tecumseh by Baker & Hall, at 50c per box.

It is very singular how death seems to give people a truer idea of a man's character, whether for good or evil, than they ever possessed while he lived among them.

$500 Reward

is offered, in good faith, by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. It is mild, soothing and healing in its effects, and cures "cold in the head," catarrhal deafness, throat ailments, and many other complications of this distressing disease. 50 cents, by druggists.

English Spavin Liniment removes all Hard, Soft, or Calloused Lumps and Blemishes from horses, Blood Spavin, Curbs, Splints, Sweeney Ringbone, Stiffles Sprains, Swellings, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. Warranted. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists, Tecumseh.

Children

Often need some safe cathartic and tonic to avert approaching sickness, or to relieve colic, headache, sick stomach, indigestion, dysentery and the complaints incident to childhood. Let the children take Simmons Liver Regulator and keep well. It is purely vegetable, not unpleasant to the taste and safe to take alone or in connection with other medicine.

"More Benefit."

I have been afflicted with consumption for about four years. I received more benefit from one bottle your Gooch's Mexican Syrup than anything I have ever tried.

How to Gain Flesh and Strength.

Use after each meal Scott's Emulsion; it is as palatable as milk and easily digested. Delicate people improve rapidly with its use. For Consumption, Throat affections and Bronchitis it is unequalled. Dr. Thos. Prim, Ala., says: "I used Scott's Emulsion on a child eight months old; he gained four pounds in a month."

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to the friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No persons can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 800,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and dealers, in the United States and Canada.

No harmful effects results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and for particulars. Address in confidence GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

WILD BILL, OF KANSAS

Killing Two Soldiers in a Twinkling, but Hesitating at a Monkey.

"Wild Bill was a good shot, was he not?"

"wonderful. In my entertainment I give an illustration of a 'double shot' he made out at Hays City, Kan., in the early days, when he shot two soldiers, one in front of him and one directly behind him, each endeavoring to shoot him before he could draw his gun. He killed one and mortally wounded the other, and the two reports of the revolver seemed almost as one. The marvelous feat was the talk of the country for a long time. In fact, when I came by there a few days ago one of the old residents who witnessed the killing mentioned it to me and said he could scarcely believe it even after seeing it. Bill never missed his mark. I have seen him take a pistol in each hand and fire with right and left pistol at a can thrown in the air, hitting it with both bullets. By the way, I heard a very funny story told on Bill some time ago. If you remember, he married Mrs. Agnes Lake, widow of Lake, the circus man. Bill fairly worshiped his wife, but despite his great love for her she never could induce him to quit drinking. He would come home full of bad whisky, and one day Mrs. Hickok said to him:

"'Bill, if you don't quit this drinking pretty soon you will actually begin to see monkeys.'

"'Monkeys!' said he. 'What do you mean, little one?'

"'Why, you know, when people back east drink too much of the kind of whisky they get back there they see snakes, but this awful stuff out here makes them see monkeys.'

"Bill laughed at her and did not give the matter a second thought, little dreaming that she had 'put up a job' to break him of his intemperate habits. There was a tame monkey in the town—Cheyenne, I believe it was—and Mrs. Hickok had induced its owner to loan it to her for a night. Bill came home that night comfortable drunk, and after he had gone to sleep his wife secured the monkey and chained it to the foot of the bed. Then turning down the light a little she retired and awaited results. Bill woke up in the night burning with thirst and raised up into a sitting posture, intending to get out of bed and get a drink of water. There, perched up on the footboard, was the monkey, staring him in the face with hideous grimaces. He rubbed his bleared eyes, looked again, and a horrible suspicion came into his befuddled brain. Had his wife told him the truth? Did he really have 'em? Finally, he sprang out on the floor, seized his six shooter, which lay on a table near, leveled it at the grinning creature, and said:

"'Now, old man, if you are a monkey you're in a bad fix; if you ain't a monkey I'm in a bad fix.' At the same instant he fired and the monkey fell over in the agonies of death. His wife, who had been watching the working of her scheme, sprang up in the bed with a scream, and Bill, turning to her with a broad smile of the most intense satisfaction, said:

"'Little woman, congratulate me, for I have just had a wonderful escape. I ain't as drunk as I thought I was, and there's a monkey lyin' there on the floor that'll never intrude itself into the domestic felicity of another happy family an' make a gentleman think he's got the jimjams!'"—Capt. Jack Crawford in Kansas City Times.

The Sunshine in Mexico.

In two years' time the mercury in my house has never risen above 65 degrees nor fallen below 50. It is a curious physiological fact that, after a time, an American living here becomes unable to stand intense heat, such, for example, as one may experience by walking under the vertical tropical sun at midday. On first coming here Americans and Englishmen walk with impunity in the sun, but in a year or more the same men begin to seek the shady side of the street on summer days. The explanation of the coolness of stores, offices and houses—even during what we here call the hot months of April and May, is the rarity of the air, which, in shaded places, cannot hold much heat. One never feels the necessity of stripping off one's outer clothing to keep cool. In a word, the table land climate of Mexico, while not perfect, is, compared with the New England collection of variously assorted weathers, ideal. I have seen a thin, cadaverous, Boston consumptive, nearly killed there at the blowing of the east wind, gain twenty pounds in six months in this city, and those nervous diseases engendered by the erratic thermometer of New England are much helped by residence here. The drinking of the common people's beverage of pulque stops the ravages of kidney diseases, and the abundance of vegetables the year round conduces to the cure of dyspepsia, as does also the tranquillity of life in a country where no one is in a hurry.—City of Mexico Cor. Boston Herald.

The Parisian Ball Roses.

The fashion of giving bals blancs, which are attended by girls of tender age only, who are not yet entitled to make their debut in society, or to appear at the bals roses, is meeting at present with some opposition. These infantine balls, which are, however, frequently attended by young ladies of 20 years, have been not inappropriately compared to regiments composed of old veterans and enfans de troupe. The chief sufferers from such conventional entertainments are, of course, the older neophytes, who are condemned to go through their waltzes and quadrilles under the eyes of stalwarts dowagers. It is doubtful, however, if the present opposition will be able to break through the barriers of formalism which hedge in the marriageable French girl as if she were a pulling infant, and condemn her to a Cinderella like treatment unheard of in the social philosophy of her English or American sisters.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Told to a Friend.

Of course in all families the mother is the one to whom the children cling. We don't talk to them, feel with them, love them, occupy ourselves about them as the female does. We think about our business and pleasure, not theirs. Why do I trouble you with these perplexities? If I mayn't tell you what I feel, what is the use of a friend? That's why I would rather have a sad letter from you, or a short one if you are tired or unwell, than a show gay one—and I don't recognize at all to the doctrine of "striving to be cheerful."—Unpublished Letters of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

Revolutionizing the Business.

A young man in Missouri started out to be a snake charmer and revolutionize the business, but the first thing he felt was the fangs of a rattlesnake buried in his cheek, and it has taken two months to get the swelling of his cheek reduced so that he can wear a No. 8 hat.—Detroit Free Press.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Fine Hay weather.

The farmers are improving the fine weather making hay, and getting in a fine quality.

Mr. Wilber of Ypsilanti, Sundayed as the guest of P. E. Pocklington and family and the Freer sisters.

Dr. and Mrs. Loree spent Sunday in Detroit with their daughter, Mrs. Lucking.

Mrs. Samuel and Mrs. Rachel Rappleye went to Grand Rapids Saturday to visit relatives.

Prof. Martin Palmer of Flat Rock, is home spending his vacation. He has engaged for another year.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar VanVleet of Seneca Co. N. Y., have been visiting their cousins. E. C. and John VanVleet, for the past few days. It is 17 years since they last had an old time chat.

Weddie Bush arrived from Brooklyn, N. Y., Monday, and will spend some time at his grandmas, Mrs. Hall's.

Last week as the C. J. & M. R'y officials were taking a view of their fine line at the rate of 50 miles on a special, collided with Geo. Pocklington's sheep and killed five or six of them.

The Editor of the Britton Eagle was in the village Tuesday on business.

Our young merchant, W. F. Clark, made a business trip to Detroit Monday.

Lou Arner Sundayed at Manchester with friends, enjoying a drive to the Lakes.

Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Wilson are home for a visit during their vacation. We understand the Professor will superintend the Constantine school the coming year.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. F. M. Society will be held at the home of Mrs. J. F. Temple next week Wednesday afternoon, July 6th. A cordial invitation is extended to all the friends to enjoy a social time.

Nellie Heesen of Tecumseh, visited Lena Smith from Saturday until Monday.

Cora Hanson of Milan, was in the village last week on school business, and visited the Arner sisters.

Last week as the boys were practicing ball-batting, Van Barrett let his bat accidently slip, and hit little Bertie Clack on the head. He was thought to be dead when picked up, but after a few moments recovered. Experience is a dear teacher, boys.

Our base ball boys will play the Cone club on our grounds next Saturday P. M., and if the Holloway club fulfill what they have said, our club will play them in the A. M. Game to be called at 9 o'clock. Two games in one day will try our own boy's mettle a little, consequently they will have their old pitcher, Mr. Huston, with them for both games. The Norvel club want to play our club at Clinton in the near future.

It seems from a further hearing, that our account concerning Mr. Wm. Birdsell, week before last should have been slightly modified so far as the arm being broken over; that part it appears, was performed by Mr. Bird sell some two weeks previous to the operation at Adrian. He had the assistance of a two horse team, a plow and a solid underground root of a tree.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

A sad calamity befell the family of Henry Dibble, about 4:30 P. M. Tuesday the 28th, in the drowning of their little son Cyrus, 6 or 7 years old, in the Macon at the bridge near Mrs. M. Pocklington's. He and two other little boys stopped at the bridge on their way home from school, and through some mishap the little fellow fell into the stream, and although help was quite near, life was extinct when he was taken out.

Mrs. A. Easlick got up in the night to feed a pet pig, out in the back kitchen, and in the dark opened the wrong door and fell down cellar, receiving such a shaking up that she has occupied the big arm chair for the past two weeks, but is now improving.

Jennie Latleur is at Ann Arbor this week.

Mary, Jennie and Phebe Osgood attended the Valley reunion last Friday.

Nettie Miller returned from school at St. John's last Saturday.

Mrs. Sarah Easlick has been visiting at her son's, A. Easlick, the past two weeks, and while there received a certificate from the Pension Department granting her $12 per month from June 1885 henceforth, in recognition of the services of her son Newman A. Easlick, who was lost on the ill fated ship Sultana, May 28th, 1865.

Friday, July 1st, the new mail route from Lake Ridge to Balch, (Britton) will take effect. The mail will leave Lake Ridge at 8:30 A. M. and connect with the three forenoon trains at Britton, giving fresh mail both ways and making Lake Ridge as good a mailing office as any in the county. Patrons of the office wishing to retain these favors should do their posting at Lake Ridge.

UNSTED ODDS:

John Reynolds started his meat wagon Monday.

Mrs. J. Secor spent several days in Tecumseh last week.

Mrs. Desermia and daughter of Ithica are visiting friends here.

Mrs. Clark Welsh and children started Tuesday for Dakota where Mr. Welsh has been for some time.

R. L. Gleen went to Toledo Monday to purchase goods.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Langhlin of Valley City, Dakota are visiting at her father's O. L. Short's.

Rev. E. E. Chambers D. D. and wife, of Buffalo, N. Y. are visiting friends here. Mrs. Chambers is a sis of Marshall Reed.

S. D. Evans had a horse quite severly injured last Saturdoy by falling through the manger in C. W. Greenleaf's barn. Mr. Evans was engaged in drawing in hay and while they were unloading the hay, the horses crowded each other and this one got in the manger and before sufficient help could be procured he was so far through that they were obliged to let him through to the basement. He was badly bruised but will probably come out all right.

MACON MUSIC.

Fine weather for haying.

John Chambers and Mr. McClusky, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., are visiting at Erwin Howell's.

John Howell returned home from Ypsilanti last week.

Sumner Collins spent Saturday, Sunday and Monday with his parents.

Etta, Augustus, Viva, and Gertrude Howell called on friends Sunday.

Several of the young people of this place went to Ypsilanti this week to attend the commencement.

There will be a Sunday school picnic in Pennington's grove Saturday July 23d. All are cordially invited.

Mrs. Hannah Pennington started for Dakota last Monday, where she expects to remain some time.

Ralph Mills, who had his leg broken some time ago, is able to be out again.

Roscoe Morgan, youngest son of Charles Morgan, died last Tuesday morning of acute laryngitis. The funeral was held at the Baptist church Wednesday at 2 o'clock.

OBITUARY.

Henry T. Luce, was born in the state of Pennsylvania, Jan 6th, 1811. He was the youngest of a family of ten children. His father, who was a physician, died in Pennsylvania, and when Henry was eight years of age, his mother and family moved to the state of New York. On the 30th of March, 1833, he was united in marriage to Miss Lucy Fisher. Mr. and Mrs. Luce came to Michigan in 1839. They lived two years in Sharon, seventeen years in Manchester, sixteen years in Napoleon, and thirteen years in Tecumseh. Their family consists of three sons, and three daughters, all of whom were present during the last illness, and death of their father. The death of Mr. Luce is the first death in the family. Mr. Luce was an intelligent, honest, and respected citizen, his most intimate acquaintances are those who esteem him most. In the year 1842 Mr. Luce made a public profession of religion and united with the Methodist Episcopal church, and he remained a faithful member of it until his death. After a brief illness he died at his home in Tecumseh, on Saturday morning, June 25th. Funeral services were held at the family residence on Sunday afternoon June 26th. The services consisted of the reading of the 90th Psalm by Rev. Dr. L. Barnes, music by the choir, prayer by Rev. W. Q. Barnett, and a brief discourse by T. G. Potter, pastor of the M. E. church. All the funeral arrangements were under the direction of Dr. R. R. House. The pall bearers were E. Coryell, Jas. Potter, Sr., J. S. Kinney, J. W. Ayres, S. M. Smith and J. L. Remington. Mr. Luce passed away in great peace, and in confident expectation of a blessed immortality.

AN OLD FASHIONED BLOW-OUT IN TECUMSEH ON THE COMING ANNIVERSARY OF INDEPENDENCE DAY.

The Program in Full as far as at Present Arranged—The Procession, Line of March, Games, Amusements, Races, Etc.

The committee of arrangements are rapidly bringing their plans to a focus and we are enabled to present to our readers this week the principal features of the program for the 4th.

Our citizens propose to make this the finest celebration ever held in this village, and cordially invite

The friends and patriots of our land,
To come and celebrate Old Independence Day,
And listen to the "chestnut" music of the band,
From old-time melodies of days long passed away.

Take a day off and come and bring "your sisters your cousins and your aunts," as well as your sweethearts and children.

President—D. A. Hammond.
Marshall—C. A. Slayton.
Orator—P. S. McKinnon.

PROGRAM OF THE DAY.

Grand display of fireworks in the evening. The finest display ever witnessed in Tecumseh. Come and enjoy one of the old time celebrations.

Where Howells Got His Genius.

Howell's genius came to him, perhaps, from his Quaker grandmother. His mother, Mary Dean, was a woman of many virtues, but it cannot be said that her inclination was very marked in the direction of letters. The father, now 80 years old, was until quite recently United States Consul at Quebec. He lives in Jefferson, where his son, J. A. Howells, still owns and edits the Sentinel. Anne Howells, the still younger daughter, married Frechette, the Canadian poet. She, too, is a writer of verses and descriptive articles, but her talent is not of as high an order as that of her distinguished brother. The novelist is a Howells rather than a Dean. His father's stoop is perpetuated in him while he inherits his mother's Pennsylvania German thrift and business capacity.

A Lullaby.

Sleep, little baby, upon thy mother's breast,
Let the white contents of thy lids unroll
O'er the blue windows of thy stainless soul;
Sleep, little baby, thou canst sleep always rest.
The little wren must weave itself a nest,
The little chipmunk learn to carve its hole,
The little squirrel scurry to its tree-top home,
And thou must make thy way, but it is best,
Then sleep, my blessed baby, whilst though canst.

No Taffy for Her.

Old Gent—How old are you, Fanny.

Fanny—I was 10 years old on my last birthday.

Old Gent—You don't look to be so old as that.

Fanny—How you must hate your poor mother!

Cramped for Time.

"O! George, I've just read" — and her sobs they grew strong —
"The sun's heat cannot last but ten million years longer!"
My crazy people, I mean!" her tears fell undiminished —
"O! the sad world! gone out before ever it's finished!"

DON'T FAIL TO TRY IT.

J. C. Burrows, Kalamazoo, Mich., testifies: "For more than five years, a member of my family has been afflicted with Hay Fever, culmitating late in the fall in a hacking cough. Every remedy proved furtle. Not half a bottle of Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure had been used before the cough entirely disappeared, and general relief followed. 'It is simply wonderful.'" Large bottles only $1.00.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

Lesson for July 31.

THE INFANT JESUS.—MATTHEW II. 1-12.

NOTES.—The Gospel of Matthew was written in Palestine, and for the use of the Jews. Some say it was written first in Hebrew. Its object is to show the Jews that Jesus is the promised King of the Jews or the Messiah. It therefore refers much to the prophecies of the Jewish Scripture.

"When Jesus was born."—Four or five years earlier than the accepted date of our era, i. e., 1891 or 1892 years ago.——"In Bethlehem of Judea."—Not the other Bethlehem, in Zebulon, near Nazareth. It is mentioned as the Judea Bethlehem so as to show that it fulfills the prophecy quoted in verse 6. It was also called Bethlehem Ephratah, and was about six miles nearly south from Jerusalem.——"Herod."—The first of the name, Herod the Great, an able, cruel man. This happened, perhaps, in his last year.——"Wise men from the East."—Or, better, magi. This name was given to the priests and astrologers of Persia. If they started when Christ was born, it must now have been some months later.——"King of the Jews."—There had been, ever since the Captivity, many learned Jews in the East, and from them the knowledge that the Messiah was expected about this time, would have spread among the heathen about.——"His star."—What that star was is not at all clear, as we are not told. Some have made it a conjunction of the planets, but it is not clear how that could have seemed to stand over the house in Bethlehem. It may have been a remarkable meteor, but that is not an evident explanation. It is described as if it were a special miraculous appearance.——"We's troubled."—If a king was expected, Herod the king might well have been for his throne. Jerusalem would have been disturbed, and all the friends of Herod would be anxious.——"All the chief priests and scribes"—This would seem to include the whole Sanhedrim. He would naturally go to them for information.——"The Christ."—Not Christ, but "the Christ" the prophesied anointed one, Messiah.——"And then, Bethlehem," etc.—The quotation is not exact at all, according to the Hebrew, but more nearly follows the Greek. It is taken from Micah v. 2.——"Privily called."—Secretly.——"Carefully."—So as to know how old the child was.——"Worship him."—Not as God, but show him honor and reverence.——"Where the young child was."—No longer in the table but in the house where they were living.——"With Mary his Mother."—Joseph was not mentioned, as the young child would be in its mother's care.——"Fell down."—In the Eastern way of bending forward and touching the forehead to the ground.

INSTRUCTIONS.—It was because they were wise men that they sought to find the Christ. The wiser a man is the more he will want to know about Christ. It is the fools that don't care.

It would seem as if the very heathen were ready to worship and welcome the coming Christ. We have here an indication that Christianity was to be a universal religion, and not a mere Jewish sect. We also get a hint that the spirit of God does not leave the heathen alone. The influences of grace come in some way to them also, and in their religion there may be elements of truth which God can use for their good.

Jesus is to be sought for. These men came hundreds of miles to find him. How far are you willing to go to find him? Are you willing to go to Sunday School, to church, to your pastor's study? Then are you willing to ask direction. Are you afraid or ashamed to ask? Do you really want to know where to find Christ?

The priests could give an answer, can you, when some friends or neighbors ask you where he can find Christ?

Herod was "troubled." He did not want the Christ to come. It is remarkable that so many people do not want to have Christ come. They don't want to be interfered with.

Goodness is a great trouble. Good people are a great nuisance to other folks. Why cannot saloon keepers be let alone? Good people can't let them alone. They are bound to treat, bie them.

With worship go offerings. Indeed, giving is a good part of worship. The best we have should be given to Christ.

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD,

Author of "King Solomon's Mines" "She" Etc.

"The pass said one cart," said a voice.

"Yah, yah, one cart," answered another.

John again put on his clerical air and told his artless tale, but neither of the men could understand English, so they went to a wagon that was standing about thirty yards away to talk it over.

"Now, Jakes," whispered the Zulu Monti, "drive on, drive on."

Jakes took the hint and lashed the horses with his long whip, while Monti, bending forward over the splashboard, thrashed the wheelers with a sjambock. Off went the heavy wagon, and in a few moments it was lost in a hundred yards of ground before the two sentries had realized what had happened. Then they began to run after the lift shouting, but we were long out of range.

John and Monti did not spare the whip, but pressed on up the stony hills on the Pretoria side of Heidelberg without a halt.

By 11 o'clock they reached a kaffir, or wayside house, known as Ferguson's, and situated about twenty miles from Pretoria. It was empty, except for a couple of cats and a stray dog. The inhabitants had evidently fled from the Boers. Here John stabbed and fed his horses, giving them all that remained of the forage, and then, very more, started on for the last stage. The road was dreadful, and he knew that the country must be full of hostile Boers, but fortunately he met none. It took him four hours to get over the twenty miles of ground; but it was not until he got to the "Poort," or neck running down into Pretoria, that he saw a vestige of a Boer. Then he made out two mounted men riding along the top of a precipitous stone strewn kopje some 600 yards or so from him. At first he thought that they were going to descend it, but presently they changed their minds and got off their horses.

While he was still wondering what this might portend, he saw a puff of white smoke float up from where the men were, and then another. Then came the sharp, unmistakable "ping" of a bullet passing, as far as he could judge, within three feet of his head, followed by a second "ping," and a cloud of dust beneath the belly of the first horse. The two Boers were firing at him.

He did not wait for any more target practice, but, thrashing the horses to a canter, got the cart round a projecting bank before they could load and fire again. After that he saw no more of them.

At last he reached the mouth of the Poort and saw the prettiest of the South African towns, with its red and white houses, its tall clumps of trees and pink lines of blooming rose hedges lying on the plain before him, all set in the green veldt, and made beautiful by the golden light of the afternoon, and he thanked God for the sight. He knew that he was safe now, and let his tired horses walk slowly down the hillside and across the bit of plain beyond. To his left were the jail and barrack sheds, and yet nearer about 10 were hundreds of wagons and tents, toward which he drove. Evidently the town was deserted and its inhabitants in danger. When he got within half a mile or so a picket of mounted men came riding toward him, followed by a miscellaneous crowd on horseback and on foot.

"Who goes there?" shouted in a voice in honest English.

"A friend who is more than glad to see you," he answ[illegible] with a feeble pleasantry, [illegible] weight is at length lifted from our nerves.

CHAPTER XVI.

PRETORIA.

Jess did not have a very happy time of it at Pretoria during the first week or so. Most people who have made a great moral effort, and after a severe mental struggle entered on the clear path of self sacrifice, have experienced the reaction that will follow as certainly as the night follows the day. It is one thing to renounce the light, to stand in the full glow of the setting beams of our image, to bid a clear cut farewell, and [illegible] for a little while memory may supply, but memory grows faint. On every side is the thick, colorless pall and the sickness through which no sound comes. We are alone, quite alone, cut off from the fellowship of the day, unseeing and unseen. More especially is this so when our dungeon is of our own making, and we ourselves have shot its bolts. There is a natural night that comes to all, and in its unwavering course swallows every hope and fear, forever and forever. To this we can more easily resign ourselves, for we recognize the universal lot and bow ourselves beneath the all offering hand. The earth does not pine when the daylight passes from its pearly or purple slope.

But Jess had parted herself, and she knew it. There was no absolute need for her to have resigned her affection to her sister, she had done so of her own will, and at times she naturally enough regretted it. Self denial is a stern feed[illegible]. It only we could fan[illegible] and wrestle with him long enough, he will speak in soft words of happy sound, just as, if we wait long enough, in the darkness of the night, the wind comes to drive our loneliness. Still this is one of those things that time helps from us and only reveals at his own pleasure, and so far as Jess was concerned, his pleasure was not yet. Outwardly, however, she showed no sign of her distress and of the passion which was eating at her heart. She was pale and silent, it is true, but then she had always been remarkable for her pallor and silence. Only she gave up her singing.

And so the weeks went on, dreary enough for the poor girl, who was doing what other people call a noble and [illegible] thing, and doing it perhaps for the rest of her Pretoria world, till at last she began to think that she had better be going home again, lest she should wear out her welcome. And yet she dreaded to do so, mindful of her daily prayers to be delivered from temptation. As to what was going on at Moosfontein she was in almost complete ignorance. Bessie wrote to her, of course, and so did her uncle once or twice, but they did not tell her much of what she wanted to know. Bessie's letters were, it is true, full of allusions of what Capt. Niel was doing, but she did not go beyond that. Her relations, however, told her observant sister more than her words. Why, was she so reticent? No doubt because things still hung in the balance. And then she would think of what it all meant for her, and row and again give way to an outburst of passionate jealousy, which would have been painful enough to witness if anybody could have been there to see it.

And so the time went on toward Christmas, for Jess, having been warmly pressed to do so, had settled to stay over Christmas and return to the farm with the new year. There had been a great deal of talk in the town about the Boers, but she was too much preoccupied with her own affairs to pay much attention to it. Nor, indeed, was the public mind greatly moved; they were so much accustomed to floor scares at Pretoria, and hitherto they had invariably ended in smoke. And then all of a sudden, on the morning of the 18th of December, came the news of the proc[illegible] thrown into a ferment, and there was a talk of going into laager, and, anxious as she was to get away, Jess could see no hope of returning to the farm till the excitement was over. Then a day or two later Conductor Egerton came limping into Pretoria from the scene of the disaster, he [illegible] with the survivors of the Ninety-fourth regiment cut to pieces in his middle, and such a tale to tell that the blood went to her heart and seemed to stagnate there as she listened to it.

And after that there was confusion worse confounded. Martial law was proclaimed, and the town, which was large enough, and large of its kind, was about full. [illegible] They were young and cold, wet and well, and [illegible] together on the open under the cover of their wagons, nothing but canvas tents, wagons, and [illegible] for the sick and the [illegible] and sick. Jess had to share a wagon with [illegible] and another, and [illegible] even to lie down. [illegible] of the camp [illegible] round her. [illegible]

It was about [illegible] that she received a letter from Bessie [illegible] by the last mail that passed [illegible] got Bessie's letter announcing her engagement to John. She took her letter [illegible] some way from the camp to the side of Signal Hill, where she was not likely to be disturbed, and, finding a nook sheltered by mimosa trees, sat down and broke the envelope. Before she had got to the end of the first page she knew what an enormity she had committed. She read the long letter through from beginning to end without flinching, though the words of affection seemed to burn her. She had guessed it all. Well, she expected it and had plotted to bring it about, so really there was no reason in the world why she should feel disappointed. On the contrary, she ought to rejoice, and for a little while she really did rejoice in her sister's happiness. It made her happy to think that Bessie, whom she dearly loved, was happy.

And yet she felt angry with John with that sort of anger which we feel against those who have blunder[illegible] against us. Why should he have it in his power to hurt her so? Still she hoped that he would be happy with Bessie, and then she hoped that those wretched Boers would take Pretoria, and that she would be [illegible] out of the way somehow. She had no heart for life, all the color had faded from her sky. What was she to do with herself? She would not stop on the farm after John and Bessie were married, she was quite clear as to that; nor, if she could avoid it, would she return there before they were married. She would see him no more, no more! Alas, that she had ever seen him.

Feeling somewhat happier, or at any rate calmer, in this determination, she rose to return to the noisy camp extending her walk, however, by making a detour toward the Heidelberg road, for she was anxious to be as long alone as she could. She had been walking some ten minutes when she caught sight of a cart that seemed familiar to her, with three horses harnessed in front of it and one tied on behind, which were also familiar. There was a lot of men walking alongside of the cart, all talking eagerly. She failed to let the little procession go by, when suddenly she perceived John Niel among the men and recognized the Zulu Monti on the box. There was the man whom she had just vowed never to see again, and the sight of him seemed to take all the strength out of her, so that she felt inclined to sink into instantly more the well fit. His sudden appearance was [illegible] uncanny to the superstitious of its strangeness. [illegible] of the clouds of [illegible] it them, all in an instant it seemed to be [illegible] in upon her mind that she could not help it [illegible] but was only the instrument in the hands of a superior power whose will she was fulfilling through the working of her passions, and by whom her pulse [illegible]

[illegible] of little moment. It was [illegible] seeing and [illegible] but it must [illegible] followed that the moment [illegible] color of truth. And after all, the [illegible] between Natal and Pretoria will last [illegible] been quite satisfactorily settled, even by St. Paul, so perhaps she was right. Margaret does [illegible] about it, but [illegible] a question whether we can oppose our [illegible] with [illegible] of them, keeping [illegible] [illegible] Jess was [illegible] whisper or where to draw that [illegible] [illegible]

On came the cart and the [illegible] them said to John, who forgot up and saw [illegible] looking at it in wild [illegible] indeed, seem at [illegible] windows of [illegible] Monti, who [illegible] [illegible] Jess [illegible] stretched hand.

"How do you do, Jess? [illegible]"

She took it [illegible] and [illegible] angrily. "What [illegible] Why [illegible]

[illegible] cause I wish it. I wanted to see [illegible] home [illegible] Pretoria [illegible]

"You [illegible] Jess. [illegible] you expect to see [illegible] Well, [illegible] sun up [illegible]

"It [illegible] things might be worse," he [illegible]

"I do not think that anything could be worse," she answered, with a stamp of her foot, and the [illegible] would be [illegible] last mention of Natal and [illegible]

John Niel was a very single minded man, and it never struck him to attribute to any other cause than anxiety for the state of affairs and a longer incarceration for an indefinite period in a besieged town that rather lady of being taken [illegible] Still he was a little [illegible] of the manner of his reception after his long and most perilous journey, which he was, perhaps, to be wondered at.

"Well, Jess," he said, "I think that you might speak a little more kindly to me, considering—considering all things. There, don't cry, they are all right at Moosfontein and I dare say that we shall get back there somehow sometime or other. I had a nice business to get here at all, I can tell you."

She suddenly stopped weeping and smiled, her tears passing away like a summer storm. "How did you get through?" she asked. "Tell me all about it, Capt. Niel," and accordingly he did.

She listened in silence while he sketched the chief events of his journey, and when he had done she spoke in quite a changed tone.

"It is very good and kind of you to have risked your life like this for me. Only I wonder that you did not all of you see that it would be of no use. We shall both be shut up here together now, that is all, and that will be very bad for you and Bessie."

"Oh. So you have heard of our engagement?" he said.

"Yes. I got Bessie's letter about a couple of hours ago, and I congratulate you both very much. I think that you will have the sweetest and loveliest wife in South Africa, Capt. Niel; and I think that Bessie will have a husband any woman might be proud of," and she half bowed and half courtesied to him as she said it, with a graceful little air of dignity that was very taking.

[illegible] I think [illegible] a very lucky fellow."

"And now," she said, "we had better go and see about the cart. You must be very tired and hungry," and they started.

A few minutes' walk brought them to the cart, which Monti had outspanned close to [illegible]

What was better still, Jess had fried him a beefsteak over the camp fire, and was now employed in serving it on a little table by the wagon. He sat down on a camp stool and ate his meal heartily enough, while Jess waited on him and Mrs. Neville chattered away.

"By the way," she said, "Jess tells me you are going to marry her sister. Well! I wish you joy. A man wants a wife in a country like this. It isn't like England, where in five cases out of six he might as well go and cut his throat as get married. It saves him money here, and children are a blessing, as nature meant them to be, and not a burden, as civilization has made them. Lord, how my tongue does run on! It isn't delicate to talk about children when you have only been engaged a couple of weeks, but, you see, that's what it all comes to after all. She's a pretty girl, Bessie, and a good one, too—I don't know her much—though she hasn't got the brains of Jess, here. That reminds me, as you are engaged to Bessie, of course you can look after Jess, and nobody will think anything of it. And if you only knew what a place this is for talk, though their talk is pretty well scared out of them now. I'm thinking. My husband is coming round presently to the cart to help get Jess's bed into it. Lucky it's big. We are spending tight fit in that wagon, and I shall be downright glad to see the last of the dear girl, though, of course, you'll both come and take your meals with us."

Jess heard all this in silence. She could not well resist upon stopping in the crowded wagon; it would be going too much in and, besides, she had had her right to the wagon, and that was [illegible] enough for her. Once she suggested that she would sit up if she could not get the cart to take her home to convalescent Mrs. Neville instantly suppressed the notion.

"Nonsense," she said, "nonsense. When your own brother-in-law at least he will be your brother-in-law if the boers don't make an end of us, she is going to take care of you. I think, about going [illegible] Jess, as much as to [illegible] to be [illegible] after [illegible] I'll be [illegible]"

ACROSS THE THRESHOLD.

FROM HIGH SCHOOL DAYS INTO THE BUSY WORLD BEYOND.

Graduates of Tecumseh High School Receive Their Diplomas.

The twentieth annual commencement of the Tecumseh High School was held at the Opera House last Thursday evening, and to say that the exercises were better than usual is simply stating the plain facts of the case. The stage setting was exceedingly tasty. Instead of the parlor scene, the forest scene was used, with the wings to correspond, and two beautiful floral pyramids adorned the front ends of the platform. The plan of collecting the floral gifts was new and a decided improvement over the former method. These were gathered up by the ushers, while the audience were assembling, and placed on the stage before the foot lights. They added much to the ornamentation of the stage and the plan obviated the tedious delay between the essays heretofore occasioned. The graduating class and other persons who assisted in the program, also the Board of Trustees, were seated upon the platform. The class motto, "Not Whence but What," wrought in large evergreen letters was suspended from the stage, again in front, and a beautiful white crescent with the green letters "class" thereon, was pendent from a scene in the rear. Mrs. Starr's mammoth geranium was also called into requisition to good advantage. The room was well filled and a more attentive audience never listened to a program of that character. The experiment of charging an admission fee resulted admirably. The receipts footed up to $45.15, which liquidated the cost on the piano and left a small balance in the treasury.

Shortly after eight o'clock Prof. Hammond called the assembly to order and announced the program, which was given as follows.

Music, Trovatore, Verdi—Miss Mabel Hayden, Mr. L. C. Hayden, Miss Elida James.

Prayer—Rev. W. H. Babbitt.

Salutatory—Ernest W. Goff.

Essay, Neglect not the gift that is in Thee—Ida B. Rector.

Music, Vocal Solo, The Nevada Star, Balfe—Mrs. A. K. Johnson.

Essay, Beyond the Alps lies Italy—Asenath B. Hosmer.

Essay, Our Forefathers—Edna E. McCloy.

Music, Instrumental Duet, Zelma Recital—Misses Laub and Wilkinson.

Oration, The Siege of Troy—Charles C. Taylor.

Essay, Garret Rambles—K. Helena Adams.

Music, Trio, Mendelssohn—Miss Mabel Hayden, Mr. L. C. Hayden, Miss Elida James.

Essay, Books and Readers—Eva B. Fisher.

Oration and Valedictory, Gresham Games—Arthur A. Hall.

Presentation of Diplomas—A. W. Mills, President of the Board.

Music, Vocal Solo, The Old and the Young Maid—F. H. Brown—Mrs. A. K. Johnson.

Benediction.

The essays showed careful preparation and were all well delivered. The musical part of the program was never surpassed on a similar occasion. The songs by Mrs. A. K. Johnson were very rendered, Miss Jennie Root accompanying on the piano with her accustomed ease. The duet by Misses Laub and Wilkinson was excellent. The trio by Miss Mabel Hayden, Mr. L. C. Hayden, and Miss Elida James, were superb. The appropriate and eloquent remarks of President Mills in his presentation of the diplomas made a fitting close to the evening's exercises. As it would be impossible to do justice to the essays in a brief synopsis, we present them herewith in full.

Taken altogether, it was the most successful commencement held in recent years, and added another laurel to Prof. Hammond's record as an efficient superintendent.

Salutatory.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: A few years ago, a man, who spoke wiser than he thought, left for our benefit the saying, "The man who speaks much errs much." Fully appreciating the truth of this saying we do, in behalf of the class of '87, most cordially welcome you here to night, and invite your kind attention to the program which we have prepared. Your presence here encourages us to believe that you are interested in us, for which we thank you. We are to-night as a class, about to bid you farewell. We must say farewell to the able corps of teachers, which have so long and patiently assisted us, and we must say farewell to the board of education, which so wisely laid out our courses of study. As pupils in the public schools of Tecumseh, our work is done. We have slowly but surely passed upward and onward through the various grades, performing to the best of our ability, the work assigned us by our teachers. How well we have done this work our records will show; how faithfully, the future will tell. The time has now arrived when we must leave this school, and make way for other classes, which, persevering, shall one day greet you as we have. But before leaving the public schools of Tecumseh forever, we wish, as a class, to thank first our teachers for the interest they have shown in us, and the painstaking care they have bestowed upon us. second, we wish to thank the board of education, not in deed, for making our tasks easy, for this they have not done, but for that thoughtfulness which [illegible] them, to judge of our capabilities and lay out a reasonable course of study for us; and third, we wish to thank you, the public, for showing your interest in us by coming here to night. As essayists, our experience has been limited. Please overlook our imperfections, and now, unless [illegible] we extend to you a most hearty welcome.

Neglect not the Gift that is in Thee.

BY IDA B. RECTOR.

The [illegible] of inactivity, but intense action. The nineteenth century will pass into history, as one in which God's gifts to man have not been neglected, but improved; tireless achievements have been accomplished. Wonderful discoveries have been made, and eminent men have done much good for it. Of the vast number of people on the face of the globe there is a place for all. There seems to be something for each one to do. Each individual has some part to perform in making up the records of history. The world at large may not be benefited by our exploits, but the small circle in which we move will in some way be influenced. We are exerting influences, although perhaps unconsciously, each day of our lives. It is by the neglect, or the use of the gifts we possess, that our influence is for evil or for good.

We may think we possess no gift whatever; but what a mistake this is. There is no one, no matter how humble his station in life, who is not more or less gifted. We may have some talents that we do not value as highly as we ought, but should they be taken from us we would soon find they were more precious than gold. Are not our five senses among the most valuable gifts that could be bestowed upon us? We do not half appreciate them until we are robbed of them. The only way to show our thankfulness for such priceless gifts is to make the best use of them. We should use them, not merely for our own gain, neglecting the good of our fellow creatures, but remembering the golden rule, "We should do unto others as we would that they should do unto us."

If in some mysterious way we find we have some special gift or talent, that one should be cultivated above all others. To one may be given the gift of song, to another oratory, to another healing, to another teaching. If we are given, but one talent, we should not hide it, but improve it, for we as well as those to whom are given ten, will be required to give an account of the one. Let us be careful then, lest through neglect, even the one that we have be taken from us. Almost numberless are the ways in which we are enabled to train our talents. High social position may help to develop the gifts we possess, but if we do not move among the highest circles of society, the opportunities are just as many and the need for them to be developed is far greater. The gifts of perseverance and ambition are valuable aids in discovering and developing new gifts. If we think we have some gifts that are so small they are of no account, let us pause for a moment at the story of the Aragonian Knights. King Schalzos, khan of Tartary, after living for some time with his wife, lost confidence in her. Instead of endeavoring to reform her, he immediately caused her to be put to death. After mourning for her for some time, for he loved her in spite of her faults, he resolved to avenge himself of woman kind in general. After marrying many times and causing each wife to be killed he became the husband of Scheherazade the beautiful daughter of the grand vizier. But neither rank nor beauty could save her from the king's vengence. About an hour before the time appointed for her execution her sister entered the room and asked if Scheherazade might be allowed to tell one of the stories she so much enjoyed. The king thinking there was so short a time for her to live granted her desire. Accordingly she told one of her stories and the king became so interested in it he delayed the time of her death that he might hear another story the next morning. Each day saw him more interested in the stories until he decided to let his wife live as long as she had a story to tell. After she had entertained him with one thousand and one stories, he admired her patriotism in exposing her life to his unreasonable revenge, he determined to renounce his vow, and summoning a council declared to them his resolution. So to any of us a simple gift like that of story telling, if rightly used, may be of great service: It is not only from fiction that we need look for these examples, but from real life.

Had those men so noted in history neglected their gifts the world would not have been what it is to-day. They did not use them simply to be renowned and have their praises sung over land and sea. They knew nothing about how famous they were to become, for they did not know but all might be a failure and their efforts a disgrace; but they worked because they knew it to be their duty, to use their talents and powers that good might be accomplished.

If Professor Morse, the inventor of the electric telegraph had given up his task of invention, instead of continuing with his work, the wonderful piece of apparatus by which we send our thoughts with lightning speed from continent to continent, would never have been known. But instead of becoming discouraged, he cultivated his gifts of clear insight and perseverance to a noble purpose.

Had the owners of those names so familiar to us in the study of literature slighted their talents, what sources of pleasure and information would be lost to us forever. The precious gift of sight was taken from Milton in the prime of life, but had he become discouraged and neglected his greater gift, his great master piece, "Paradise Lost," which is perhaps the noblest monument of human genius, would never have been given to the world.

There is one gift that we may all acquire, which is too often neglected. That is the gift of imparting happiness to others. God intended the home life to be the highest earthly type of Heaven, and if we [illegible] bearance and self forgetfulness, and let hatred, impatience and self love take their place, we trample the good impulses of our nature and make life a failure. What avail is it if we gain multitudes and our name goes down to posterity as a great discoverer or public benefactor, if we have caused unhappiness and heartaches to the loved ones in the home?

Beyond the Alps lies Italy.

BY ASENATH B. HOSMER.

[illegible] spoken by the great Carthaginian general, Hannibal, about the year 218 B. C. During the second Punic war, Hannibal conceived the idea of crossing the Alps and marching into Italy to take Rome during the absence of the Roman army. His plan was a dangerous one. No general known to history had ever attempted this passage before. Hannibal's army consisted of one hundred and twenty six thousand men and thirty seven elephants. They secured as their guides a portion of the small Gallic tribe Centrones. The path across the Alps was very narrow, leading between precipices, over rocky peaks and ice fields, even the crack of a driver's whip might bring down a deadly avalanche. Many passes of the Lower Alps were held by warlike mountaineers, who when Hannibal approached unconscious of their existence, fell upon the army, driving many down the steep embankments. Men and horses would slip on the slanting ice fields, and go over the edge of a precipice into the yawning abyss below. His men, unaccustomed to such hardships, as cold and hunger, longed for their sunny homes in Carthagina and even threatened to go back. Hannibal cheered them on with the hope of victory in Italy; "Beyond the Alps lies Italy." "Press on!" Oh! the joy of that suffering army, now diminished in numbers when the plains of Italy burst upon their view. What a contrast to the cold, desolate, perilous mountain passes! The hope of plunder covered the minds of these tired men. They had toiled over these rough mountains. Their ranks were broken, for many had fallen by the way never to rise again. Their eyes were closed in their last sleep; they had said their last farewell to friends and loved ones back in beautiful Carthage. No more suffering and hardship in that earthly army, for the bugle had sounded above, and they had obeyed like true soldiers. Hannibal had, as I have said before, expected to take Rome during the absence of the Roman army. His plan worked well for a time. He succeeded in keeping seven or eight Roman generals employed watching his movements. He attached many nationalities from the Roman alliance and drove the vast Roman army before him like frightened deer. The army marched within a few hundred miles of Rome, but in the mean time the great Roman general Scipio had marched through Spain and defeated Hannibal's brother, Hasdrubal, who had come with reinforcements. From Spain he proceeded towards Carthaginia, and cut off Hannibal's supplies. The Carthaginians, terrified at his approach, ordered Hannibal to return. Thus ended his brilliant design.

If reinforcements under Hasdrubal had reached him, in all probability Rome would have been obliged to capitulate in a few months and Scipio to surrender for want of support.

We can apply Hannibal's experience to our own lives, for we are constantly climbing our grand range of Alps. In fact mankind is one vast army toiling up the ascent. The leader of this army is Ambition and the watchword is "Beyond the Alps lies Italy."

The beginning of the ascent is free from all real difficulties; these we pass in our childhood, happy in the present as we see it and looking forward to the future with wonder and bright hopes; little suspecting the great obstacles we must overcome. As we go higher up the ascent we meet greater difficulties. We hear rumors of the warlike mountaineers, but like Hannibal, we glory in our strength and press on.

When the mountaineers appear, some find their strength failing and gradually go down into the steep abysses of sin, seldom to escape unless through the aid of some kind friend. Not discouraged by former struggles we climb on higher and higher up the ascent. The way is sunny and we are light hearted; at last we reach a plain; here young manhood and young womanhood may catch a glimpse of the plains of Italy beyond. To some the landscape is bathed in the light of a glorious cloud.

Oh! how bright and fair is this wonderful scene, so full of joy and gladness; there seems no boundary to this beautiful panorama before us and we climb on over the dangerous rocks and ice fields, scarcely heeding the danger in our eagerness to reach our Italy. Songs burst from merry hearts and man and maid climb side by side. Some are so eager and impetuous that their feet slip on the slanting ice fields and they go down never to rise again. In their joy they have fallen never to reach their Italy. Others see their Italy over hung by clouds; some are black clouds that hide the view and cover the plain as with a veil.

Oh what a dismal prospect to look upon! What wailings go up from the tired hearts of these poor soldiers. Their path up to this point had been dark and cloudy. They had borne the brunt of the load in coming up, while the others went on their way singing, and they had hoped to see their reward in a bright and glorious prospect of the land beyond. Some overcome by what they have seen sink down by the way while the others toil on toward the next point from which Italy may be seen. They perhaps do not sing as they go yet their tired hearts are comforted by the words of their leader sounding in their ears, "Beyond the Alps lies Italy."

At the next outlook there are many changes. Some of those to whom the way looks so bright, see clouds gathering over their plain. Away off in the horizon may appear a speck, and as they watch it, it rolls over the heavens betokening a great storm. A few rush on to shut out this sad vision, but many fall lacking the strength to withstand the tempest. Some of those to whom the way looked so dark, behold a brighter scene. [illegible] press on with happy hearts, but many see still the same dark picture and they fall exhausted. The ranks are rapidly thinning; many brave men have dropped by the way. Their leader has released them from duty [illegible] no roll call sounds. The feeble column roll on, more and more are constantly dropping by the way. They die in the armor as good soldiers should. At last scarcely half of the splendid army that started out reach the foot of the last mountain and begin the descent of the foot hills. Still many fall [illegible] the long march. But few reach their destiny. Their heads are white and their forms bent with toil. Their Italy is not what they had expected, but they are resigned.

Our Forefathers.

BY EDNA McCLOY.

How familiar to every student of history are the brave exploits of our forefathers! Their early struggle with poverty, their stern, integrity, and moral worth; their heroism in war, and magnanimity in peace, are all portrayed in rich and vivid coloring by the historian, the poet or the biographer. Yes, our forefathers are held up as patterns of excellency and goodness, but who has sung the praises of our fore mothers?

Surely no one doubts the existence of these important personages? Then why were the grand old dames so ignored? Were all our forefathers widows or bachelors, or all our so called great men, so good and so great in themselves that they never needed the aid, comfort or cheerful sympathy of true woomanhood? Most assuredly not, for among our eminent writers, philosophers and thinkers many there are, whose geniuses developed and came to full fruition, amid the refining influences of home life, and they are indebted for much of their success to the careful training of a wise mother or the aid and encouragement of wife or sister.

In looking over the records of the past, we find that woman's inferior position has limited her influence both in public and private life.

In Athens, the center of civilization, culture, and refinement, the condition of woman was quite deplorable.

To be sure, Greek history is graced by such brilliant minds as Aspacia and Sappho, who received the attention and homage of the philosophers and teachers of their day. The life of the virtuous Greek wife, however, was far different. Debarred from all social rights and privileges, she spent her days in seclusion, never leaving her own apartment except on important occasions and then going closely veiled.

In the early days of the Roman Republic, the father had the power of public, the father had the power of life or death over wife or child. Civilization, however, wrought a change in public opinion, and laws were enacted forbidding this prerogative, thus elevating the condition of the matrons of Rome.

Even in the most corrupt ages, when the marriage laws were very lax, Rome had many virtuous and noble women. Cornelia the mother of the Gracchi; Octavia the deserted wife of Mark Anthony; Julia the mother of Emperor Servius, and Portia the wife of Brutus, were all loving, domestic, and heroic women—of intelligence too, and moral worth. Deeply interested in national affairs, and ever active in the hour of danger, they were, nevertheless devoted to their homes, in the parity of which they trained their children.

Such characters as these serve as distinct landmarks in the general tide of corruption, and their names will be carried down the pages of history, teaching us that bad Roman life and manners been fused more with the spirit of its noble women, Rome might not have fallen.

A careful study of the history of other nations shows that in all enlightened ages, the influence of woman has ever been paramount. Although unable to wield the sword of the soldier, or don the toga of public office, still she has often constituted the real power behind the throne, and her aid and influence tendered to others, have effected the issue of national events.

Queen Philippi was only a woman, yet her activity and heroism before the battle of Nevill's Cross, spurred the English troops on to victory. Later at the seige of Calais her intercession saved the lives of six burgesses whom Edward had revengefully sentenced to death. Joan of Arc was a simple peasant girl, but she donned the white feather and soon inspired the French Army with her brave, enthusiastic spirit. Under her leadership France was saved from English conquest.

We need not, however, go back to ancient Rome or mediaeval England to find all the strength and beauty of woman's character. History will have only one Cornelia, one Philippi, one Maid of Orleans, but the world will never lack for women having the same ennobling qualities. Not every woman is fitted to do a great work as did Joan of Arc or Florence Nightingale, yet in doing with her might what her hands find to do, she may display the same spirit of devotion and fidelity. Some one has aptly said, "As the home so the school, as the school so the state." The strength and unity of our nation depend largely upon the character of its homes, which in turn derive their character from the influence of wives and mothers.

Man may build a grand mansion, adorn it with every luxury that wealth can purchase, fill its rooms with costly books, rare paintings and beautiful statuary; but without a woman to convert this mansion into a home, it no more deserves the name than does the lowly tent of the Bedouin. When we think of woman's supremacy in this respect, does it not seem strange that this unalienable right is sometimes so ignored? That the claims of the fashionable world should have more attraction for her than her own home? That home interest should be neglected in her chase after visionary rights, when the rights she has are not enjoyed.

As an offset to this class, we have the true home builders, to which every womanly woman belongs. Those to whom home signifies something more than "four bare walls;" those who make home the center of attraction for their loved ones, and are ever ready to speak a cheering word to erring brothers and sisters, and throw around them the purity of home life. It is from such a class, that we shall find the true foremothers of the sober and virtuous generation to come. Their influence beginning in the do[illegible] the sea, grow broader and broader till every nation is encircled in its grasp, and till the whole world becomes homelike.

"Impediments to the rear" was the cry of Cæsar when he referred to the women and children of his army. This cry has echoed and re-echoed down through the ages, but every reflection [illegible] scarcely be heard. Many impediments which have kept woman to the rear, having been removed, she has made a forward march, and now the battle cry is, "Let us go to the front."

The achievements of Caroline Herschel in astronomy, Rosa Bonheur in art, Mary Somerville in mathematics, George Eliott in fiction, and Mrs. Browning in poetry, fully prove, that by earnest and persistent effort, patience, and courage, woman can be successful in those departments once considered inaccessible to her. When we think of woman adorning the pulpit, the press, ranking high in jurisprudence, medicine, and literature, when we think of the great work effected by the many, reformatory and charitable societies organized and led by the women of our own and other lands, we can no longer ask the servile question, "What can woman do?" We can no longer question her ability, or her proper sphere. What she can not do, remains to be seen and her sphere to be measured.

"They talk about a woman's sphere,
As though it had a limit;
There's not a place in earth or Heaven,
There's not a task to be assigned,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whisper—yes or no:
There's not a life, or death, or birth
That has a feather's weight of worth,
Without a woman in it."

The Siege of Troy.

BY CHAS. E. TAYLOR.

The City of Troy, also called Ilium, according to the Homeric Poem, was situated in north western part of Asia Minor, at the foot of Mount Ida. The city, the existence of which is attested only by the traditions of the Trojan war, was founded about the seventh century, B. C. At the beginning of the Trojan war, Troy was ruled by Priam, assisted by his two sons, Paris and Hector, and according to the legend Paris brought on the war by the abduction of Helen, wife of King of Sparta who is made his wife. Homer describes Helen as one of the most celebrated women of the Heroic period, both for beauty and the stupendous events of which she was the occasion. The war for the possession of Helen continued nine years. They took after all her city's hundred sons, and Helen was restored to her husband, the King of Sparta. Such is Homer's legendary history of Troy, whose existence is mentioned and whose truth is attested only in connection with the Trojan war.

The facts stated suggest a consideration of the various sources from which the story of the Trojan war is compiled. The Homeric poems appear to most readers as the oldest, the most influential, and to some the ultimate authority from which we can draw information on the subject. It is not an overstatement to say that no poetic productions of the human mind have so approached the importance of the Homer Epics, for no other secular writings have exerted such a stupendous influence over the intellectual progress of the race.

Homer and the two works attributed to him, the Iliad and Odyssey, are then the center from whence the whole of this legend springs, so far as our direct knowledge extends. It is therefore of moment to inquire whether this great poet, whose character looms up vast and mysterious through the haze of traditionary past. The subject has assumed a certain precision, and out of a vast amount of discussion several disputed points have been evolved, scarcely less important than the question regarding the north pole. Critics, poets, historians, archæologists, ethnologists and almost all other men of scholarly attainments are divided on the following question: Was there such a man as Homer? If so, did he write both the Iliad and the Odyssey? Did the Homeric Troy ever exist? Was there such a war as the Trojan War? Where is site of Troy? Are the discoveries of Dr. Schliemann to be accepted as the authentic remains of the original Troy? These inquiries have been discussed from generation to generation with inexhaustible enthusiasm, and too often with acrimonious heat, as if each writer based his argument upon incontrovertible facts. Whereas there never was a question more speculative and hypothetical and demanding greater toleration of opinion and moderation of argument. Internal evidence regarding the authenticity of an anonymous book or work of art, by an unknown artist, can be made to suit as many opinions as the constitution of the United States or the Epistle of St. Paul. All this goes to prove that the Homeric question should be approached with becoming modesty, and with the avoidance of positive assertion.

In recent times there have been two prominent claimants to the honor of representing the site of Troy. Hissarlik and Bournabashi are the two sites prominently urged in the discussion. The former has, as supposed, the exact situation of ancient Troy, as its surroundings correspond to that given in the Iliad.

But a crisis in the discussion arrived in 1870, when Dr. Schliemann entered the Troad, prepared to attack the soil at all disputed points, and wrest from the womb of the earth the secrets of ages. Although giving his preference from the outset to Hissarlik, Dr. Schliemann with laudible spirit of fairness, directed his attention first of all to the other cities. Nothing noteworthy was found; but returning to Hissarlik, Dr. Schliemann revealed the stratified remains of seven distinct cities. Of these he considers the third from the bottom to be the "Holy Ilium" of the Iliad. Among other highly important antiquities discovered in this stratum are a massive square tower of masonry, a building which might have been the palace of the King. Besides there are enormous wine jars, spearheads of copper, and most important of all, numerous and [illegible] of massive [illegible] to the number of thousands. The vestigations of Dr. Schliemann [illegible] destroyed the theories of those who sought a site of Troy elsewhere than at Hissarlik, and have [illegible] who consider the Trojan legend have no basis in fact; while they are enormously strengthened the faith of those who believe that some sometime in the remote past there was a contest or war of [illegible] gave rise to a ballad literature [illegible] resulted in the great epic of [illegible]

Speak the word garret [illegible] what a different influence [illegible] upon the many minds.

To some it will suggest a [illegible] bled room full of various [illegible] which have been accumulating [illegible] years, or to another a place of [illegible] inhabited by spiders and mice, [illegible] another will think of it as the haunt [illegible] tion of writers. Unto such an [illegible] home as this I hope you will [illegible] with me. We find an infinitude [illegible] such places, and as we enter [illegible] them as the resort of greatness [illegible] working about to examine the [illegible] our eyes meet numerous [illegible] stray breeze to pour in and cool the [illegible] writer's burning imagination. In such a place as this, nearly one hundred and fifty years ago, we might have found poor Dr. Johnson [illegible] of poor parents and receiving a limited education, he began his struggle in life early.

When 25 he married and removed to London, where he tried to support himself by literary work, but [illegible] not have chosen a rougher path. England was not then antic[illegible] literary fame. Johnson is described to us as large and robust with an unpolished manner, blinking with one eye and generally dressed in a brown. He was a poor conversalist while at table, his looks seem to be riveted to his plate. His mindedness was his one great fault, this being the cause of many of his stories about him. We can imagine the amount of suffering he withstood; many nights found him wandering in the streets, being poor to afford a bed. Many thought him insane, he having such queer ways, but those to whom was a true friend knew better for he was a true friend. Examining his works, his essays, dictionary, Rasselas, or any others, we find the same style that which seems so pedantic to us person, solemn and [illegible] He was once told that if he wished to make little fishes talk they should talk like whales. This was from his great friend Oliver Goldsmith, whom Johnson said he was a [illegible] that flowered late, which may be accounted for by his few advantages when young. His youth corresponds to that of Johnson in some respects but is perhaps more varied, as he was somewhat wild in his says. He was Irish and had the good nature of an Irishman, was about five feet plain looking and fair, but an animated countenance and always dressed in the extreme. Besides being a writer he was a poet was never very successful in life and was somewhat discouraged by being told by a friend that he attempted to kill to let it out [illegible] his writing beggars [illegible] first productions being 5 shilling street ballads, but they gradually rose to the high standard of the present day. Goldsmith was generous to a fault. Many times the few shillings that he had went to some poor person [illegible] his coat to another, and rushing to his garret quill and thrust it into the hands of some shivering vagrant. Johnson was his never failing friend and in one instance rescued him from the few charms of his landlady, who demanded her money or Goldsmith's immediate marriage. However, at this critical moment, the Vicar of Wakefield was produced and sold for ten pounds, which cancelled his debt. He was a great wanderer, making a pedestrian tour through [illegible] which resulted in the writing of his famous poem, The Traveller, after this appeared the now lines of his Deserted Village. His other works are several [illegible] and the comedy, The Good Natured Man. His last triumph was She Stoops to Conquer. His style is clear and novel; his thoughts and feelings seeming to be interwoven in his productions. In his Deserted Village, he has described Sweet Auburn to us as his native place, and the Vicar of Wakefield, we have in the character of Dr. Primrose, his father. Not intimately associated with Goldsmith, and as a writer a different writer, we may place Robert Burns, the peasant boy, whom love made a poet. The first sixteen years are not to relate, they being filled with toil and her companion toil, was entirely out of place. The youth, much of his time at the plow being spent in unlawfully trying to shape into verse the thoughts that burned in his soul. In this manner he spent his youth, finally determined to go to Edinburgh but in order to do so he must publish a book of poems to raise money. This was but the beginning of his success. The clouds passed and he abandoned his project, went to the capitol where he was welcomed by the literary world of best society. He had now reached what he desired, distinction, but [illegible] ed to think that he deserved it, with his great bulky figure he began an entrance anywhere, however over estimated his greatness and abandoning his [illegible] and original style, attempted [illegible] tuting deeper, and in so doing [illegible] the contempt of many. Some of his prettiest poems are from his heart, had a tender, affectionate heart [illegible] can see from his writings. His success however lasted only for a [illegible] when the vices which seemed to accompany success, overcame him [illegible] sunk into obscurity, dying at the age of 37.

Such a sketch as this would be incomplete without at least one [illegible] can being mentioned, but the [illegible] America being entirely different [illegible] are none that can be called [illegible] writers; but closely connected [illegible] under many of the same circumstances we may mention Edgar A. Poe [illegible] tle is actually known of his life [illegible]

Locks and Keys

BY ELLEN FISHER

The origin of these articles or instruments of handicraft may be traced back to the ancient Greek and Roman. In the days of its infancy the lock was made of structure and simple in form; but before many years the hand and brain of the Egyptian rendered its mysteries more complicated, more like the intricate lock of our modern times. At the present day, they are innumerable in variety, and varied in form and complication from the simple padlock to the iron bolts and bars which fasten prison doors and secure the vaults of money changers.

There is also in connection with these locks, the instruments by means which power is applied to work them, without which the lock would be of no use whatever. A lock without a key is like a boat on a roaring, babbling stream, in which is a man with a strong pair of arms, but no oars.

We will not attempt to describe further the numerous and varied forms these instruments or how the ingenuity of man has been exercised to construct the lock of such sufficient length and intricacy as to resist all efforts and baffle the skill of any those depraved natures prompt them to put unlawful hands upon that which is not rightfully theirs. It ought to be considered as a sad comment, that the covetousness of men makes these articles necessary for the safety of person and protection of property. There are other things, which though not usually known as locks, compare well with them, and to which the name may rightfully be applied. Why may we not consider anything that is valuable and important in a measure locked up out of our reach? And is it not our duty and privilege as far as possible to find the keys that fit into and turn these various locks?

Some things in this world are involved in deep mystery; such may be regarded as secreted by combination locks, while others are held bound by very simple ones.

Labor, time, and perseverance, are necessary in all cases to obtain these valuables, otherwise we should not prize them as we ought. We value things of little in proportion to the amount of labor necessary to obtain them. All the phenomena of different branches of art and science, which have been explained, were sometime locked up in mystery, and to certain men in each age of the world have been given the keys to unlock some of these mysteries; yet there are very many which are still unlocked. Each new discovery made to the world may be considered as the unlocking of a door hitherto closed. Those revealings of hidden treasures will go on until the end of time, and there will be many locks whose keys have not been placed in the hands of

But what are some of the keys which fill these various locks and disclose to us so many secrets and wonders. In many cases perseverance proves to be the key. Men notice the movements of certain bodies, and the effect they have upon each other and surrounding objects, but it is only by storing efforts for years perhaps, that discovers the laws by which they are governed. In the discovery of the Laws of Gravitation by Sir Isaac Newton, it was a slight and common place event, that first attracted his attention, and he knew there must be a cause for that event, but the world would never have been any the wiser for his knowing the fact that there was a cause, if he had not forcibly applied himself to discover what the cause might be. Perseverance was the key which at last turned the lock, and the revelation was such as to amply reward him for all his toil and study. Many times it is not one alone who unlocks these mysteries. It may be given into the hands of some to turn the key and discover; but others by their diligence and study have previously found the key and fitted it to the lock.

Our earth may be considered as a great store house in which are locked up countless treasures whose discoveries have marked different eras of the history of the world. But the nineteenth century has unfolded more of the treasures of the earth than all the past centuries combined, which gives evidence to the fact that the world has gained great progress in civilization. Where less than four hundred years ago the Red Man roamed unconscious of these treasures, mines of gold, iron, copper, and silver, yield inexhaustible wealth to enrich and bless mankind. Military and gloomy forests have given place to cultivated farms and populous cities. With this progress of civilization many benefits have been unlocked and granted to mankind. Improvement has stretched her magic wand over everything in modern life, and comforts and luxuries that were unknown a few centuries ago have been introduced into the world's social circle.

Let us glance for a moment at a few of these inventions and improvements, the unlocking of whose doors made the world ring with the fame of the inventors. Printing has been widely extended, learning encouraged, and education placed within reach of the masses instead of a few. Franklin's powerful hand chained the lightning and made it the servant of man. The world renowned Morse made it the messenger, rapid and obedient, in the transmission of thought over the telegraph wires, by carrying out the grand idea laid down in the Atlantic cable, by which two vast continents were connected, and now intelligence, with the rapidity of the news that cause anxious hearts ...

...s regular daily back and forth ...
quiets tumults, and nourishes good ... will in the breasts of men. Watt's genius originated the steam engine, and now traveling is rendered easy and delightful. Lightning rods cause man to laugh at the fear of old and much dreaded terror of the sky; and many other such inventions conspire to throw a glorious light on this period, renowned among all men for its wonderful discoveries.

Many of the different phases of nature are also often compared to locks. It is a cause of rejoicing to see the warm sunlight gradually freeing the earth from the embrace of a long and severe winter, and revealing the mysterious beauties of spring. Under its influence the tiny flower is quickly awakened and comes forth to life again. And so the blessed Son of righteousness has unlocked the grave, rolled the stone from the door of the sepulchre, and bids mortal man, not only look into, but through and beyond it, and by faith lay hold on the fruitions of immortality. Yet the mysteries are not all solved. All through life we are enshrouded by them, and often have occasion to say that to ourselves we are the greatest mystery. It remains for death to turn the last key, unlock the last mystery, and bring a full realization of what here we can only hope for.

Grecian Games.

BY ARTHUR HALL.

A nut can may be studied from many different standpoints. Instead of being considered a task, it should be regarded as an instructive pleasure, and by steady perseverance much information has been gained about nations long since passed away. From the structure of the mounds with the skeletons and implements contained in them, we have been able to form some notion of the character and civilization of the Mound Builders who inhabited America and became extinct long before Europeans discovered the country; by the aid of the famous Rosetta Stone, much has been discovered about the early Egyptians. Let us look at the Grecian nation through its national festivals known as the Grecian games.

The games were four in number:—The Olympian, Pythian, Isthmian, and Nemean.

The origin of the Olympian games is involved in obscurity. Some trace them to a date far earlier than that of the siege of Troy. Nothing, however, can be positively stated in regard to the time. The name was taken from the place of their celebration—the plain of Olympia in the territory of Elia, and probably they were held in honor of the Olympian god Jupiter. Owing to some cause, their celebration was interrupted for a time, but in the year 776 B. C. they were revived by the king, Ipnitus, and the Spartan law giver, Lycurgus, in order to appease the wrath of Jupiter and stay a pestilence then devastating the land. Later, when the Greeks began to use the Olympian contest as a chronological era, this year, 776, was regarded as the first Olympian. The games continued to maintain their celebrity for many centuries, and it was not until 394 A. D. that they were finally abolished by Theodosius. Being celebrated every four years, the interval between was called an Olympiad. At first the games were limited in their celebration to one day and consisted of contests of running in the stadium or race course, about six hundred feet long. In those contests described by Homer, valuable prizes were given.

During a lapse of time the character of the games was materially changed. The time was extended to five days, and the contests included trials of strength and skill, such as wrestling, boxing, horse and chariot racing. The latter with four full-grown horses became one of the most popular contests. In no case was there a combat with any kind of a weapon.

Delegates were sent from each of the Grecian states, and visitors came from all parts of the kingdom and even from foreign countries. During the time of the celebration all hostilities ceased and any invasion of Elia was regarded as the basest of sacrilege. All who could prove their Grecian blood were allowed to enter the lists and at the games all were on an equal footing. The horse and chariot races were necessarily confined to the wealthy, but rich and poor alike could contend in the gymnastic exercises, those wishing to engage being obliged to undergo a special training for ten months previous to the celebration.

During later times, the only prize given was a garland of wild olive; but this was not the only honor which the victor received, for musicians sang his praises, poets gave forth his glory, and on his return home, bonfires were built, processions marched through the streets, and all were loud in their praise of one who had eternally glorified their city.

In the sixth century, the three other festivals of the Pythian, Isthmian, and Nemean games became open to the whole Grecian nation. The Pythian games were celebrated every third Olympic year in honor of Apollo and soon attained great popularity. The Isthmian and Nemean games were celebrated every two years. The Nemean in honor of the Nemean Jove, and the Isthmian by the Corinthians on their isthmus in honor of Neptune. These festivals were so similar to those of the Olympian contests that the description given of those will answer for all. We will hasten, therefore, to the effects of the games upon the nation

In the first place, the festivals served as a bond of union by bringing together Greeks from all the provinces on an equal footing. The games were so arranged that one occurred every year. Thus the people were annually assembled in a place where the fact that they were of one great family and had common interests was placed prominently before them.

Again, the festivals were in many respects similar to our modern fairs. Booths were erected from which poets declaimed their productions, historians made public the works of their pens, and inventors showed their skill and ingenuity in manufacture.

The Grecian games are long since gone and nearly forgotten, but can we say there are no similar games now? No, indeed, for the whole universe is one vast stadium in which games are constantly occurring. It is not one nation, one state, one family that is doing it all—it is the whole world and each has his own part to play.

Our life at the Tecumseh High School has been one Olympian. For four years we have been preparing to do our part in the Olympian games of

...been fast and at others extremely slow, but through the whole our advance has been quickened by words of encouragement from the citizens of Tecumseh. Our Judges have been the members of the school board, and though we have thought their rules sometimes very stringent, I doubt not but in time we shall see where they were in the right and we were in the wrong. Do not think we take the credit of our training, for had we not had the guidance of our teachers, I fear our lives would have been eight sad mistakes. Each day they have sought to guide and direct us into the ways we ought to follow. I fancy as I look back that I have often seen looks of despair upon their faces as they watched our progress.

Classmates, we feel that our school life is nearly over. Some of us may pursue our studies farther, but, doubtless, a few of us have entered the school room as pupils for the last time. Soon we must take our places in the world's vast school room. If we succeed we will often have to conquer "Troy," but if we "neglect not the gift within us" and press on through the Alps we may find the "key to the lock" which shuts out sunny Italy from our view. In our "Garret Rambles" we may find forgotten likenesses of our "Foremothers," and if we do I trust that after wiping away the dust of years we may find a likeness of the school of our youth.

If we long for leisure and enjoyment let us remember that Life should be full of earnest work,

Our hearts undashed by fortune's frown,
Let perseverance conquer fate
And merit seize the victor's crown.
The battle is not to the strong,
The race is not to the fleet
And he who seeks to pluck the stars
Will lose the Jewels at his feet.

Presentation of the Diplomas.

BY PRESIDENT A. W. MILLS.

Mr. Mills' remarks, in presenting the diplomas, were extempore. His address was given under two heads—advice to the patrons and residents of the district, and commendatory words to the class. He spoke substantially as follows.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: If there is one thing for which the residents of our fair village have reason to be proud; if there is one thing that causes people to settle in our town bringing capital with which to increase trade and bearing their share of the tax burdens; if there is one thing that builds up society and gives it a healthy moral tone, it is our public school. And if we would continue its usefulness, we must continue the liberal support for which the people of this district are justly noted. But fathers and mothers of Tecumseh, if there is one thing for which you will be held responsible and justly blamed by your children when they arrive at maturity and fully realize their irrepairable loss, it will be that you allowed them, for trivial reasons, to leave school and fail to complete the prescribed course of study. Among the prominent educators of our state, Tecumseh School ranks among the best, and we have abundant proof that their estimate is a correct one. Of the large number of graduates that have gone from our school to the University of Mich. and other noted institutions of learning, almost without an exception they have passed the rigid examinations and been admitted without condition. As a proof that our school is appreciated outside our district and increasing in favor, the record shows, that, while our foreign tuition fund has been large for years, much larger in fact than that of any other school in our county, it was never so large as during the school year just closed. Of this class of eight who graduate to-night, of whom we all have good reason to be proud, four of them reside outside our school district limits. One year ago the class numbered fourteen. Where are the other six? Would it not have been much better for each of them, if they had remained with their class, and will it not be to them a matter of life long regret that they did not?

His remarks to the class were brief. He endeavored to impress upon them the importance of concentration or oneness of aim. The day of universal scholarship is past. They should study themselves and decide for what specialty they were best adapted, both physically and mentally, and then bend their entire energies in that direction. With scarcely an exception, the men who have achieved great renown are those who selected some specialty, and devoted their life to that work. He expressed the belief that the class now graduating would be an honor to their friends, to society and to their Alma Mater.

Several of the Adrian wheelmen took a ride to Ann Arbor last Sunday. They passed through Tecumseh at an early hour, and breakfasted at the Lilley House.

Last Tuesday afternoon, our popular jeweler, Thomas Adamson, was united in marriage with Nellie Heesen, daughter of Geo. Heesen, Esq., at Mr. Heesen's family residence. The affair was strictly private, only the near relatives and friends of the contracting parties being present. The happy pair took the evening train on the C. J. & M. road for Petoskey for a few days trip, expecting to return the first of next week. Both parties are well known and highly esteemed in this community, and they will enter the matrimonial relation, accompanied by the congratulations and good wishes of a large circle of friends. The HERALD adds its "good word" to the many others they have received, and wishes them a happy and prosperous life. They will make their permanent home in Tecumseh.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 30 1887.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Come to Tecumseh to celebrate the Fourth.

Mrs. J. B. Whelan of Detroit, is in town.

The farmers are improving this beautiful weather getting in their hay.

There will be a big crowd and a big time generally in this neck of woods on the Fourth of July.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Coller started for Reed City last Saturday, where they will make a two weeks visit.

Miss Marion Chase of Kalamazoo was in town to attend the commencement exercises last Thursday.

C. K. Spafford attended the Reunion of the old 4th Mich Infantry which was held last week at Ann Arbor. The boys had a splended time.

The Rev. Dr. Scott of Hope College, will preach in the Reformed church of Macon as follows Sunday July. 3d. Macon at 11. A. M. South Macon at 3. P. M. Despelder church at 7½ P. M.

In the Magazine of American History for July, General Arthur F. Devereaux will publish a thrilling account of "Pickett's Charge at Gettysburg," in which fierce battle he was a participant.

A new department will be introduced into the Magazine of American History with the July issue, to be called "Historic and Social Jottings," which promises to be a feature of more than ordinary interest.

Our report of the High School Commencement consumes so much of our space this week that we are obliged to defer the Alumni Reunion until next week, when our Alumni friends will be properly attended to.

The Mackinaw Line will sell excursion tickets for the 4th. at one fare for the round trip, good between all stations; tickets will be good going July 2d. & 4th. and will be honored for return passage July 4th. & 5th.

Mrs. Spaulding has two plants of the night blooming Cereus, both of which will be in bloom next Saturday evening. Mrs. Spaulding says the latch string will be out to all who may wish to call, that evening.

J. S. Strong returned from his western trip on Tuesday. He visited Omaha Cheyenne and Denver, spending most of his time at the latter place. He was absent from home about seven weeks and enjoyed his trip very much.

LaVern Wheeler's portrait work recently exhibited here has created quite an interest in his productions. He is prepared to furnish all styles of portraits, from life or from copies. One advantage in having Mr. Wheeler do such work, instead of sending to copying houses, is that customers have the privilege of seeing the work during its progress and suggesting changes.

The third of Dr. Ely's second series of "Social Studies" in the July Harper's deals with "The Future of Corporations." The professor argues with great force that the ultimate solution of the labor problems now agitating the world will be achieved in the transformation of corporations into co-operations.

Miss Mary A. Shepard, of this place, who has had charge of the grammar department of our Union School for more than a year, has accepted a position as teacher in the third ward school at Coldwater, for the next year, at a salary of $340.—Burr Oak Acorn.

Mary Shepard, lived at Tecumseh for about three years and Ernest was a graduate of our High School, class of '84.

Can the red man be civilized? An affirmative answer to this question seems to be given in an article by Z. L. White, which will be published in the July number of The American Magazine. A tribe of brutal savages, the worst Indians on the Pacific Coast, has been transformed according to this account, into an orderly, industrious and thrifty community.

W. S. Brown and Miss. Kilts went to Dodge City yesterday. They went for the purpose of well it is so we wish them many years of happiness.—Argus June 9th.

From the above it will be seen that this happy couple did not get very far ahead of us, though they played their cards pretty fine. They were married at Dodge City June the 8th at the Great Western Hotel.

The above was taken from the Wilburn Argus and refers to Willitt S. Brown, a former resident of Tecumseh

Mr. E. L. Shepard, of Burr Oak, our efficient correspondent, appeared before the circuit court at Centerville, Wednesday, for his examination for admission to practice. Judge Peale appointed Messrs Carpenter and Clark of Sturgis, and Saddler and Stewart, of Centreville, as a committee, and after putting the applicant through a severe and rigid examination, found him duly qualified. In fact his examination was thoroughly creditable in every respect, and it is only simple justice to note that he had been reading much less time than is usually devoted by students, which is another element to his credit.—Sturgis Journal.

Repairs for gra'n cradles at Richart's wagon shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Marvin, of Adrian, were in town Monday.

The semi-centennial of the University is being discussed this week.

Miss Mary Hosmer, of Fairport, Ill, has been visiting at S. P. Hosmer's the past week.

Miss A. Finney started for Cleveland, O., last Saturday, where she will spend the summer.

The ladies of St. Peter's church will serve refreshments on the 4th in the Spark's store.

Frank Hall and Dyster Dewey, both came home from Lansing to attend the alumni reunion, Friday.

After this week, Asa Howe will run his Sand Lake stage three times a week, on Tuesday; Thursday and Saturday.

"The Little German Band" play at the Opera House in Tecumseh the 4th of July, afternoon and evening. Dance 10cts.

The Tecumseh Celery Company are pushing business; they have eighteen hands on their plantation now.

Remember the dance at the opera house on the 4th. First-class music in attendance. Engage your best girl and enjoy an old fashioned time.

The Indian Camp is well patronized, each evening. The entertainments are free to the crowd, and the Indian medicines are sold for cash.

C. K. Spafford has started an ice cream room over the Hewitt store, next to Jones' bakery. "Uncle Charlie" makes tip-top cream, and you should give him a call.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Blackmar, of Cambridge, were the guests of S. P. Hosmer and family, last Sunday. Mrs. Blackmar came down to attend commencement exercises last Thursday.

C. F. Patterson, the popular young landlord of the Lilley House, will take a few days' vacation this week. He started yesterday on a trip to Buffalo, Niagara Falls and other eastern cities.

A. W. Slayton, of Tecumseh, is the basswood lumber king of Michigan. Last winter he had contracts with 46 saw mills to saw out basswood lumber. He goes as far north as Mackinac and south nearly to Toledo.

The M. E. church will be a good place to rest on the 4th. The ladies of the society will furnish warm meals, lunch, lemonade and ice cream. Served on the lawn near the church. Proceeds go the organ fund.

The interest in the tent services increases as the weather gets warmer. A very intelligent audience gathers nightly to hear the discourses on Prophecy, the near coming of Christ, and kindred topics. The meetings will continue over Sunday evening, and longer if the interest demands.

The gift of scientific books to the University, made three years ago recently, was made by Jay C. Hagerman, of Colorado Springs, the name of the donor having been made public this week. Mr. Hagerman is a son-in-law of Wm. H. Osborn, of this village. The gift is valued at $4,500.

Teachers desiring to prepare themselves for their work more thoroughly will be interested in the summer session of the Normal school at Adrian college opening July 18th, and continuing five weeks. Board, room rent, and tuition for the entire session only $17.50. For further particulars apply to Pres. D. S. Stephens, Adrian, Mich.

LaVern Wheeler took a group view of the pupils of the West Branch school last week, which is an elegant juvenile group. The youngsters are ranged on the side of the building, some standing, and some seated on the lawn. There are over one hundred in the group, and every face is perfect.

Monday, June 27, a happy gathering of little girls met at the home of Miss Bertha Wooden to celebrate her 8th birthday. Many nice presents were received by her, showing the regard in which she was held by her playmates, and many and varied were the exercises; such as reading, declamation and singing, until 5 o'clock, when the table was spread with delicacies on the lawn.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will furnish refreshments at reasonable rates on the 4th of July, in the store lately occupied by N. M. Sutton & Co. Contributions of anything that can be used on such an occasion are solicited, both from town and country, all such to be brought to the rooms at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Those who desire a place to rest at any time through the day, are cordially invited to give us a call.

There will be a meeting of the several committees, and citizens of Tecumseh, this, Thursday, evening, for the purpose of arranging the details for the celebration on Monday next. It is very important that all the several committees should be represented, and a full attendance is desired. In order to make the celebration a success every one must do their duty, and not leave the business assigned them for some one else to do.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at C. A. Wright & Co's Drug Store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. This is the thing everybody is talking about, this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five percent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick head-ache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

DRAMA IN WINNIPEG

A BARN STORMING COMPANY'S EXPERIENCE IN MANITOBA.

An Audience of Indians, Trappers and Traders—Playing to Enormous Houses. A Primitive Theatre—Two Performances in One Night—Receipts.

Charles Arnold, who is now a star actor in England, tells of his visit to Manitoba ... "We ... a first class, ... company ... had at that time been there. Accordingly a little party, numbering sixteen members of the stock company from Montreal, journeyed 2,000 miles to Winnipeg, which was then a little village. This was in '79 or '80. There were no public lights, pavements or roads in the city, which consisted of one street only. Winnipeg was inhabited by Indians, half breeds and a few English settlers. We opened in the Market hall, immediately over the jail, and our performances were enlivened by the shrieks of the Indians and half breed women, who had taken too much fire-water.

"I was very much disgusted with the 'noble red man'—he is nothing but a beggar, after all. The ideal Indian that Fenimore Cooper refers to is simply knocked on the head. I found one intelligent Indian, a nephew of Sitting Bull, who had been educated at a college in Minneapolis. I found he had a decided taste for the drama, and from our repertoire of twenty pieces he selected Gilbert's 'Engaged' and 'Pygmalion and Galatea' as his favorite plays. Except for the novelty of the life, there was little amusement for us in Winnipeg. The hotels were so crowded that we had to live in tents. We slept on the prairie, and for amusement we borrowed a few laths, obtained some fish hooks, and went along the banks of the brooks spearing frogs. This was great fun, as we speared three or four dozen of these edible reptiles in an hour. A most delicious supper was obtained from their legs, which were dipped in egg batter, rolled in biscuit paste and fried in boiling fat.

"We played to enormous houses in Winnipeg. Indians and half breeds made up our audiences, and every one seemed flush of money. Many carried rolls of bills about with them. There were no coppers used, and a half dime was the lowest coin. While we were in Winnipeg the mayor of Emerson, a small town of 800 inhabitants, came up and said they had never had a dramatic performance, and insisted upon our visiting that place. He said there was not much in the way of a theatre, but that they had an old barn, a warehouse full of agricultural implements, soap boxes, brandy and champagne cases and by clearing those out he would rig up a first class auditorium. Having two days to spare we decided to visit Emerson, and upon entering the place we were received by the inhabitants with a great ovation. A committee of ten had been appointed to clear out the building, which was nothing but a barn, with windows on the ground floor. A hole was cut in the building for purposes of exit, and another exit was constructed from the platform on to the prairie, where tents had been rigged up for the company. There was no house for a mile around, and we had to dress in the tents.

"At night there was a big house, every one coming to town on horseback. It seemed like a big horse fair, as the animals were picketed in the hedges around the building, and now and again we were startled by a shrill neigh from their direction. The committee of ten citizens, headed by the mayor, had done their work well, and while the old warehouse did not present a very inviting appearance it served a purpose. The stalls, or back seats, consisted of soap and candle boxes, brandy and champagne cases placed in rows in front of the stage (no extra charge for champagne cases). I may add that the cases were not empty. Each seat represented a dozen or two of brandy or champagne. The committee saw that no liberties were taken with the seats. We performed Lester Wallack's military drama, "Rosedale," which seemed to please our audience greatly. The lady members of our company had a lively time of it all through the performance, as the troopers insisted on making their presence felt in a most unmistakable manner. It was laughable to see the gentle slaps the 'braves' gave during the more serious portions of the play to rid themselves of the stinging pests.

"On the second night of our stay we performed 'The Shaughraun,' with all the effects, revolving tower, etc. At the conclusion of the second act the committee waited on me and requested that we prolong our visit another night. This could not be done, as we had engagements to meet elsewhere, but it occurred to me that we could give another performance that night. We could finish playing 'The Shaughraun' at 10:45 o'clock, and by dismissing the audience for fifteen minutes start again with another play at 11 o'clock. I announced this to the audience and was received with cheers and cries of 'Play all night!' Well, we finished 'The Shaughraun,' and the male portion of the audience retired to the prairie, while I collected the admission fee for the second performance from the ladies, who remained seated, the gentlemen then returned, paying at the door.

"At 11:15 we commenced the second programme, which consisted of a burlesque on Canadian politics, entitled 'H. M. S. Parliament,' written to 'Pinafore' music. Each character was made up to represent a prominent Canadian statesman. Our orchestra was a small church organ, played by our conductor. That was my first experience of playing twice in one night, and there was only twelve shillings difference between the two houses. The people paid two shillings to look in the windows to see the performance. Some 50 cowed and others stole ladders so that they might peep through the upper windows, as the house would only hold 400 or 500 people."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Sleeping Alone.

It is very much healthier to sleep alone. The unhealthfulness of two persons occupying the same bed very much depends on the physical condition of either or both. If one is diseased, injury to the other is sure to result. The practice is unhealthful because the exhalations from the body of one come in contact with and are absorbed by the skin of the other, and because each one must, of necessity, breathe some of the air which has been breathed by the other, and consequently rendered impure.—Health of Health.

For the "Earthquake Committee."

The City Council of Charleston, S. C., has presented to the "earthquake committee," a handsome bronze plaque bearing the seal of the city and the palmetto wreath of the state as a token of the city's appreciation of their services during the earthquake excitement.

THE ART OF COURTSHIP.

How to Manage a Beau Delicate and Skillful Methods.

A writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, who recently discovered a fugitive [illegible] published a number of a [illegible] entitled "Courtship Made Easy," gives the world an interesting [illegible] on the subject. The work purports to have been written by a man who [illegible] a widower and contains [illegible] advice given by ladies [illegible] The trouble [illegible] is how to trace it for instance that [illegible] and when, and when, [illegible] and gives them hints [illegible] managing a beau so [illegible] make him propose marriage and the [illegible] and skillful methods required to [illegible] As to the first he says: [illegible] There is not the [illegible] in the demand of a parent as to the [illegible] of a suitor. Some young ladies [illegible] positive to make such an appeal, [illegible] would recommend the following [illegible] When your lover makes [illegible] visits turn your conversation to the subject of marriage as often as possible—gossip about your newly married friends and those who are supposed to be engaged. If you know [illegible] positive engagement that exists, state that fact, and if the couple so engaged have had but a brief courtship commend their promptness. If the lover is inclined to make a proposal, and is not exceedingly stupid he will take hints which you can easily give in the conversations. Another plan is to make him jealous by pretending to receive the attentions of some other gentleman of your acquaintance. But this is more dangerous. There is no impropriety in a lady's taking any reasonable measures to induce her lover to make his proposal when he is rather backward, slow or bashful.

These methods may be applied at the proper time to "old bachelors" as well as young men. The bachelors are not easily caught. They are naturally distrustful of women and cautious regarding their actions. They are afraid to propose marriage and will shy off the moment they suspect any design on the part of the lady. [illegible] on their buttons or hence their handkerchiefs. There are only two ways of trapping them—one is by circumventing them from people the question, or else by popping the question yourself. If you are a female and want the old bach., then, again, is what you must do to induce him to propose.

You should take occasion to paint the delights of a home in glowing colors. Speak of your married friends who have children and other hopes are like a little [illegible] of this sort of thing. You should be the little cherub—if [illegible] particularly [illegible] would be [illegible] married friends for [illegible] have had been blessed with children. If you believe [illegible] After a proper duration of your lecture you may open the matrimonial question. Some [illegible] make it, repeat some earnest portion of [illegible] happy home, and state that it has been your ambition to be one of the number [illegible] such a partner that you have [illegible] and your acquaintance spoke highly of the [illegible] realized the fact that a man lived on earth who could make a home happy, etc.

These were the arts and blandishments of thirty years ago. They are not in existence now, and it is doubtful if the simplest maidens of the earth believe them. They were simply simple and innocent arts, just like the simple, honest, and natural, slow going folk for whom they were made.

FROM A PERSONAL FRIEND.

Again and again the Angel of Death is sent into our homes, yet we cannot grow accustomed to his coming; and now when the sweet June roses were in their fullest [illegible] long summer days were brilliant with sunshine and musical with the song of birds, suddenly as a thunder bolt from an unclouded sky, came the announcement, "Mrs. Albert Brewer is dead." At first we could not believe it. We [illegible] and subject to days of bitter pain, yet we thought that one so love-guarded, so surrounded by everything to make life beautiful, must remain with us a while longer. We soon found that the sorrowful news was too true. Our Heavenly Father, "whose ways are not as our ways," and who loved her with infinite tenderness, had called her suddenly from disease and suffering to dwell forever in immortal beauty in the mansion He had prepared for her. Husband and daughter, and father, each of whom she had loved with an idolatrous fondness, were powerless to keep her here! She heard not the detaining voices of beloved friends, but passing swiftly before us, she has entered into "The City" and we can only look backward with tear-dimmed eyes, recalling the beautiful and precious memories of her life. In her own home she was very lovely; the light and inspiration of those who knew her. For a fascinating and charming sweetness was her special gift. She had a delicate and cultured appreciation of the beautiful in everything, and every room gave evidence of her tastefulness in selecting such things as gave pleasure to all who were privileged to be called her friends. Yet while earth, to her, was full of beauty and she would fain have lingered amid its loveliness, we rejoice that she looked upward with a sweet and trustful faith. She was heard to say, "I will lift up my eyes to the hills whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord, which made Heaven and earth," and those who knew her best felt that Christ and the eternal world were to her blessed realities. And now we strive to think of her, not as weak and suffering, not as lying in her grave which is kissed by the summer breezes, but, as clothed in heavenly raiment and beckoned by angels to the glory that never fades. She has sought and found her treasure where moth and rust do not corrupt, and where, with feet unsandaled she walks the "Better Land." May those who loved her most tenderly have grace given them to overcome their earth born sorrow, and so to live that at last, they may dwell with her in the presence of Christ, forevermore.

Do not fail to come here on the Fourth early enough in the morning to see the parade. This will be one of the best features of the celebration.

She Broke the Engagement

because she saw that he had ceased to love her. Her beauty had faded, her former high spirit had given place to a dull lassitude. What had caused this change? Functional derangement, she was suffering from those ailments peculiar to her sex. And so, the two young lives drifted apart. How needless, how cruel! Had she taken Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription she might have been restored to health and happiness. If any lady reader of these lines is similarly afflicted let her lose no time in procuring the "Favorite Prescription." It will give her a new lease of life. COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

IN the matter of the estate of Robert Boyd, deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Judge of Probate in the County of Lenawee, Michigan, commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the office of Charles Partridge in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 13th day of August, 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days, and that six months from the 27th day of June, 1887, are allowed by the said court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated June 6th, 1887.

PETER S. MCKINNON, CHARLES BURRIDGE, Commissioners.

ESTATE OF HENRY L. LUCE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday the 28th day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Henry L. Luce, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Elvira S. Luce, a daughter of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner, the executrix in said will named, or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 25th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

School in Dist. No. 7, closed Friday. The school has been under the management of Miss Florence French of Adrian, for the past year, whose ability as a teacher is equal to any in the county. We regret to learn she will not teach there the coming year.

The glorious fourth has come and gone. Some of the village people spent the day at Dundee, and at the lakes; others went to Detroit to see the games of ball, but the mass went to Tecumseh to see, well, every thing, and had a big time.

Martin Palmer, Ada Loree and Clara Temple went to Fayette, O., last week Wednesday to attend the wedding of Miss Luella Wilson and Frank Smith. Miss Wilson taught the village school here four years ago this season. We, with her many friends, extend our congratulations.

The Cone base ball team came up to the rack Saturday, but found rather hard fodder to get down. The game was called by Umpire Geo. D. Arner. The Cone team taking the first bat, they led out finely, but soon began to kick and find fault with the Umpire, and to keep them from losing their cowhides, kicking, were allowed to have another Umpire of their own choice, Dr. R. H. Neilson; but were they doomed for a defeat, and at the close of the first half of the ninth innings the score read out loud: Cone 14, Ridgeway 28. Below is the score of the game.

AN EDITOR'S VIEWS ON DAKOTA.

One of the brightest and most forcible writers of the Michigan Press is Mr. W. E. Kidd, editor of the Ionia Sentinel. He is witty, logical, and rarely mistaken in his ideas as to what will most improve the morals of the country. Mr. Kidd has a farm in Dakota, where he takes his family to spend the summer, and from his western home he writes to a Tecumseh friend a characteristic letter from which we make an extract, thinking it will instruct and amuse our readers.

RANDALL, Dak., June 15, 1887.

FRIEND VERN: We have been in this country a little over a fortnight, arriving here Saturday, May 28th. The country is as lovely as it always is at this time of the year, a little more so in fact, for there has been an abundance of rain. Crops are looking splendidly, and you can almost see them grow—I mean I can, but if you will only listen you can hear the wheat snap and crackle as it just bursts itself. We are living in a sod shanty on our claim. The shanty is 12x16 feet, the frame of boards covered on the outside with a wall of sod 18 inches thick. The sod is cut and laid up just as you would brick. It is impervious to cold, but a trifle warm at this time of the year. I am now at work on our summer palace. It will be 12x16, Irish cottage style, "wid a lane-to on the lift side" for a cook-room for biddy. These palaces come high, but we will have them. I have already squandered $9.75 and am not more than half done. Irene and Jimmie are having grand times. They have secured a pony belonging to Mr Kern, and ride all over the province. Jim six years old goes anywhere all alone. He has been over two miles from home. We are 12 miles from a postoffice, but have a railroad station 1½ miles away. Hope to have a postoffice there during the summer.

Mr. Kidd's letters to his paper on Dakota life, are very interesting, as he is decidedly impartial, and gives all sides a showing.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN

Now for harvest. A few wheat fields are beginning to bow before the reapers.

Cherries are minus this season, and apples are falling from the trees in such numbers as to bring forebodings to the heart of every lover of "apple sass."

Mrs. Pawson visited friends in Cambridge the first of the week.

Mrs. Witherell is improving in health.

Rev. & Mrs. Winton have been visiting at Robert McCollum's.

Edith Spaulding has gone to stay with her sister, Mrs. Spencer of Raisin, for a few weeks.

Miss Myrtie Clark of Brooklyn, has been spending a few days with her friends, the Misses Taylor.

Mrs. Henry Woods of Hillsdale, is at her father's this week.

GOT THE BEST OF THE DOCTOR.

W. F. Beyer, Garretsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have, with what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessent cough when I invested my dollar in a bottle of your Papillon Catarrh Cure as a last resort. To-day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured." Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1,00.

Of 34 scholars enrolled during the term, the average daily attendence has been 23. And the following whose names appear, have not been absent during the term.

Johnie Pennefeather, Eva and Eva Ayers, Lizzie and Susie Brighton, Blanche Nichols. Feeling pleased with the record which the scholars have made during the term and thinking to encourage them, I have shown to the public their record. The last day closed with a picnic at The Sand Lake Hotel, which was enjoyed by all, as also was the steam boat ride. Our thanks are due to Mr. Wells the proprietor for so kindly entertaining us at our picnic.

FRANKLIN & CAMBRIDGE FARMER'S CLUB.

The regular meeting of the Franklin and Cambridge Farmers' club occurred at the residence of Alvinza Wheelan, at Franklin Center, Friday evening, June 24.

The members of the club were in good attendance, with a fair number of outsiders, also. The committee on program failing to report, a hasty program was gotten up, which pleased the hearers well. Frank Gray being in attendance with his violin, an instrumental piece was rendered by him. Then came a recitation by Miss Mollie Smith, which took very well. The Glee Club then favored the society with a song. Clifford Crittenden then gave a declamation in his usual interesting manner. Mrs. Frank Gray then read a very able essay. Miss Nettie Stormes consented to recite a piece, which was well appreciated. Then the exercises closed by a song from the Franklin glee club. The question of "How to obtain the best results from a wheat crop," was then discussed by E. A Wilson, D. W Love, and others. It was decided that to plow under unmown clover sod would yield the best crop, and give the most satisfactory results.

The next meeting will be held at residence of Mr. Smith German, on Friday evening, July 22, 1887. Let every one join these discussions and exercises.

A NOBLE BUTCHER.

Incidents in the Life of the Marquis de Mores.

Antoine Manca de Vallombrosa Marquis de Mores, the man who has undertaken to solve the problem of furnishing cheap meat to American consumers, comes of an old Spanish family settled in the island of Sardina. The Marquis is still a young man. He was born in Paris, on June 14, 1858. In 1876 he entered the French Military Academy of St. Cyr, and when he was graduated therefrom, in 1878, was commissioned a Second Lieutenant of the First Cuirassiers. Afterward he served with the same rank in the Tenth Hussars, and then on the staff of Gen. de Verneville. In 1881 he resigned his position as staff officer and was transferred to the Twenty-second Regiment of Dragoons, as First Lieutenant, which commission he still holds. In the same year at Cannes where his father lives in the winter, he married Miss Medora von Hoffman, a daughter of the well known banker of New York. In August, 1882, he came with his wife to this country on a pleasure trip, and in March, 1883, he started for the far West and soon after invested a good deal of money in a cattle ranch, and has stuck over since. "It is the funniest thing in the world," he said recently, in a conversation on the subject. "My wife married a European to live in Europe, and yet we have spent almost the whole of our married life in the wild West of America."

The Marquis encountered a not uncommon and yet exceedingly unpleasant phase of Western life almost immediately after his settlement on his newly purchased Dakota ranch. He became involved in a land dispute with some persons, who employed three desperadoes to make the country uncomfortable for the Marquis. These knights errant invaded the domain of the Marquis in the early Summer of 1883, and burned a good deal of powder, without however, doing any greater injury to his lordship than spreading terror among his dependents and entailing upon him the trouble and discomfort of a journey to Mandan the nearest county town, for the purpose of invoking the aid of a sheriff's posse. After the arrival of the sheriff's posse the desperadoes resisted arrest, and in a general fight which ensued the Marquis killed one of them and wounded another, when the third was prevailed on to surrender unconditionally.

The Marquis promptly delivered himself up to the nearest justice of the peace and was discharged after a hearing. During his absence from Medora, the scene of the fight, an agitation was raised against him, and on his return an effort was made to lynch him, but he locked the mob and intrenched himself so well on his property with some of his men that the cowardly dogs not deem it safe to attack him. Within a few weeks he again presented himself before a magistrate for trial and was again acquitted. After that the Marquis was let alone, and the matter rested until the Summer of 1885, when, having become prominent in the enterprise of shipping dressed beef to the East, some persons induced a lunatic to cause a charge of murder to be brought against him, and he was, at his own request, indicted and tried by a jury at Bismarck, D. T. The jury, after retiring for two or three minutes, returned a verdict of acquittal, which ended the matter.

ARMOR OF OLD WARRIORS.

How the Norman Fighters Were Dressed When They Conquered England.

The principal garment worn in battle at this time by Normans and Englishmen who were rich or powerful (for the ordinary people fought in their every-day clothes) was so shaped as to cover the arms to the elbow and the legs to the knee, says Edward J. Lowell, writing of the Norman conquest. It was made of leather or strong cloth, on which were sewed small plates or rings of metal. It was probably also wadded as an additional protection. Sometimes instead of the plates or rings, a trellis work of leather was made and strengthened with studs. The garment had a square opening in the breast to enable the wearer to struggle into it, first legs, then one arm, then the other. When he was in, a flap was buckled or buttoned across the opening. A hood, of the same material as the body garment, covered the head and shoulders. On top of the hood was placed a helmet of iron and bronze, conical or nearly so in shape, and fitting round the head like a hat. A piece of iron came down from the rim in front, protecting the nose and partially masking the face. There was sometimes a similar piece to cover the back of the head and the napped the neck. These helmets must have been both heavy and uncomfortable, as the entire weight rested on the head and a perfect fit must have been difficult to obtain. William and some of his greatest nobles wore hose protected by plates or rings like their coats, but most men noble and simple relied in battle on an elaborate arrangement of straps reaching from the knee to the ankle and recalling that worn to-day by the peasants of the Roman Campagna. On their left arms the warriors carried almond-shaped shields three or four feet long. For these the Kings of Sicily sometimes substituted round or oval shields. The shield was probably made of wood covered with leather, and having a border of metal and a projection or boss of metal in the widest part. The stud which hold the straps by which the shield was carried also appeared on the outside. The surface, slightly curved, and generally of one plain color, with a border, was sometimes decorated with color lines, a cross, or the figure of a dragon. Armorial bearings did not appear on shields until a later date.

Days Are Getting Longer.

"Johnny, how many hours are there in a day?" asked Col. Yerger of his son Johnny, who is attending lectures at the University of Texas.

"Twenty-five hours," was the reply.

"Where did you get the extra hour?"

"I don't know, but I heard the teacher say the days were one hour longer than they used to be."

PERSONALS.

Mr. Somerville Maxwell, of the Detroit morning until night.

For thirteen years John Ruskin spent $30,000 annually. He limits himself now to $1,800 a year.

CONGRESSMAN BENTON McMILLIN of Tennessee has a father-in-law worth $8,000,000.

WILLIAM D. KELLEY, James G. Blaine, and James A. Garfield were sworn into Congress on the same day, Dec. 7, 1863.

GEN. CROOK favors giving Indians the ballot because "they know more about our Government than many emigrants who come here."

THE HON. WM. CUMBACK is one of the most industrious of the Washington correspondents. He rises at 5 o'clock every morning and is at his desk by 7 o'clock, and is at his desk before 9 p. m.

MISS MCCOSH'S novels under the nom de plume of Charles Egbert Craddock are said to be the most popular in the Boston Public Library, Howells's being second.

HENRY JAMES is not a popular story writer in Boston, his old home. There is no demand at all for his Bostonians. Bostonians do not admire their own photographs.

BAYARD TAYLOR once said: "It is as a poet I wish to survive, and hope to do it. I will tell you where I wish to be placed by posterity—it is as the poet of the evolution philosophy."

THE late Martha Washington Jenks, of Boston, was by birth a member of the historic Coffin family of Nantucket. She was born on that island eighty-six years ago, and spent much of her life there.

A MOUNTAIN in North Borneo has been named for Frank Hatton, the young scientist who lost his life there while prospecting for gold. Since his death, by the way, gold has been found at that very place in large quantities.

ALLEN G. THURMAN has the best assortment of chickens in his neighborhood, and takes good care of them; but, with all his wealth, he keeps no horses. Mrs. Thurman is afraid of ride, and her husband does not care to.

GEN. ROBERT C. SCHENK, once looked upon as the father of the House, refuses to discuss public questions, but sums it all up in the remark that he considered the late Congress totally incompetent to deal with pressing public questions.

JUDGE GRAVES, of White county, Arkansas, was putting on his wedding suit the other day preparatory to marrying Miss Nannie Patty, when he complained of a pain in his right arm, called for water, and then died almost instantly.

SARAH BERNHARDT is a generous liver. She has coffee and rolls before rising, and at 11 eats a hearty breakfast, with claret. She dines at 5 and has supper after theater hours, usually nothing more than bouillon, cold meats, and fruit, and sometimes terrapin.

PITTSBURG possesses two wealthy little women in the Misses Stella Hays and Irwin Loughlin. The former is 14 years of age, and one of four heirs to $5,000,000 left by her grandfather; Irwin Loughlin, 10 years of age, is an orphan and sole heiress to many millions.

MR. N. E. CHASE, a capitalist of Boston, announces that, in his opinion, having been an employer of labor for fifteen years, every man ought to receive $1 per hour for his labor, or time, and that he ought to sell his five hours per day at the most. Mr. Chase will have but little difficulty in filling his works on these terms.

THE waste paper basket has at length become a political factor. A Western poet, whose verses have been rejected by George William Curtis, has threatened the mugwump leader with defeat at the polls should he ever run for National office. Presidential aspirants should be very careful how they treat Western poetry and poets.

EDWARD C. SCHRIGGS, of Nashville, Tenn., has made in the last four months $60,000 by real estate investments in his neighborhood. Mr. Schriggs is totally blind from the effects of a gunshot wound received about fifteen years ago. His constant companion is a cleaver negro boy, who gives him occasional "pointers" about land, people, etc.

IRA D. SANKEY, the evangelist, has given to the First Methodist Episcopal church of Newcastle the handsomest church building in the city. It is valued at $4,000 and is given on the condition that the congregation will at once erect a church that will cost at least $25,000. Mr. Sankey was born in Newcastle, and some years ago gave the Young Mens' Christian Association a $50,000 building.

MAJ. W. W. ARMSTRONG, of the Plain Dealer, will be Cleveland's sixth editorial postmaster. The first was Benjamin Andrews, of the Commercial Intelligencer, in 1842. The second was T. P. Spencer, of the Advertiser, in 1845. Number three was J. W. Gray, of the Plain Dealer, in 1853. Number four was Edwin Cowles, of the Leader, in 1861, and the fifth was his successor, George A. Benedict, in 1865.

THIS is the latest alleged witticism of Comedian Crane's little son. Last Summer when Edwin Booth visited Cohasset, where Robson and Crane live, the tragedian took Master Crane on his knee, and in his sad, thoughtful way said: "Well, my little man, I suppose you, too, will want to be an actor when you are big enough?" "No," answered the boy, "I don't want to be an actor when I grow up. I want to be like my uncle, Lawrence Barrett."

A NUMBER of young men of Phillips Brooks' parish were calling on him one night and the talk turned on truthfulness in polite society and the difficulty of always strictly maintaining it. One of the company asked the famous preacher what he would do if an artist asked his opinion of the merits of a picture which he had worked hard upon and valued highly but in which there was nothing that could be praised. "Well," said Mr. Brooks, "I will tell you. I should say just what I do to two mothers who bring their babies to me to be admired. I always say, whether they are pretty or ugly, 'Oh, that is a baby!' leaving the mother convinced that it is the only baby in the world, and myself utterly uncommitted. I should say the same thing when I saw the picture."

GOV. LOUNSBERRY is one of the strongest temperance men in Connecticut. One night recently, accompanied by his staff, he attended a ball in New Haven. In the course of the evening he suddenly entered a side room in time to discover two of his staff, Col. S. B. Horne of Winstead, and Surgeon Gen. C. J. Fox of Willimantic, in the act of drinking to the health of Gen. S. R. Smith in a glass of punch. In an instant he took the officers' arms and said: "I want it distinctly understood that no man can drink intoxicating liquors in public and remain a member of my staff." The Colonel and General were too much astonished to reply, and quickly putting down their glasses they left the room. Gov. Lounsbury then filled a glass with lemonade and said: "Gen. Smith, I will drink to your health in a manner that can not possibly result in injury to either of us."

"Soldiering" in a Band.

Nine-tenths of the soldiering done in this country is done in a band, and it frequently happens that there are several of the players engaged in it at the same time. In a large band it is a very easy matter for a player to hold the end of his instrument to his mouth and create the impression that he is playing his part when he is not. In private a great deal of this is done. It is also practiced largely in string bands. The man whose duty it was to manipulate the big bass violin in Gilmore's band soldiered throughout the whole performance.—Musician in Globe-Democrat.

In Favor of Smoking.

Mark Twain says that he smokes while Mr. White uses 300 cigars a month. As Mark Twain has made more money by his writings than Shakespeare ever saw, the impecunious author may here be a strong argument in favor of smoking.—New York Graphic.

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free.

C. A. Wright & Co.

Maj. Ben: Perley Poore.

Maj. Poore owed his admirable sense of color in reporting to some study of the Paris papers, when the graphic quality was well appreciated. He had training as a journalist both in London and Paris, and began as a society reporter. No one understood better how to observe and throw in the touches which distinguish a live narrative from a dead one. He once came near missing a very momentous piece of news. He lived, in Georgetown, and had been at his office in Washington late getting off his dispatches, and finally took the horse car for home. Just as the car was getting well out of the city, a person got in and announced the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's theatre.—Springfield Republican.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

WILD BILL, OF KANSAS

Killing Two Soldiers in a Twinkling, but Hesitating at a Monkey.

"Wild Bill was a good shot, was he not?"

"With the six shooter he was simply wonderful. In my entertainment I give an illustration of a double shot he made at Hays City, Kan., in the early days, when he shot two soldiers, one in front of him and one directly behind him, each endeavoring to shoot him before he could draw his gun. He killed one and mortally wounded the other, and the two reports of the revolver seemed almost as one. The marvelous feat was the talk of the country for a long time. In fact, when I came by there a few days ago one of the old residents who witnessed the killing mentioned it to me and said he could scarcely believe it even after seeing it. Bill never missed his mark. I have seen him take a pistol in each hand and fire with right and left pistol at a can thrown in the air, hitting it with both bullets. By the way, I heard a very funny story told on Bill some time ago. If you remember, he married Mrs. Agnes Lake, widow of Lake, the circus man. Bill fairly worshiped his wife, but despite his great love for her she never could induce him to quit drinking. He would come home full of bad whisky, and one day Mrs. Hickok said to him:

"'Bill, if you don't quit this drinking pretty soon you will actually begin to see monkeys.'

"'Monkeys?' said he. 'What do you mean, little one?'

"'Why, you know, when people back east drink too much of the kind of whisky they get back there they see snakes, but this awful stuff out here makes them see monkeys.'

"Bill laughed at her and did not give the matter a second thought, little dreaming that she had 'put up a job' to break him of his intemperate habits. There was a tame monkey in the town—Cheyenne, I believe it was—and Mrs. Hickok had induced its owner to loan it to her for a night. Bill came home that night comfortable drunk, and after he had gone to sleep his wife secured the monkey and chained it to the foot of the bed. Then turning down the light a little, she too retired and awaited results. Bill woke up in the night burning with thirst and raised up into a sitting posture, intending to get out of bed and get a drink of water. There, perched up on the footboard, was the monkey, staring him in the face with hideous grimaces. He rubbed his bleared eyes, looked again, and a horrible suspicion came into his befuddled brain. Had his wife told him the truth? Did he really have 'em? Finally, he sprang out on the floor, seized his six shooter, which lay on a table near, leveled it at the grinning creature, and said:

"'Now, old man, if you are a monkey you're in a bad fix; if you ain't a monkey I'm in a bad fix.' At the same instant he fired, and the monkey fell over in the agonies of death. His wife, who had been watching the working of her scheme, sprang up in the bed with a scream, and Bill, turning to her with a broad smile of the most intense satisfaction, said:

"'Little woman, congratulate me, for I have just had a wonderful escape. I ain't as drunk as I thought I was, and there's a monkey lyin' there on the floor that'll never intrude itself into the domestic felicy of another happy family an' make a gentleman think he's got the jim-jams!'"—Capt. Jack Crawford in Kansas City Times.

Vitality of Great Men is not always innate or born with them, but many instances are known where it has been acquired by the persistent and judicious use of Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic.

The Appetite

May be increased, the Digestive organs strengthened, and the bowels regulated, by taking Ayer's Pills. These Pills are purely vegetable in their composition. They contain neither calomel nor any other dangerous drug, and may be taken with perfect safety by persons of all ages.

I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was constantly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. By the time I had taken two boxes my appetite had greatly improved, my bowels were regulated, and, by the time I finished two boxes of these Pills my tendency to headaches had disappeared, and I became strong and well.—Darius M. Logan, Wilmington, Del.

I was troubled for over a year, with Loss of Appetite, and General Debility. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and, before finishing half a box of this medicine, my appetite and strength were restored.—C. O. Clark, Danbury, Conn.

Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for over three years with Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time.

BY USING

three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—P. Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking one box of Ayer's Pills, all these troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but give me increased vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B.

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, lifeless, and indescribably miserable, both physically and mentally; experience a sense of fullness or bloating after eating, or of "goneness," or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nervous prostration or exhaustion, irritability of temper, hot flushes, alternating with chilly sensations, sharp, biting, transient pains here and there, cold feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time. If not cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and healing their diseases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has gained great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred diseases.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

CURES ALL HUMORS,

from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, "White Swellings," Goitre, or "Thick Neck," and Enlarged Glands. Send ten cents in stamps for a large Treatise, with colored plates, on Skin Diseases, or the same amount for a Treatise on Scrofulous Affections.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse it by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength and bodily health will be established.

CONSUMPTION,

which is Scrofula of the Lungs, is arrested and cured by this remedy, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease. From its marvelous power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now world-famed remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too restrictive for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for Consumption, but for all Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Chronic Nasal Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy.

Sold by Druggists, at $1.00, or Six Bottles for $5.00.

FINIS.

When finis comes the book we close,
And, somewhat sadly, fancy goes,
With backward step, from stage to stage
Of that accomplished pilgrimage.
The thorn lies thicker than the rose!
There is so much that no one knows,
So much unreached that none suppose;
What flaws! what faults! on every page,
When finis comes.

CHAPTER XVII.

AND AFTER.

It was after they had been incarcerated in Pretoria for about a month that a bright idea occurred to John. About a quarter of a mile from the outskirts of the camp stood a little house known, probably on account of its diminutive size, as "The Palatial." This cottage had been like almost every other house in Pretoria, abandoned to its fate, its owner, as it happened, being away from the town. One day, in the course of a walk, John and Jess crossed the little bridge that spanned the sluit and went in to inspect the place. Passing down a path lined on either side with young blue gums, they reached the little tin roofed cottage. It consisted of two rooms—a bedroom and a good sized sitting room, in which still stood a table and a few chairs, with a stable and a kitchen at the back. They went in and sat down by the open door and looked out. The grounds of the little place sloped down toward a valley, on the farther side of which rose a wooded hill. To the right, too, was a hill clothed in deep green bush. The grounds themselves were planted with vines, just now loaded with bunches of ripening grapes, and surrounded with a beautiful hedge of monthly roses that formed a blaze of bloom. Near the house, too, was a bed of double roses, some of them exceedingly beautiful, and all flowering with a profusion unknown in this country. Altogether it was a delightful little spot, and, after the noise and glare of the camp, seemed perfectly heavenly; and they sat there and talked a great deal about the farm and old Silas Croft, and a little about Bessie.

"This is nice," said Jess presently, putting her hands behind her head and looking out at the bush beyond.

"Yes," said John. "I say, I've got an idea. I vote we take up our quarters here—during the day, I mean. Of course we shall have to sleep in camp, but we might eat here, you know, and you could sit here all day; it would be as safe as a church, for those Boers will never try to storm the town, I am sure of that."

Jess reflected and soon came to the conclusion that it would be a charming arrangement, and accordingly next day she set to work and got the place as nice and tidy as circumstances would allow, and they commenced housekeeping.

HOUSEKEEPING AT THE PALATIAL.

The upshot of this arrangement was that they were thrown more together than ever before. Meanwhile the siege dragged its slow length along. No news whatever reached the town from outside, but that did not trouble the inhabitants very much, as they were sure that Colley was advancing to their relief and even got up sweepstakes as to the date of his arrival. Now and then a sortie took place, but as the results attained were very small and were not on the whole creditable to our arms, perhaps the less said about them the better. John, of course, went out on these occasions, and then Jess would endure agonies that were all the worse because she had to conceal them. She lived in constant terror lest he should be among the killed. However nothing happened to him, and things went on as usual till the 12th of February, on which day an attack was made on a place called the Red House Kraal, which was occupied by Boers, near a spot known as the Six Mile Spruit.

The force, which was a mixed one, left Pretoria before daybreak, and John went with it. He was rather surprised when, on going to the cart in which Jess slept, to get some little thing before saddling up, to find her sitting on the box in the night dews with a cup of coffee she had prepared for him in her hand.

"What do you mean by this Jess?" he asked, sharply. "I will not have you getting up in the middle of the night to make coffee for me."

"I have not got up," she answered, quietly; "I have not been to bed."

"That makes matters worse," he said, but nevertheless he drank the coffee, and was glad to get it, while she sat on the box and watched him.

"Put on your shawl and get something over your head," he said, "the dew will soak you through. Look, your hair is all wet."

Presently she spoke. "I wish you would do something for me, John," for she called him John now. "Will you promise?"

"How like a woman," he said, "to ask one to promise a thing without saying what it is."

"I want you to promise for Bessie's sake," she said.

"Well, what is it, Jess?"

"Not to go on this sortie. You know you can easily get out of it if you like."

He laughed. "You little silly, why not?"

"Oh, I don't know. Don't be ill natured, but I am nervous. I am afraid that—that something may happen to you."

"Well," he remarked, considerably softer than his wont, and if it were I don't know that it can't be helped."

"Think of Bessie," she said again.

"I do think of Bessie," he answered, coldly, "what is the good of trying to make the best out of a fellow like that? I am going to shoot. I can't help it, and I am not going to show the white feather, even for Bessie's sake. So there's an end, and now I must be off."

"You are quite right, John," she said, quietly; "I should not have dared to hear you say anything different, but I could not help speaking. Good bye, John. Give this your hand and she stretched down in her hand which he took and went.

"Upon my word, she has given me quite a turn," reflected John to himself as the troop crept on through the white mists of dawn. "I suppose that she thinks that I am going to be plugged. Perhaps I am! I wonder how Bessie would take it. She would be awfully cut up, but I expect that she would get over it pretty soon. Now I don't think that Jess would get over a thing of that sort in a hurry. the one is all flower and the other is all root."

And then he fell to wondering how Bessie was and what she was doing, and if she missed him as much as he missed her, and so on, till his mind came back to Jess, and he reflected what a charming companion she was, and how thoughtful and kind, and breathed a secret hope that she would continue to live with them after they were married. Somehow they had got to those terms, perfectly innocent in themselves, in which two people become absolutely necessary to each other's daily life. Indeed, Jess had got a long way further than that, but of this he was of course ignorant. He was still at the former stage, and was not himself aware how large a portion of his daily thoughts were occupied by this dark eyed girl, or how completely her personality was overshadowing him. He only knew that she had the knack of making him feel thoroughly happy in her society. When he was talking to her, or even sitting silently by her, he became aware of a sensation of restfulness and reliance that he had never before experienced in the society of a woman. Of course this was to a large extent the natural homage of the weaker nature to the stronger, but it was also something more. It was the shadow of that utter sympathy and perfect accord which is the surest sign of the presence of the highest forms of affection, and when it accompanies the passion of men and women, as it sometimes, though rarely, does, being more often found in its highest form in those relations from which the element of sexuality is excluded, raises it almost above the level of the earth. For the love where that sympathy exists, whether it is between mother and son, husband and wife, or those who, while desiring it, have no hope of that relationship, is an undying love and will endure till the night of Time has swallowed all things.

Meanwhile as John reflected, the force to which he was attached was moving into action, and he soon found it necessary to come down to the unpleasantly practical details of Boer warfare. More particularly did this come home to his mind when, shortly afterward, the man next to him was shot dead, and a little later he himself was slightly wounded by a bullet which passed between his saddle and his thigh. Into the details of the fight that ensued it is not necessary to enter here. They were, if anything, more discreditable than most of the episodes of that unhappy war, in which the holding of Potchefstroom, Lydenburg, Rustenburg and Waldersroom are the only bright spots. Suffice it to say that they ended in something very like an utter rout at the hands of a much inferior force, and that, a few hours after he had started, John found himself on the return road to Pretoria, with a severely wounded man behind his saddle (the ambulance being left in the hands of the Boers), who, as they went painfully along, mingled curses of shame and fury with his own. Meanwhile exaggerated accounts of what had happened had got into the town, and, among other things, it was said that Capt. Niel had been shot dead. One man who came in stated that he saw him fall, and that he was shot through the head. This Mrs. Neville heard with her own ears, and, greatly shocked, started to communicate the intelligence to Jess.

As soon as it was daylight Jess had, as was customary with her, gone over to the little house which she and John occupied, "The Palatial," as it was ironically called, and settled herself there for the day. First she tried to work and could not, so she took a book that she had brought with her and began to read, but it was a failure also. Her eyes would wander from the page, and her ears kept straining to catch the distant booming of the big guns that came from time to time floating across the hills. The fact of the matter was that the poor girl was the victim of a presentiment that something was going to happen to John. Most people of imaginative mind have suffered from this kind of thing at one time or other in their lives, and have lived to see the folly of it; and, indeed, there was more in the circumstances of the present case to excuse the indulgence in the luxury of presentiments than is usual. Indeed, as it happened, she was not far out—only a sixteenth of an inch or so—for John was very nearly killed.

Not finding Jess in camp Mrs. Neville made her way across to "The Palatial," where she knew the girl sat, crying as she went at the thought of the news that she had to communicate, for the good soul had grown very fond of John Niel. Jess, with that acute sense of hearing that often accompanies nervous excitement, caught the sound of the little gate at the bottom of the garden almost before her visitor had got through it and ran round the corner of the house to see who it was.

One glance at Mrs. Neville's tear stained face was enough for her. She knew what was coming, and clasped at one of the young blue gum trees that grew along the path to prevent herself from falling.

"What is it?" she said, faintly; "is he dead?"

"Yes, my dear, yes; shot through the head, they say."

Jess made no answer, but clung to the sapling, feeling as though she were going to die herself, and faintly hoping that she might do so. Her eyes wandered vaguely from the face of the messenger of evil, first up to the sky, then down to the cropped and trodden veldt. Past the gate of "The Palatial" garden ran a road, which, as it happened, was a short cut from the scene of the fight, and down this road came four Kaffirs and half castes, bearing something on a stretcher, with three or four carbineers riding behind. A coat was thrown over the face of the form on the stretcher, but the legs were visible. They were booted and spurred, and the feet fell apart in that peculiarly lax and helpless way of which there is no possibility of mistaking the meaning.

"Look!" she said, pointing.

"Ah, poor men, poor man!" said Mrs. Neville, "they are bringing him here to lay him out."

Then Jess' beautiful eyes closed, and down she went with the bending tree. Presently the sapling snapped, and she fell senseless with a little cry, and as she did so the men with the corpse passed in.

Two minutes afterward, John Niel, having heard the rumour of his own death on arrival at the camp, and greatly fearing lest it should have got to Jess' ears, came cantering hurriedly across, and dismounting as well as his wound would allow, limped up the garden path.

"Good heavens, Capt. Niel!" said Mrs. Neville, looking up, "why, we thought that you were dead!"

"And that is what you have been telling her. I suppose," he said, steadily glancing at the pale and death like face, "you might have waited till you were sure. Poor girl! it must have given her a turn," and stooping down, he gathered some water in her hat, and sprinkled with some drops dripped off to the face, where he had laid down upon the ground, and, assisted by Mrs. Neville, began chafing the poor girl's wrists for life. Strange was her faint, however, that there is no wonder at anything and at last Mrs. Neville started off to the camp to get some brandy, leaving him to go on rubbing her hands and sprinkling water on her face.

The good lady had not been gone more than two or three minutes when Jess suddenly opened her eyes and sat up, and then slipped her feet to the ground. Her eyes fell thought that she was going to faint again, for even her lips blanched, and she began to shake and tremble all over in the extremity of her agitation.

"Jess, Jess," he said, "for God's sake don't look like that, you frighten me!"

"I thought you were [illegible] I thought you were—" she said, slowly, and then suddenly burst into a passion of tears and fell forward upon his breast and lay there sobbing her heart out, her brown curls resting against his face.

It was an awkward position and a most moving one. John was only a man, and the spectacle of this strange woman, to whom he had lately grown so much attached, plunged into intense emotion, evidently, apparently by anxiety about his fate, stirred him deeply, as it would have stirred anybody. Indeed, it struck some chord in him for which he could not quite account, and its echoes charmed and yet frightened him. What did it mean?

"Jess, dear Jess, pray stop; I can't bear to see you cry so."

She lifted her head from his shoulder and stood looking at him, her hand resting on the table behind her. Her face was wet with tears and looked like a dew washed lily, and her beautiful eyes were alight with a flame that he had never seen in the eyes of woman before. She said nothing, but her whole face was more eloquent than any words, for there are times when the features can convey a message in a language of their own that is more subtle than any tongue we talk. There she stood, her breast heaving with emotion as the sea heaves when the fierceness of the storm has passed—a very incarnation of the intensest love of woman. And as she stood something seemed to pass before her eyes and blind her, and a spirit took possession of her that absorbed all her doubts and fears, and she gave way to a force that was of her and yet compelled her, as, when the wind blows, the sails compel a ship. And then, for the first time, where her love was concerned, she put out all her strength. She knew, and had always known, that she could master him, and force him to regard her as she regarded him, did she but choose. How she knew it she could not say, but so it was. And now she yielded to an overmastering impulse and chose. She said nothing, she did not even move, she only looked at him.

"Why were you in such a fright about me?" he stammered.

She did not answer, but kept her eyes upon his face, and it seemed to John as though power flowed from them; for, as she looked, he felt the change come. Everything melted away before the almost spiritual intensity of her gaze. Bessie, honor, his engagement—all were forgotten; the smouldering embers broke into flame, and he knew that he loved this woman as he had never loved any living creature before—that he loved her even as she loved him. Strong man as he was he shook like a leaf before her.

"Jess," he said, hoarsely, "God forgive me! I love you!" and he bent forward to kiss her.

She lifted her face toward him, then suddenly changed her mind, and laid her hand upon his breast.

"You forget," she said, almost solemnly, "you are going to marry Bessie."

Overpowered by a deep sense of shame, and by another sense of the deep calamity that had overtaken him, John turned and limped from the house.

CHAPTER XVIII.

AND AFTER.

In front of the door of "The Palatial" was a round flower bed filled with weeds and flowers mixed up together like the good and evil in the heart of man, and to the right hand side of this bed stood an old wooden chair with the back off. No sooner had John got outside the door of the cottage than he became sensible that, what between one thing and another—weariness, loss of blood from his wound, and intense mental emotion—if he did not sit down somewhere pretty quickly he should follow the example set by Jess and faint straight away. Accordingly he made for the old chair and perched himself on it with gratitude. Presently he saw Mrs. Neville coming steaming along the path with a bottle of brandy in her hand.

"Ah," he thought to himself, "that will just come in handy for me. If I don't have a glass of brandy soon I shall roll off this infernal chair—I am sure of it."

"Where is Jess?" panted Mrs. Neville.

"In there," he said; "she has recovered. It would have been better for us both if she hadn't," he added to himself.

"Why, bless me, Capt. Niel, how queer you look!" said Mrs. Neville, fanning herself with her hat, "and there is such a row going on at the camp there; the volunteers swear that they will attack the military for deserting them, and I don't know what all; and they simply wouldn't believe me when I said you were not shot. Why, I never! Look! your boot is full of blood! So you were hit after all."

"Might I trouble you to give me some brandy, Mrs. Neville?" said John, faintly.

She filled a glass she had brought with her half full of water from a little irrigation furrow that ran down from the main sluit by the road, and then topped it up with brandy. He drank it, and felt decidedly better.

"Dear me!" said Mrs. Neville, "there are a pair of you now. You should just have seen that girl go down when she saw the body coming along the road! I made sure that it was you; but it wasn't. They say that it was poor Jim Smith, son of old Smith of Rustenburg. I tell you what it is, Capt. Niel, you had better be careful; if that girl isn't in love with you, she is something very like it. A girl does not pop over like that for Dick, Tom or Harry. You must forgive an old woman like me for speaking out plain, but she is an odd girl is Jess, just like ten women rolled into one so far as her mind goes, and if you don't take care you will get into trouble, which will be rather awkward, as you are going to marry her sister. Jess isn't a girl to be trifled with, I can tell you," and she shook her head solemnly, as though she suspected that John was trifling with his future sister in law's affections, and he, without saying a word in answer, turned and went into the house.

And Jess, poor Jess, groaned. What child of Eve is free from the whole catalogue of sins, if she be overpowered by a man she believes she loves? The whole thing was self evident. He was in love with Jess, and he was engaged to her sister. Bessie! Why, he was engaged to Bessie! Why, he was engaged to Bessie! Why, he was engaged to

THE ALUMNI REUNION.

The exercises attendant upon the Reunion of the Alumni Society were held at Armory Hall on Friday evening, June 24th. The new members and many of the older ones, with their families and friends, were present during the evening, and after a brief season of social chat the President, C. A. Slayton, called the meeting to order and announced the program as the following order.

Prayer—By Rev. T. Adkins.
Music—Tecumseh Orchestra.
Oration—Frank H. Hall.
Vocal Music, Pale Autumn Flowers—Shubert Quartette.
History of the Class of 79—By Miss Jennie Heesen.
Music—Tecumseh Orchestra.
Welcome to the class of 87—By the President, C. A. Slayton.
Response by the President of the Class—Arther Hall.
Vocal Music—Quartette by the Shubert Club.

The orchestra was composed of a portion of the Tecumseh City Band and gave some fine selections. It was the first appearance in public of the Shubert club. Mrs LaVern Wheeler presided at the organ, and their singing made a most favorable impression.

The company then gathered about the tables and partook of the refreshments, Mr. Ira G. Rawson acting as caterer. It is needless to say that the refreshments were nicely prepared and served. The usual "feast of reason" followed.

Prof. Hammond, the toastmaster of the evening, announced the toasts very cleverly, and the responses seemed to strike a responsive chord in the hearts of those present.

The committee selected for the purpose reported the following list of officers for the coming year, which report was duly ratified.

President—A. W. Mills.
1st Vice—C. A. Wright.
2d " —Miss A. B. Hosmer.
Secretary—C. A. Slayton.
Treasurer—Will Hayden.
Orator—H. L. McNair.
Alternate—Lyster Dewey.
Poet—Miss Adah Waldron.
Alternate—Miss Lucy Train.
Essayist—Miss Hettie McClue.
Alternate—Miss Inez Laing.
Historian—Miss Mabel Hayden.
Alternate—Miss May De-Wolf.
Toastmaster—Dr. R. B. House.
Ex. Com. S. W. Anderson, O. P. Bills, Miss Alice Wimpie, Mrs. C. A. Wright.

We append the oration and history in full below.

Leadership.

BY FRANK HALL.

"Those who think must govern those who toil," writes Oliver Goldsmith; and the history of the world but proves that he expressed a great truth. Even stronger he might have made the verse and it would have been true, for the few "who think" control the many "who toil." Even in the past, for millions who would follow there has been but one who could lead; for all the great principles which have become the life forces of nations have first found exponents, each in some one master mind.

Every great reform has arisen from the inspired energy or genius of a single man, though many of the great strides in the advance of humanity have not reached their full limit till the one who took the initiative and to whom most of the credit is due has long lain, forgotten, it may be, in the grave. Yet it has been that one's influence working slowly and silently which at last has made the change, for as Longfellow says:

"So when a great man dies,
For years beyond our ken,
The light he leaves behind him lies
Along the paths of men."

How frequently in the development of a nation there has come a time when its very existence has depended on the finding of a leader who should overcome difficulties seemingly too great for human powers.

When the children of Israel had nearly reached the limit of their sojourn in Egypt, their condition was deplorable. Held under a bondage as strict as any nation ever endured, contending with maliciously imposed difficulties, making their "bricks without straw," laboring under the most cruel taskmasters, their spirits must have sunk to the lowest ebb. Their numbers and ability decreasing and their extinction threatened by the slaying of their sons, with no great men to inspire them, their God forgotten, their future must have looked dark. But from the pitch smeared ark on the Nile was to come a leader who should guide them through a most critical period and lay anew the foundation of a great nation. While Moses lacked many of the qualities which other successful leaders have possessed, he had others which well fitted him for his divinely given position. Although lacking in ability to speak well, meek, self distrustful, he had received by inspiration from Heaven, such a faith in his mission as enabled him to infuse the people with the idea that they were the heirs of God's promises, to awaken with enthusiasm a new desire for liberty. Brought up at the court of Pharaoh, he exceeded in learning the wisest men of Egypt. His mind had that training which gave him the power to cope with the difficulties of the flight, to outwit the plans of Pharaoh and his court, and to tempt Egypt's army to its destruction. His wisdom and counsel enabled him to control for forty years a luxury loving and rebellious people; and his judgment and knowledge formulated a code of laws which has been the wonder and the model for succeeding ages. On the Bible scroll of heroes, with that of Moses we read the names of David, Solomon, Gideon, each in his time a leader, protecting, strengthening and advancing the Jewish nation, by power of mind and force of character, keeping the people true to their God, their country.

[illegible] Christ, than leader, Paul the scholar, the orator, the grandest model of manhood. Profane history, too, abounds in names of leaders, may indeed, be said to consist of a record of their lives and the results of their careers upon the destiny of nations. From Alexander to Washington, from Demosthenes to Webster, from Confucius to Gladstone, each in the varied lines of human power and progress, we can trace the influence of the leader, the great, almost incomprehensible changes which powerful individuals has wrought.

The necessity for leaders did not pass with ancient history. The present demands men as wise and great as the greatest of Greece and Rome. Questions of intricacy more difficult of solution than have ever perplexed the sages of old are assuming more and more prominence, and must be answered factions and cliques arise on every side demanding attention, and to gain their demands they must have leaders. Philosophy, science, art, all the pursuits of man are advancing and master minds must make the advances.

Thus much as to the necessity of leadership, what is required to make a great leader? First among these qualifications is influence over men, an influence which belongs to the very persons of some men, an influence of two kinds arising from seemingly opposed characteristics. Some men make friends under any circumstances, and win the confidence of all with whom they are brought into contact, gaining a friend by every glance of a sympathetic eye, a touch of a warm hand, or an indefinable something in their bearing which strikes a responsive chord in other hearts. This personal magnetism has been the winning card in the life game of many a man. The second source of this influence is found in dignity, a quality which sends its influence even farther, affecting not alone those who are met but others in circles outside the realm of personal acquaintance. It was this quality which Washington possessed in so great a degree, it was that power which without a word forced men to recognize that they stood before a great man, and compelled inferior minds to feel their inferiority. Men who possess this gift need not meet others to inspire them, for their deeds, their force of will, their strength of character, transmitted by words of others, are more eloquent than any brilliant oratory or personal magnetism. Courage is another quality of a great leader,—boldness to look the whole world in the eye and defy it. That courage which nothing can daunt, that courage which on the battle field calmly views the scene of action and forms plans, among shot and shell; that courage which held Gladstone true to his plans for Ireland's good, though he knew it meant political death; that courage which led Johnson to reject an Earl's patronage,—it is that courage which sends a thrill through men and can lead them anywhere.

An important element in leadership is self sacrifice. As much personality as there must be in a great strong character, there must be a great sacrifice of personal feeling to the interests of the people; their sympathies must become the sympathies of the leader. The world may demand that they give up domestic quiet and happiness, and be ready at any time to leave excitement or a restful pillow and give themselves into the hands of their followers. Even in their homes, the burden of a great word rests upon them and its responsibilities haunts their dreams.

Sincerity is one of the greatest characteristics of leadership; into the very life and being of the leader must be infused the one idea for which he is striving, and to its advancement he must turn every circumstance, upon it he must set at work every agent he can control. Hans Christian Anderson could see eloquence in the scarlet thread that ran through every inch of rope in the English navy as a mark of royalty. The world sees eloquence in the red thread of a single idea that runs through a great man's life and recognizes its royalty. This is the heart of leadership and controls its very life. The red thread in Paul's life was the desire to spread the news of the Gospel, and how he turned everything to serve his purpose, becoming "All things to all men," suffering pain, persecution, shipwreck, scourging, death, never did he loose sight of his purpose, but followed the scarlet thread and the world shall feel forever the greatness of his work and the grandeur of his character. Wisdom too, is among the most important possessions of a great leader. Courage, sincerity, popularity, self sacrifice; may all be present and yet a man fail as a leader, if he lacks the knowledge, or the training and balance of mind which education gives. The world has passed the stage when strength ruled, when the great questions were those of conquest and war, and leaders are not required so much to lead men's bodies in armies, but to lead their minds in the struggle for truth and advanced civilization. More and more is the intellectual gaining power, and the leader of the future must be learned, or though all else were favorable, he can not succeed. The statesman must bring to his aid the examples of the past, the teachings of the present. The questions which now agitate our nation can be successfully answered by men of intellect, of highest capacity and the best of cultivation. In science much has been done already that the scientist must know before he can think of leading, and in art and literature only well trained minds can hope for success.

And now if the world is in need of these great men, and if they must have the qualities agnost of a God, what reward have they? Alas! too often the praise they receive is that inscribed upon their tomb stone. Columbus died in chains; Milton in poverty and blindness; and Galileo with a forced lie on his lips. Are these their rewards, for philosophy cannot show us in what they gain, an equivalent for what they suffer. 'Tis sympathy alone which can [illegible] the sympathy which only can understand [illegible] Fame is one of their rewards, that fame which surely comes, though it may be, for the world will give every man credit for his work though it may not be for years. Is not this fame a great reward? Does it not approach as nearly to immortality as any human can aspire to, when one can die feeling that even though his bones shall become dust there will be a warm spot for his memory in the heart of some great nation. To die like this is but to live. But fame comes late, the leader may have in the meanwhile passed through calumnies or poverty, and is not satisfied, the [illegible] deserve a great reward. See Daniel Webster when he arose to reply to Hayne, see the grand form in its majestic height, as he utters the grand thoughts of that wonderful speech. See the eyes of his friends lighten with pride as he proceeds and see even his opponents held silent by the tide of eloquence. Not an ignorant rabble, but the greatest men of the nation, the most powerful brains of the western continent follow his words with soft attention, as wondering children might follow a king. Is not here a high reward. But far above all these, truer reward than fame is the knowledge of having done some great good, of having effected some world felt reform, of having preserved a nation. These are the proudest and noblest rewards of all.

What must have been the feelings of Moses, as he stood in all his strength and manhood upon the top of Mt. Nebo and gazing into Canaan, foresaw the future of the people he had released from bondage. Could Abraham Lincoln have asked for greater reward than to hear the prayers and blessings of millions of freedmen poured upon him wherever he went. Think you would Gladstone, laboring to release a down trodden people, and suffering sneers and defeat, change places with Bismarck? No! the power for good is the grandest reward God ever bestowed upon man, and it is one the angels might well envy.

Time may lay low the proudest works of man, may blot out nations and efface their civilization. It may change a continent, or convert a Niagara into a rocky brook, but it cannot blot out the memory of great heroes. Their names are heard in the gurgling brook, and in the heaving ocean, they are written on the mountain rocks and on the granite in the depths of the earth, while in human hearts their renown shall have an everlasting life.

History of the Class of '79.

The greater part of our mental pleasure is derived from the sources of memory and hope; for while hope is constantly adorning the future with bright colors, memory is active in bringing back to us the events of the past. Eight years ago the former was the more prominent in our minds, and now when Alumni recalls our classmates, the latter holds the greater sway. Having found no one who seemed anxious to exercise the pleasures of memory, as in this case, I followed the advice of Dr. Johnson, who said: "If you have an exercise in composition to write, sit down doggedly to work." Trusting not then to an imaginary phantom to breath an inspiration, and thus immortalize their fame, I will proceed to narrate the history of the class of '79.

We were seven. Three are here. Three are scattered here and there, and one in the church yard lies. Cora Kilburn employed her time by teaching, until she was married, Jan. 25th, 1881, to J. A. Flick of Bedford, O., at which place she resided until her death which occured Jan. 1, '82. Poor Cora grew tired before us all, "for not in cruelty, not in wrath: The Reaper came that day; 'twas an angel visited the green earth and took one of our band away."

Hattie Helm gives a brief sketch of her life as follows: "On turning over the leaves of an old diary, I found I taught constantly until the spring of '85. Thinking over that period, I can't say the teacher has a hard lot. I loved the work, and it is a source of pleasure to me to recall the associations connected with it. In April '85, I married F. C. Alderdyce, and am now living happily in Cambridge, Michigan."

Grace Parkhurst has not answered my note of inquiry. Until recently she has resided in our midst. She was one of our public instructors for a short time, when ill health compelled her to resign her situation. She then accompanied her parents to Pratt, Kansas, where she is now living.

Asking Janie Monaghan to give an account of her eventful life since graduating, I received the following reply: "When I left school you know I commenced my career by teaching the Davidson school. But this proved too much for me, and from that time, like Pontha de Leon searching for the fountain of youth and beauty, I've been searching for the fountain of health. I spent that winter at the mineral springs of Eaton Rapids, and next tried the bracing air of Lake Michigan one summer. Finally I decided to see what an entire change of climate would do. So in '81 I spent the winter in Kansas City. I went back to Michigan in the summer of '82, but found the air too heavy for me and returned to Kansas. In 1864, I decided to embark on the sea of matrimony and was married to M. S. Pitzer of Quenemo, Kan. The year following we came to Orange, California, and I think I've found a climate that will help me. Last summer I passed on the coast of the grand old Pacific; but this year we are going to try the mountains. I spend all of my time in laying down the law to Miss Donna Monaghan Pitzer, and as she is a "chip of the old block," it keeps my hands full. If anything more occurs to me, I'll telegraph."

The history of the remaining three is well known to you all, as none of them have been absent from among us for any length of time.

There is yet remaining one more school teacher to be added to the list. After being thus employed for seven terms, Etta Wilson laid aside this occupation, and became the wife of J. J. Freeman, April 19, '83. She has shown good taste in the selection of Tecumseh for her home.

Nellie Nyland is giving her undivided attention to customers in her [illegible] member would necessarily be an auto- [illegible] interesting subject, it will be omitted. Thus ends the history of the seven of '79. "We cannot all be masters," but in this great school, the world, in which we are engaged, may we feel assured, credit to our Alma Mater as those classes who preceded, as those who have followed us.

We reap as we have sown.

The Appetite

May be increased, the Digestive organs strengthened, and the bowels regulated, by taking Ayer's Pills. These Pills are purely vegetable in their composition. They contain neither calomel nor any other dangerous drug, and may be taken with perfect safety by persons of all ages.

I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was constantly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time my digestion and appetite my bowels were regulated, and, by the time I finished two boxes of these Pills my tendency to headaches had disappeared, and I became strong and well.—Darius M. Logan, Wilmington, Del.

I was troubled, for over a year, with Loss of Appetite, and General Debility. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and, before finishing half a box of this medicine, my appetite and strength were restored.—C. O. Clark, Danbury, Conn.

Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for over three years with Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time.

BY USING

three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—P. Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking one box of Ayer's Pills, all these troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but give me increased vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B.

RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by the Directors of Kalamazoo Ladies' Hall Association, at a meeting of the Board held in the parlors of the First Baptist church, Tecumseh, July 5th, 1887.

WHEREAS; God has taken our sister Mrs Hattie L. Brewer, from her home to be in the presence of God and his angels: Therefore,

Resolved:—That in her death we lose a wise counselor; one whose heart was in sympathy with, whose mind was quick to plan for, and whose purse was ever open to give for the interests at Kalamazoo, which she loved and which she was a graduate.

Resolved—That as Directors we feel this a personal one, and greatly deplore in our meetings.

Resolved:—That we extend to the bereaved families our heartfelt sympathy in view of this great affliction, that we realize their loss would be unendurable were it not that they cherish a remembrance of the sister, wife and mother, faithful in each relation, and that the hope of immortality through Christ enables them to look forward to a happy reunion with their loved ones.

Board of Directors of K. L. H. A.
E. MAY HENDERSON, Sec.

REMOVAL OF DR. R. B. HOUSE.

We regret to learn that Dr. R. B. House has concluded to remove to Springfield Ohio. His plans are perfected and he will leave within a few days as soon as his business affairs are closed up. Fifteen years ago on the first day of October next, the doctor opened rooms here in Tecumseh and began the practice of his profession. He acquired a fine practice during the first year of his residence here which has been steadily growing since. He has not only been very sucessful in the line of his profession but has earned the respect and esteem of the entire community as a man. He has served as President of the village for three years and is now a member of the School Board. He has also held responsible official positions in the M. E. Church. He served as secretary of the State Homeopathic medical society for five years, then as its president, and he is again acting as secretary. He will leave the old home with sincere regrets of a host of friends but accompanied with their wishes for his future personal and professional welfare.

[illegible] in Tecumseh on the 25th [illegible], Alfred Bailey, aged 56 [illegible]. The deceased was a native of [illegible] England. He had lived for [illegible] years in Cambridge and six [illegible] he took up his abode in [illegible] when he has since resided [illegible]. Funeral services were conducted [illegible] residence on Monday June [illegible] Rev. J. Phelps, and the remains were conveyed to Cambridge [illegible] burial.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 7, 1887.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Ellsworth Arnold was home on the 4th.

Marvin Fuller was in town last Saturday.

Will Baker, of Detroit, was home on the 4th.

Miss Hattie Whittier, of Elgin Ill., came home to spend the 4th.

John L. Knapp, of Adrian, was in town last Tuesday on business.

Miss Fischer, of New York City, is a guest at Webster Anderson's.

Adrian's annual school meeting will be held on Monday, July 11th.

A car load of horses was shipped from this station last Saturday.

Geo. Kies went to Boston last Saturday, for a few weeks vacation.

Miss Jennie Sager, of Adrian, was visiting friends in town last week.

The old Indian camp looks like Goldsmith's deserted village now.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman McKinney, of Toledo, were in Tecumseh the 4th.

Miss Nellie Rowley, of Hillsdale, is the guest of Ella Jackson this week.

Workmen have commenced making the repairs on the Central school building.

Mrs. Milo Dole and Miss Spoke, of Auburn Ind., are visiting the former's parents in Raisin.

At a late hour on Monday evening a splendid balloon was sent up from the Indian Camp.

Misses Georgia and Florence Randall, of Brooklyn N. Y. are spending a few weeks at S. W. Anderson's.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Tenant, of Lenawee Junction, were visiting at Dr. North's the fore part of this week.

May Hunt, of Manchester, and Stella Saxton, of Bluffton Ind., were guests of the Misses Heesen on the Fourth.

Eldredge Lowe is spending two weeks at his father's, Justus Lowe's, of Ridgeway and with other friends in this vicinity.

S. W. Anderson had some fire works of his own Tuesday evening at his residence. He sent up two nice balloons and some rockets.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Mitchell, of Ionia, spent the Fourth with their daughter, Mrs. LaVern Wheeler. Mrs. Mitchell will remain here during this week.

Mrs. Sampson, the mother of Dr. Henry A. Reynolds, and the Doctor's little son, are the guests of Mrs. N. M. Sutton and will remain a few weeks.

Pick-pockets got in their work effectively on the 4th. Several ladies were relieved of their pocket-books, but fortunately not much money was in them.

Arrangements are in progress for a meeting of the County Pioneer Society to be held at the Congregational church in Franklin, the latter part of August or early in September.

LaVern Wheeler has just finished a group view of the High School pupils The picture gives a fine view of the Central School Building with the pupils arranged along the side walk in front.

While swinging in a hammock last Tuesday evening, Vesta Kies, daughter of Will Kies, accidentally fell out on the ground and sustained a fracture of the collar bone. She is now doing as well as could be expected.

Among the many former Tecumsehites who dropped down here to celebrate was Rev. G. W. Puddefoot. He is now acting as agent for the Home Missionary Society of the Congregational church, and lives in Massachusetts.

Geo. Heesen has begun work upon his new canning factory. He has bought a lot just north of the Creek bridge near the Episcopal church upon which a building 25x50 feet will be erected. The work will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

The Governor wisely concluded to have business at home, and failed to visit Ann Arbor during jubilee week. Perhaps it is just as well that he did not attend. The big guns in attendance there would have dwarfed the Governor immeasurably by comparison.

During the exhibition of fireworks at Ithaca, Mich., Monday evening, a bundle of rockets accidentally caught fire and shot into the crowd, injuring six persons, one of whom was Carl Suedicor, who formerly lived in Ridgeway. Carl was hit in the abdomen by a rocket and so seriously injured that he died the next day.

Sam White Spirit, chief of the Indians who recently exhibited here, imbibed too much Tecumseh fire water, while the show was in that village, and was arrested and jailed here. Justice Robbins released him on suspended sentence, this afternoon, the noble red man promising to do better, and shaking the dust of Lenawee county from his mocassins, he went on his way rejoicing.—Adrian Times.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, is spending a few days at home.

The Summer School at Adrian College promises to be well attended.

Fred Burger, who is now stopping at Morenci, came home to spend the 4th.

Miss Belle Knapp, of Jackson, was the guest of Mrs. John Orr over the Fourth.

Geo. S. Train, of Bryan, O., came home to celebrate, and remained over the 4th.

Peter J. Van Vliet's smiling countenance was seen on our streets last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kay, of Manchester, were the guests of Wm. Orr and wife Monday.

Mrs. Jas. Wilson, of Detroit, is spending three or four weeks at her father's, N. M. Sutton's.

Harry Dunn, of Chicago, came out to help celebrate, and spent Sunday and Monday in Tecumseh.

Many farmers began their harvesting last Tuesday and a large amount of wheat is being cut this week.

The premium list of the coming county fair has been received, which will be held from Sept. 27 to 30, inclusive.

A. S. Hayden of Milan was in town yesterday. He made a short visit however, returning home this morning.

Dr. Geo. Howell has been appointed health officer of the village of Tecumseh, in the place of Dr. R. B. House resigned.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. wish to extend their thanks to all who furnished lunch and otherwise assisted them on the 4th of July.

Teachers desiring to prepare for their winter work will do well to attend the Summer School at Adrian College, beginning July 18th.

Henry Stevens has received a letter from Col. Doolittle stating that he will positively be present at the reunion of the 18th Mich. Infantry.

The regular installation of officers will take place at the Odd Fellows' Lodge next Tuesday evening. A full attendance of the members is desired.

P. W. Adams arrived here from his Delaware home just in time to see an old fashioned celebration of the 4th in Tecumseh. He will remain few days.

Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Conley, of Detroit, spent the 4th in Tecumseh. Mr. Conley put in a splendid day's work on Monday shaking hands with his old friends.

Mrs. Dr. Miller, of Washington, D. C., is spending a few days among her old Tecumseh friends. She arrived just in time to take in the 4th of July celebration.

Services at the Universalist church next Sunday, the 10th, at 10:30 in the morning and at 7:30 in the evening. After the sermon in the morning, communion.

Mrs. David McNair returned from her Eastern trip last week accompanied by Bert, who is spending this week at home. Bert is well pleased with his position at Washington.

Frank Smalledge, of Detroit, is shaking hands with his Tecumseh friends to-day. Mrs. Smalledge came out last Saturday to spend the Fourth and will return with Frank to-morrow.

Marshall Thos. Kyle will be at the HERALD office on Friday of each week to receive village taxes, during the month of July. Persons who pay their taxes before August 1st will get the benefit of two per cent discount.

John A. Merritt, of Lockport N. Y. is spending a few days with Mrs. N. R. and Geo. Merritt, of this village. He will leave next week and visit his brothers at Cadillac and Big Rapids before his return home.

The expenses at the Summer School at Adrian College are placed very low, that all may enjoy its opportunities. The tuition is five dollars for the entire session. And board and lodging are two dollars and a half per week. For particulars, address President D. S. Stevens.

Dr. W. A. Frost, who is to succeed Dr. House, has arrived in town. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan and has practiced medicine several years at Sylvania. He will reside in Dr. House's old residence and will occupy the same office over Lilley's Bank.

The Indian camp broke up Tuesday and left for other fields and pastures. Dr. Cardinez labored under a disadvantage during the last two days of his stay. His Kickapoo Indians got mad and left on Friday, and he was compelled to run his "Injun" show on Saturday and Monday without any "Injuns."

Frank Swick left last Tuesday morning for Kalamazoo, where his parents now reside, and where he will probably make his home in the future. We but echo the sentiments of a good many others in expressing our regret that Frank is about to leave us. We would suggest that he return next fall and finish his school course here.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

HOW THE DAY WE CELEBRATE WAS OBSERVED IN TECUMSEH.

A Big Crowd in Attendance, A Fine Parade and Spectacular Fire Works—The Races and the Rain.

The convention had settled down on the minds of our citizens that Tecumseh was bound to have a big blow out on the Fourth, but the reality exceeded all their most sanguine expectations. Tecumseh has rarely, if ever, entertained so large a crowd, since was things. The day was ushered in with a national salute, and before the usual breakfast hour men were at work with hammer and saw, painting and evergreens, decorating the business blocks and sidewalks on Chicago St. By nine o'clock this work had been about completed and even at that early hour there was a good crowd in town. Every train on both railroads added to the numbers. Every highway leading into town was lined with farmer's teams, bringing whole families to witness the celebration. Adrian, Clinton and all the surrounding towns ships contributed their quota, and it seemed as though the northern portion of Lenawee county had entered into a conspiracy to take Tecumseh by storm on that day.

At ten o'clock the different organizations that were to appear in the parade, assembled at the East Branch school, and the procession was soon got in marching order. H. W. Stevens acted as marshal in chief, with Jas. H. Aten, George Marsden and Lonnie Jones as aids. Promptly at half past ten the parade moved west on Chicago street in the following order:

Marshal and Officers of the Day.
Tecumseh City Band.
Bycicle Riders, twelve in number.
Co. C. Mich. State Troops.
Beers Post, G. A. R.
S. P. Hosmer's trade chariot.
Kies' Bros' " "
H. E. Anderson & Son's grocery display.
Jas. Lowry's grocery display.
O. & M. Coal & Mfg. Co., two large wagons.
Globe Mills flour team.
Milwaukee Reaper & Binder.
Marks & Russell's trade chariot.
Wm. McCowan's furniture display.
Satterthwaite Bros' & Boyd's hardware display.
C. A. Slayton's trade display.
The Herald wagon and Mascot.
Mrs. Grundy prepared for a storm.
Pocklington's traction engine was in the parade at first, but dropped out before the finish.

The procession marched west to Oneida street, thence south to Killbuck, west to Union, north to Logan, East to Ottawa, south to Chicago, west on Chicago to Pearl, thence to Logan and Railroad, where it dispersed.

Just before arriving at this point a smart shower arose which scattered the crowd and drove them under shelter. The drizzle continued for about an hour, which effectually put an end to the literary program. These exercises were to have been held at Monument square, and would have been well worth listening to.

Between noon and two o'clock, the Hotels, Lunchrooms and every available place where eatables could be obtained, were crowded.

The weather cleared up finely, although it was fearfully hot, and at two o'clock the races were called on Chicago street. They were witnessed by a large crowd and the awards seemed to give general satisfaction. Below are the names of the lucky prize winners.

Running Race—
Burt Conklin, 1st, prize..... $3 00
Chas. Snell, 2d, " 2 00
Michael Ecker, 3d, " 1 00

Wheelbarrow Race—
Jno. Hastings, 1st, prize..... $3 00
Rob Hastings, 2d, " 2 00
D. Watson, 3d, " 1 00

Sack Race—
Rob Hastings, 1st, prize..... $3 00
C. Litstaf, 2d, " 2 00
B. Austin, 3d, " 1 00

Tug Pulling, between two sides, as follows: C. E. Williamson, Jno Smith, D. Love, Thos. Wilson, Wm. Orr, Chas. Balou, Chet. Brunson, D. Hubbard, Chas. Avery, H. Kolkloesch.

Geo. Williamson, F. McCarry, Sam Gibson, M. Quackenbush, R. Hasting, C. Crossman, A. Howe, C. Albaugh, J. Hasting, John Gibson.

The side led by C. E. Williamson took the prize of $10.00 which was equally divided between the ten men. Albert Hyde and Albert Waring acted as judges in all these contests.

At 4 o'clock a lively blow set in which soon brought a smart shower. The way the crowd scattered for shelter was a pretty good show of itself. The rain was over in thirty minutes, however, and the bycicle races were then called on Bills' race track. Although the track was very heavy from the recent rain, the races proved to be close and exciting. The crowd of spectators too was seriously reduced by the rain, as many supposed the races would be abandoned. Below is the bycicle score:

E. P. Southworth was the successful rider in the one half mile novice race, his contestants being Percy Fitzsimmons and Fred Tiffany. Time 1.50½.

The one-half mile free for all was won by Burt Hedges, of Adrian, in 1:41½. I. H. Finch and Levi Hayden, the other entries, finishing in the order named.

Burt Hedges, Levi Hayden and E. P. Southworth started in the 5-mile race. Hedges winning, with Hayden second. Southworth [illegible] the last lap. Time, 19.4.

In the evening came the display of fireworks. The sky was hidden by hazy clouds, the moon occasionally peeping through. The stand was [illegible] of Brewer's foundry. This display was never equalled in Tecumseh. Rockets, Roman candles and small pieces without number were fired off, and some beautiful and elaborate pieces, worth going many miles to see, the G. A. R. piece alone cost twenty dollars, and there were two others as expensive. This display continued nearly two hours, and was witnessed by an immense crowd that filled railroad street down to Morrison's corner and overflowed into the market square. The dance rooms were kept running until a late hour and it was midnight before the streets began to be deserted.

The occasion will long be remembered as a red letter day in our local annals.

PICKINGS AND GLEANINGS.

The weather was somewhat variegated. Heat, wind and rain were struggling for the mastery most of the day.

Nearly every building on Chicago street was decorated in some manner and some of them very handsomely. The City Band turned out with their full complement of 18 pieces, besides the drum-major. They headed the parade in fine style.

Co. C. had about forty men in the ranks, who kept to the music like veterans.

Beers' post had nearly forty men in the ranks and they added much to the completeness of the parade.

The trade representations were a new feature here and they added very materially to the attractiveness of the parade.

Hosmer's jewely car was elegantly gotten up and was perhaps the nicest one in the line.

Kies Bros' clothing car was elaborate and expensive and literally covered with advice to buyers of clothing.

Marks & Russells rig was no less attractive.

A. E. Anderson and Jas. Lowry made a fine show with delivery teams.

The O. & M. Coal & Mfg. Co. made an attractive show with two large wagons.

The old Globe Mills had a wagon of patent flour on exhibition.

Geo. Pocklington had one of his Milwaukee Binders in line.

Wm. McCowen's furniture display was skillfully arranged and made a fine show.

Satterthwaite Bros' & Boyd had enough hardware on their wagon to furnish a small house.

C. A. Slayton exhibited his varied business in most creditable shape.

The Herald rig was driven by the proprietor in person, with the office devil as a Mascot, perched on the top rung of the caravan.

The horribles failed to materalize, except Mrs. Grundy. The old dame bravely brought up the rear and thus captured the prize as the most elegant horrible.

The ten cent dance at the Opera House was running from early in the day until after midnight.

The rink dance was in full blast all day long and late at night.

Dave Macham's barber shop was transformed into a dance room and was liberally patronized.

Both Hotels were crowded and all the lunch rooms overflowing. The ladies of St. Peters and the M. E. Church made a nice sum, as did also the W. C. T. U. ladies.

Not an accident occured of any kind that we could learn, and a better natured crowd never gathered in Tecumseh.

We did not see a drunken man on the street during the entire day, which shows that people can have a big time on the 4th and yet keep sober.

The fire works in the evening capped the climax of the exercises and wound up the day in a blaze of glory.

Next Sunday, July 10th an excursion train will run from Toledo to Devil's Lake over the C. J. & M. road. The train will pass this station at 10 A. M. standard time. Fare for the round trip—From Britton 50c; Ridgeway 45c; Tecumseh 40c; Tipton 30c; Onsted 20c. Returning the train will leave the lake at 6 P. M.

The blue ribbon trotting meeting at Detroit promises to be a grand affair. The meeting commences July 19th, and will continue up to the 23d inclusive. The purses aggregate $25,000. There will be 13 great trotting and pacing races, besides specials contested for by Harry Wilkes, Oliver K., Jeanoes, and probably Jay Eye See. The entries closed with 188 of the best horses in the country, 145 of these made their second payments, thus insuring the largest field of horses ever started. The 2:35 class closed with 36 nominations and the 2:30 class with 32. The number was so large that they concluded to add $1500 to each class and divide each into two races. The new grand stand, which is considered the finest and most complete in the country, will be completed next week, at a cost of $15000.

DEATH OF SALTER CLEVELAND.

The following notice is taken from the Toledo Blade of June 28th. The deceased was a resident of Tecumseh in an early day, and was a brother of Giles Cleveland of this village.

Salter Cleveland, one of the earliest pioneers and oldest settlers of this county. The services occurred at the Washington St. Congregational church. They were conducted by the pastor, Rev. B. B. White, Rev. Dr. Bacon and Gen. Slocum. Salter Cleveland was a native of Connecticut, aged 78 years. He has been a resident of this city for many years. He was a second cousin of President Cleveland, belonging to one branch of the now famous and numerous family. He was one of the organizers of the First Congregational church, being one of the 33 original members. He came to this city from Tecumseh, Mich., in the early days of Toledo. He purchased the Indiana House, a large hotel on the corner of Summit and Perry streets, where the Erie theater now stands. After the destruction of the hotel by fire he retired from active business life.

The weather signals are flung to the breeze again. We print a brief explanation of the new signals which are now in use:

No. 1, white flag, six feet square, indicates clear or fair weather. No. 2, blue flag, six feet square, indicates rain or snow. No. 3, black, triangular flag, four feet at base and six feet in length, always refers to temperature. When placed above number 1 or 2 it indicates warmer weather; when placed below numbers 1 or 2 it indicates colder weather; when not displayed the indications are that the temperature will remain stationary, or that the change in temperature will not vary five degrees from the temperature of the same hour of the preceeding day. No. 4, white flag, six feet square, with black square in center, indicates the approach of a sudden and decided fall in temperature. This signal is usually ordered at least twenty-four hours in advance of the cold wave. It is displayed only when the temperature reaches, or is expected to reach forty-five degrees. When number 4 is displayed, number 3 is always omitted. When displayed on poles the signals should be arranged to read downward; when displayed from horizontal supports a small streamer should be attached to indicate the point from which the signals are to be read.

THE NEW REPORTER.

He Thought He Had Struck it Rich, but Found He was Taken In.

Last night as a reporter sauntered into the station he saw a man who had been behind the bars, and a large number of whose years have been spent in the State penitentiary writes a Nashville Tenn. correspondent. The fellow was carelessly leaning against the stairway and listlessly looking around, when his eyes fell upon the reporter. He glanced through the corner of his eyes into the billiard hall, where at every table games were going on.

"How came you out?" asked the reporter.

"Hush!" he replied. "Don't let anybody catch on to me. I'm working on a job. Do you see that fellow with the long coat? That's Jack Sharp. I have been out of prison for two months, working with him. We have been robbing young men who were brought to town. I have tracked them down and have got them spotted. I will have the arrest made pretty soon. I don't mind showing you who they are if you won't say anything."

With that he pointed out half a dozen of the billiard players.

"What are they wanted for?"

"For the robbery of a train out West. Those two fellows who look as mild as Simmons livers several years ago committed one of the most daring deeds ever known on the plains. They ditched a train and from an ambush shot the conductor and the engineer and several of the passengers. All on board were nearly scared to death, and when one of the young bandits with his face masked, of course, arose and demanded a surrender it was thought that he had a whole band at his heels and they gave up gladly rather than be killed." Many thousands of dollars were taken and then the two, pretending they were going back to their pals, skipped out. They were hunted everywhere, but without success. While I was a fugitive from justice I met these fellows, who were in the same boat, up in Montreal, Canada, and we got to be pretty friendly. They told me about the whole thing and treated me like a prince with their money. Some time after that I, like a big fool, was caught and sent up. In December I got out of the penitentiary, but was pulled by the police here and put in the work house before I had enjoyed my freedom enough. The other day while coming from working the streets, I saw two young men whom I knew I had seen before. At first I could not place them but finally it dawned upon me who they were. No description was ever given of them because nobody saw their faces, and so of course they were safe. I thought about the matter a while night and have decided that they shall be brought to justice.

"The law shall be vindicated," he belligerently and pugnaciously exclaimed. "I was released from custody, and at once commenced to work on the matter. To-morrow I took my man. Don't see the express agent of my company and

[illegible] appeared at the [illegible] and [illegible] a lamp as if shot [illegible] detective [illegible] and vanished [illegible]

The reporter took a single look at the [illegible] and retired in a philosophic [illegible] "Not a bad-looking [illegible] for a broken-down [illegible] to be taken in and [illegible] with a [illegible] and a [illegible] plenty."

A STRANGE ADVENTURE.

One of the Mad Freaks of Bavaria's Insane King.

Some years ago Sacher Masoch wrote a [illegible] to have been a Polish Count, [illegible] so great an impression upon the education of [illegible] from the confidant [illegible]. When the pupil [illegible] enough to discuss [illegible] upon woman [illegible] the subject [illegible] the book, so that I quote it the story as Sacher Masoch [illegible]. Some time after this book appeared, I received an anonymous [illegible] asking me to make a compact [illegible] ship with the writer, a compact similar to that made by the hero of my novel. My answer was [illegible] as I am a man, there is no danger of a similar rupture." Every line spoke of sincerity [illegible] friendship, and the final phrase was like this, to [illegible] a stricken soul, to lead a life to [illegible] that its ultimate end of suicide." Of course I thought the letter came from a woman and when I received a second asking for an interview and appointing a place in Bavaria as a place of rendezvous with the condition that my eyes should be bandaged, then I was certain that only a woman could write in that manner.
